The doors of twelve of the county's larger schools will throw open their doors Monday morning to the hundreds of students awaiting the new term, according to Luther E. Little, superintendent of education.

These schools are the County High School, Jewison High, Isabella High, Mapleville, Verbena High, Clanton Elementary, Alabama Mills, Lay Dam, Mitchell Dam and the Enterprise Junior High. Colored schools to open Monday are the County Training School and the Clanton Elementary Colored School.

Judge Smith Suggests Means Of Making Figures Match

Says Statement Made Recently By Citizen That Commissioners Received Huge Sum From Government Was Being Misinformed

The following letter, addressed to the editor of the Chilton County News, from Judge J. Lee Smith, is in a measure a reply to a statement published in this newspaper last week regarding sums of money reported to have been turned in to this county for road work:

"Editor, Chilton County News,
August 28, 1937
Clanton, Alabama.

"Dear Sir:

"The writer has noticed with much interest the article written by Mr. C. B. Cox in the Chilton County News, giving his explanation of the financial condition of the road situation of Chilton County. I note that Mr. Cox states that you remember the Government turned over $110,000.00 in 1934 and $159,000.00 in 1935 into this County which was turned over to the Commissioners Court. I do not know about

HOSPITAL TO ASSUME NEW SUPERINTENDENT

Mrs. Henderson To Succeed
Miss Robinson Who Will Do Private Duty

Announcement was made this week to the effect that Mrs. Alma Henderson, of Greenwood, Fla., and formerly of Mountain Creek, Ala., will succeed Miss Grace Robinson, as superintendent of the Central Alabama Hospital here.

Miss Robinson has served as superintendent of the county's only hospital for over twelve years, during which time she has made hundreds of friends and a splendid reputation throughout this section. Her work during the strenuous emergency in 1932 during the tornadoes in this county will be well remembered. Miss Robinson stated to the News that she was moving her residence to Clanton and would be available in the future for private nursing duty.

Mrs. Henderson is well qualified to hold the position as superintendent of the hospital here and is well known in this section.

Mr. C. B. White returned to his home in Montgomery after visiting Mr. and Mrs. M. L. White.

Proof Of Age Of Pupils Entering First Grade To Be Required By Board Of Education

Approximately 500 new pupils will enter the first grades of Chilton County schools this year according to County Superintendent Luther E. Little. This means that 500 boys and girls will begin upon a new stage of their lives; a stage in which they will leave to some extent the constant care they have had at home for the first six years of their lives, and will begin learning to "make their own way," which is such an important part of their education. How very much greater will be their chances of success if they are free from physical defects! A little money invested in a pair of glasses, or in having decayed teeth repaired, or in having tonsils removed, may mean the difference between success and failure in their school life. Many parents realize this and are having necessary

Labor Day

Next Monday is one of the significant holidays of the year. It is the day on which we pay tribute and extend recognition to the men and women who work in our factories, our mines, our forests and our shops for an honest living. It is the day on which we all recognize the place that labor occupies in our present civilization.

Volumes will be written this year as in the past. Orators will intone in glittering terms everything that we have to say. Hence we can do little more than extend our good will to our many friends for whom this day was established, and trust and hope that the event will be the occasion of a rare good time.

We are all laborers, after all, whether our work keeps us busy in overalls before a greasy machine or in a business suit before a typewriter pounding out copy. And we can all understand and sympathize with the hopes and aspirations of the workers and wish them every success within the limits of possibility.

Back To School

The days of summer play are over. Some boys and girls may not like the new routine, but in our observation the vast majority accept school with an eager spirit convinced by their parents that education after all opens the door of opportunity and offers a better and happier way of life for those who take advantage of it.

It is a happy promise for the future to learn that enrollment is high here in the schools of Chilton County and in other similar communities throughout the nation. For thorough education alone can our nation hope to attain its high destiny and bring to all of its citizens the complete and satisfactory life.

There are those, of course, who point the finger of caustic criticism at our present day education. They tell us that students fritter away their time in non-essentials, that they are more interested in football than in studies, that activities and play dominates the thought of the school. They tell us that high school and college students are superficial, that they are not taught to think for themselves, that education is a colossal waste.

No doubt these people can find incidents and conditions to support their arguments, but still we do not agree. It must be realized that America has endured an economic storm of almost equal intensity to that which raged anywhere else in the world. But the American people as a whole have not fallen for any of the strange delusions that disturb the rest of the world, they have retained their fundamental institutions, and they have acted with good judgment in every severe crisis. In explaining this some credit should be given to the American system of universal education.

If the need for education has been pronounced from the time when our Republic was founded, the need is far greater to-day. In spite of our returning prosperity we are facing a period of extreme complexity. Modern society presents a multitude of perplexing problems and situations which can be solved only by a literate and intelligent citizenry.

In spite of all its shortcomings, therefore, we must recognize both the vital service rendered and the great future promise offered by a system which grants to every child the right to a thorough intellectual training.

Incidents in China, Spain and Ethiopia emphasize the fact that a lot of fighting can go on before a war is declared and a peace treaty violated.

Concealed Taxes

The Wisconsin Taxpayers Alliance, an organization devoted to the study of costs and services of government, reports that taxes in the state are now approximately at the 1929 level and more than half of the huge levy for local, county, state and national governments is indirect.

What is true in Wisconsin is true in almost every other state. We are being heavily taxed today, but unfortunately a majority of our citizens are unaware of the size of the tax bill they are forced to meet.

It has long been recognized that the renter pays taxes indirectly when he remits to the landlord; that the motorist pays a substantial levy when he drives up to the gas pump, but other indirect taxes, so skillfully concealed that they can be located only with extreme difficulty, are not so universally recognized.

Few workers ever stop to consider that an excessive tax burden levied against the employer may leave just that much less for payment of labor costs. Few appreciate that excessive taxes against utilities, or industries, or service organizations must either be passed along in fees and prices charged or deducted from the prices paid for materials. Few stockholders of corporations ever stop to realize that many of these corporations pay more in taxes than they do in dividends.

Levying taxes according to ability to pay in a manner that provides a minimum of loss or burden to those least able to pay the bill may be good practice. But levying taxes so that the majority of the people do not realize the extent to which they are being taxed seems to be the modern political method.

Sooner or later the people must be brought to the realization that this practice is dangerous and leads only to government extravagance.

An Object Lesson

News from the orient calls to mind the present humble status of a great nation with a glorious past. China, now one of the backward nations of the modern world, was a center of enlightenment, culture and civilization when the Europe from which our forebears migrated was a semi-barbarous region.

In the fine arts, in architecture, in philosophy, and in government China was a comparatively advanced and enlightened nation a thousand years ago. Marco Polo brought back from his travels descriptions of a highly organized state with great and well governed cities, and though he was considered the greatest liar of his time, later historians have checked his stories and verified their accuracy.

What happened to force so forward and powerful a country as China under the rule of Kublai Kahn to decline into a disorganized nation, unable to cope with its problems; where poverty, mendicancy, and privation almost beggar description?

To this decline many historians and students have devoted great study and research. Some have developed one theory, others another, but most of them agree that part of the trouble lies in the docility of the Chinese character.

People of China, from its earliest days, were easy prey for conquering tribes. The teeming millions struggling to maintain life gave little heed to the type of government under which they were exploited. A strange lack of national spirit and a willingness to tolerate misrule account in a considerable measure for their plight today.

China therefore becomes an excellent example for the enlightenment of those citizens who are so immersed in their own private affairs that they can pay little heed to government. People who pay little attention to national, state or local public issues, who are content to accept any regulation or any form of rule that comes along, who are indifferent toward public affairs are not essentially different from the Chinese.

We all know of such people. They are to be found here in Clanton and in every other community. They are immersed in their own private affairs, and when called upon to assist or take a part in some issue of public concern they demonstrate their indifference while assuming a superior attitude.

It is fortunate that such people constitute a small minority here, otherwise our nation might enter a decline such as China has known for centuries.

One of the things that seems foolish to us is to extend the keys of a city to a distinguished visitor when the town is already wide open.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

A noted professor in one of our leading universities went into the matter of testing out how long the poison will linger in the tooth of a rattlesnake. He had in his laboratory a tooth that had been in Alcohol for thirty years and then had been deposited on a dry shelf for sixteen years longer. The snake had been dead for forty-six years, and yet when this professor punctured an animal with this dry tooth it died of poison in a few hours time. That deadly poison remained in that tooth for these long years and then dealt death out to the rabbit. So habits, good or bad, that have been formed and yet lost sight of for many years, may spring into action at some distant time, to help or to injure us at an important time. We are told that grains of wheat closed in the hand of an Egyptian mummy for three thousand years, were planted and that they came up with the usual haste. Do not feel that you are safe from any habit that has worked its way into the fiber of your life.

Some men in New York were determined to learn the extent of the whiskey habit over the will-power. They erected a testing machine in a room. A whiskey bottle was placed behind a blade that went up and down with such speed that it was impossible for a hand to reach it without being cut off. A man who had the drinking habit was placed in the room. He could see the bottle of liquor and his reason told him that he could not get it without losing his hand. For a few moments he remained in the room and then they opened the door to find that the man had lost his hand in an effort to get the whiskey. When the whiskey habit has seized anyone there is no limit to what they will do to get drunk. Such habits do not seize anyone without cultivation. I read a whiskey advertisement that smacked of the devil's deception. It said "Be moderate drinkers". All you have to do in order to lose your will-power is to form the habit of drink.

Doctors tell us that no disease causes more dread than Cholera, and yet when it fastens upon its patient, he becomes indifferent and wonders at the solicitude of his friends. His tears are dried. He can not weep if he would. His body is cold and clammy like the flesh of a dead person, and still he claims he is very warm and comfortable. He calls for ice water and shows no signs of fear. However, he does not live very long. When a sober, temperate man looks upon the horrors of a drunkard he is very much frightened over the habit of drink, but strange to say when a man forms the habit of drink he loses sight of the fear. Like a man with Cholera, when he has the awful habit of drink he is oblivious to all danger. He vows to those who are concerned about him that he is quite all right, and that there's no need for concern. If a drinking man could see himself as others see him, he would drink no more.

Two neighbors in Denver, Colorado had a long standing grudge between them. One day they drove out of their garages at the same time and as they backed their cars toward the street side by side, one of them cursed the other one and dared him to touch his car. No sooner than the dare was made he smashed his car into the other one. He smashed his car into the other one. They pulled up and backed into each other at terrific speed. The battle was on. They decided to fight it out with their cars. Terrorized citizens heard the crashes and looked out their windows to see two men fighting a duel with their cars. They were backing off and running at each other like enraged bulls. When the police were called, they found that they were too late to save the cars, but they were able to carry away two bleeding men. If we nourish grudges and hatred against anyone and then decide to settle them by the way we feel when we are under that spell, cars, men, houses or anything else will go to pieces. It is the best to always do good to those who despitely use us.

Doubtless you have read that old fable of a certain weaver who was so skillful in weaving that he learned to weave a thread that was invisible to the human eye. When his enemies molested him he would weave his net and they would walk into it because they could not see the threads. One day this weaver was passing his workshop and not thinking, he walked into his own net and was bound securely. Then his enemies came and found him bound in his own threads and they took his life. I know a man who set a gun to kill a thief who was stealing his corn, and he walked right into his own trap and was shot dead at his crib door. Some folks think that they are mighty keen in their ways and means of deception, but just as sure as there is a God in the heavens, just so sure is this verse, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap".

A large man with all of the appearance of the typical bully was beating up a much smaller man than himself. Cries for help attracted a passer-by who rushed in and knocked out the large man with a single well-directed blow.

"Now look here, sir," said the small man after he had regained his feet, "I appreciate what you have just done for me, and I want you to take half this money which I just lifted from this boy."

HEY SING THE OLD SONGS
THE tune of "O, Susanna!" written by Stephen Foster many ago, supporters of Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas sang him into Republican nomination at Cleveland and this banjo-tinkling which cheered westward-bound emigrants in the golden days of '49, is being used to the eastward-bound (to the House, they believe) Republican voters in the campaign "Days '49." Will it drown out the strains of "Happy Days Here Again"? November 3 answer that!
At the least of the interest in renewed singing of "O, Susanna!" is the few instances in which old familiar song is revived for campaign purposes. Setting "campaign verses" to a familiar tune using it for political purposes has always been a common practice as far back as 1840 the Whigs a song in praise of Harrison the tune of "Auld Lang Syne."
When the Free Soil party elected Martin Van Buren, new verses were written and sung to the tune of "Old Dan Tucker." The familiar "Yankee Doodle," "Auld Lang Syne," "The Frog He Went a-Wooing Go" and "The Town Races" were employed in the musical setting for songs in praise of Fremont in 1856.
Considering the fact that a Span-American War hero was a vice presidential candidate in 1900 it is only natural that "There'll Be No Time in the Old Town Tonight" should become a Republican campaign song. But it wasn't until that an old song was revived in its original form in support of a presidential candidate.
That year "The Sidewalks of New York," written in 1894 by James E. Lawlor and James W. Lee, was played by a band at San Francisco Democratic convention when Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York was introduced and to a great ovation. It was his musical trademark when he became Candidate Smith in 1924 and once again in 1928. Will the revival of "O, Susanna!" bring back to Gov. Alf Landon than revival of "Sidewalks of New York" did to Gov. Al Smith?

RA FAMILIES PURCHASE 2,656 PRESSURE COOKERS

Rural rehabilitation families in Alabama have this year purchased 2,656 pressure cookers for conserving foods for winter use, reports Julian Brown, state director, Resettlement Administration.

"These families have been busy for several weeks with the assistance of the home and farm supervision and agents filling cans and jars with food for winter consumption," he says.

All Alabama rehabilitation families are being required to produce and conserve sufficient food and feed crops to meet the needs of the home and farm.

Brief Farm News

So long as the land continues to wash away, opportunity for young Americans is being lost with it.

Good neighbors fight erosion. They do not let silt from their farms destroy the other fellow's fields farther downstream.

Pruning forest trees in a farm woodland will clear off the dead branches and allow the trees to grow clear and clean and relatively free from knots.

Game birds and animals are finding a new friend these days in the Soil Conservation Service. The reason for this new friendship is because Service technicians see to it that some of the vegetation used to control soil erosion also provides food and cover for wildlife.

CCC CAMP NEWS

It takes more than a few strands of rusty barbed wire stretched around a worn-out field to make a pasture, according to James H. Wood, Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service area near Clanton.

Many of the old pastures in the area are severely eroded, Mr. Wood says, largely because the land was severely eroded before it was put in pasture.

When a good sod is established it controls erosion and provides an almost immediate return in low cost feed.

In establishing new pastures on eroded land, contour furrows help to control erosion and also conserve moisture which aids in getting a good sod established. Plowing in small gullies before constructing the furrows is usually recommended.

Large gullies sometimes require the diverting of water that flows into them before they can be established by vegetative growth. Small galled spots can be revegetated more readily by broadcasting manure over them or mulching these areas.

After contour furrows have been constructed the next step in providing a good sod is to seed to a good pasture mixture the disturbed area and other portions of the pasture where vegetation is insufficient.

County Agent, J. W. Fant or officials of the Soil Conservation Service will be glad to furnish information on contour furrowing and seeding pastures to control erosion and provide a maximum amount of grazing during the year.

FOUR FROM CHILTON AT LIVINGSTON COLLEGE

Livingston, Ala.—Four students represent Chilton county at the summer session of Livingston State Teachers College, according to G. N. Sisk, registrar of the college. One of these will be graduated from the two year normal course at the summer commencement, August 20. A total of ninety-four students will be graduated at the summer commencement, seventy-six of which will receive normal diplomas, and eighteen will receive the B. S. degree. Commencement exercises will be held at 11:00 o'clock Friday morning, August 20. A special feature of the graduation will be music by the college glee club and orchestra under the direction of Mrs. L. I. McGriff, head of the music department.

Students from Chilton County are: Mildred Durbin, Tina Hyman, Herman LeCroy, and Mrs. Thomasine D. LeCroy. Mrs. LeCroy will receive a normal diploma.

Mrs. Charlotte Cooper traveled from Chilton to London to get advice from a lawyer regarding a divorce suit.

Mrs. Frances Ripley of Chicago testified in her divorce suit that her husband had the habit of sticking her with pins.

Mrs. James Hirsch of St. Paul had her husband arrested because he struck her for talking when he was listening to the radio.

Goode Asks Gin Operators Not To Handle Wet Cotton

R. J. Goode, Commissioner of agriculture, in a notice mailed yesterday to all ginners in Alabama, has recommended that they do not gin any wet cotton in view of the heavy loss incident to such a practice in the quality of both lint and seed, and also that they advise farmers not to pick their cotton until it is dry. This recommendation is concurred in, it is stated, by Director P. O. Davis, of the Extension Service at Auburn.

It is further recommended that ginners advise their customers to let cotton dry in the field before picking it, as it will dry more quickly on the stalk than anywhere else. The Extension Service, it was learned, has instructed county agents to warn farmers against picking and ginning wet cotton. The text of Commissioner Goode's notice to ginners, follows:

"On account of the continuous rains during the past few days, it seems desirable to call your attention to the great loss which will occur in the ginning of wet seed cotton, both to the quality of the lint and the seed."

"We have discussed the matter with P. O. Davis, director of the Extension Service, and it seems desirable to recommend to you that you not only do not gin any wet cotton, but that you advise all of the farmers in your territory to refrain from picking cotton until it is dry."

"Cotton will dry quicker on the stalk than any other place, and you would be doing your customers a favor to suggest to them that they let the cotton dry in the field before picking. Also, suggest to them that they keep cotton which has been picked before the rains separate from that which has been damaged by the rains."

"It is impossible to gin wet cotton without damaging the lint, and the quality of the seed is also greatly impaired. You could hardly do a greater service at the present time to your customers than to suggest gathering their cotton dry and ginning it dry."

Miss Elsie McGlone of York, Eng., complained of the attentions of Cyril Goodwin, a judge ordered him to keep a mile away from her home.

Alex Baker of Norwich, England, confessed to stealing a bicycle, but said he did it to escape a widow who was courting him.

UNION GROVE CHURCH

Friday, September 3, 1937. This is your chance to hear Brother B. Cambren of Bessemer, Ala. Cambren is one of Alabama's living exponents of the Bible. He lives in the country rarely ever has opportunity to hear men of his caliber. His sermon-subject will be "What the Bible Believes."

We have promise of quartet violinist from Bessemer. We invite everybody to come.

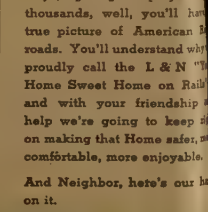

FOLKS call me "Old Reliable" — guess that's because I've been on the job serving South so long—eighty-two years in fact.

We have so much in common, Neighbor, I'd like to get acquainted with you, but 5,000 miles of road spread 13 states and millions of dollars worth of equipment to look after—and it seems hard to find time to visit with all our friends.

But here's what I really want to say. The biggest job we have is home-making. You know, for the care, protection and happiness of your family and community. Ours, for the comfort and pleasure of thousands of families using our railroad—and the dependable moving of everyday commodities. We have much the same problems; food to buy, nitrate to replace, taxes to pay, civic duties to perform.

So, if you just think of the L&N as the "Friendly Railroad," as the home owner, like yourself, a respectable, useful citizen who nearly a century has had a hand in building towns and cities, industries, helping support schools and churches and ways, giving employment to thousands, well, you'll have the true picture of American Railroads. You'll understand why we proudly call the L&N "The Home Sweet Home on Rails" and with your friendship help we're going to keep it on making that Home safer, more comfortable, more enjoyable.

And Neighbor, here's our best on it.

NOTICE TO FARMERS

We solicit the patronage of all the Farmers of the surrounding territory.

We offer you the benefits of a newly installed gin, which assures you a good sample from your cotton—the better the sample the better the price.

We promise you prompt truck service in hauling your seed cotton to our gin, and from the gin to the warehouse, if you desire.

We will pay you the highest possible price for your cotton, and for your cotton seed.

We are in position to give you prompt and efficient service in every respect.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY STUDIES FROM "OUT OF AFRICA"

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church had its first lesson from the book "Out of Africa," by Emory Ross, in the Church parlor Monday afternoon.

After a song and prayer the introduction to the book was given by Mrs. Truett. Mrs. Tom Searcy presented the geography of Africa. She illustrated her talk by a colored map of Africa, which showed the countries who owned Africa. This map was a work of art drawn by Miss Mary Newell. Mrs. Headley told of the life of Emory Ross. Mrs. DeLoach has charge of the scrap book. In this book are to be posted pictures and articles about Africa and the negro, clipped from magazines and newspapers.

One of the fine points brought out in the lesson was that the negro has taken on civilization in the fifty-nine years that the Congo has been opened that ordinarily takes a nation a thousand years. Opinion tests were checked by all the members. These were typed by Miss Polly Folk. Mrs. L. J. Stewart read some scripture references about Ethiopia, taken from the 58th chapter of Isaiah.

The next session of the class will meet Monday afternoon, September 13, in the church parlor at 3:30. If you haven't joined this class, will you come? Come if you can only visit.

Mrs. G. T. Duke and children of Selma were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Grady Heflin.

Red Coral Always Prized

It is red coral that is and always has been prized, not solely for jewelry and buttons, but as a charm to bring safety, health and secrets not revealed to the ordinary person. As ancient Gauls rushed headlong into battle, they trusted their safety to their swords, strength and the "magic" coral imbedded in their shields or helmets. Many Italians and Indians regard coral as protection against the "evil eye." The world's red coral comes from the reefs off the Mediterranean coast of Africa, says the Washington Post, and is obtained chiefly by Italians.

AGRICULTURAL EXHIBITS AT STATE FAIR TO BE IMPORTANT

Larger Quarters To Be Arranged For All State

Counties

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 2—Agricultural and live stock features of the Alabama State Fair, September 27-October 2, will be better this year than ever before, states Manager P. T. Strieder. Agricultural and live stock exhibits by counties and by individuals already exceed last year, and the Fair is yet four weeks away. Additional entries are being booked every day.

County Agricultural Exhibits and the man in charge to date include: Jefferson County: E. H. Belcher.

Blount; J. C. Campbell, Rt. 1, Blount Springs.

Calhoun County; R. J. Pirkle, Alexander.

Butler County; R. O. Cox, Rt. 2, Greenville.

Chilton County; Clifford Manning Maplesville.

St. Clair—Walker County; Manley Creel, Rt. 2, Empire.

Cullman County; H. W. Powe, Rt. 2, Cullman.

Madison County; Hugh Ballew, Rt. 1, New Market.

Choctaw County; Mrs. George W. Allen, Yantley.

Shelby County; M. Elizabeth Nolen, Columbiana.

Morgan County; F. E. Martin, Danville.

Individual Farm Exhibits already entered for the Fair include the following to date:

Geo. W. Allen, Yentley, Ala.

R. E. Powe, Rt. 2, Cullman, Ala.

F. E. Martin, Danville, Ala.

J. E. Campbell, Rt. 1, Blount Springs, Ala.

James D. Ballew, Rt. 1, New Market, Ala.

Manager Strieder says the Poultry and Water Fowl Show will be the biggest thing of its kind ever held in Alabama. He is expecting approximately 3,000 birds. An addition to the Poultry Show building is now being made which will enlarge its capacity by 20 per cent. The Water Fowl exhibit at the Alabama State Fair last year was the largest held in the United States and it is expected it will be even bigger this year.

F. W. Burns, in charge of the Husbandry at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala., is in charge of the dairy cattle exhibits and asks the fair management to exhibit the Fair Dairy Barn.

The grand champion calf in the Grand Exhibited by a member of the Future Farmers club of Alabama, the Alabama State Fair, a free trip, valued at $100, to the National Dairy Show to be held in Columbus, O., Oct. 9-16, or to the National Live Stock Show to be held in Chicago, November 27-December 1.

For the grand champion calf in the Beef Cattle breeds, exhibited by a member of the same club, will so given a trip valued at $100 to the International Live Stock Show at Chicago.

R. S. Sugg, extension department of Animal Husbandry at Auburn, in charge of the Beef Breeds Show.

Entertainment features of the Alabama State Fair this year will include some of the most beautiful and thrilling acts ever seen in the South. Frakes will crash an airplane into the house in front of the grandstand.

The Thrill Day, Thursday, September 27, will perform on a tight wire 40 feet off the ground and without net underneath to catch them if they fall.

The world-renowned Royal American Shows and Rides will operate a long midway. There will be a big and nightly show in front of the grandstand that will include 16 different acts. One of these is known as the Passing Parade, a musical and dancing extravaganza that critics in New York have called one of the most beautiful girl revues that has ever been staged. Nightly there will be an extensive fireworks display. Tuesday and Saturday there will be world championship automobile races.

Other features will include a Ho Show, Women's Department, Educational Exhibits, industrial and commercial exhibits, state and federal government exhibits. Flower Show, an Hawaiian orchestra and Henderson's famous Brass Band.

"He is a great druggist," said one "He is," admitted the other, "don't you think he makes his salad a little too salty?"

County Council of Home Demonstration Clubs Meeting For Years 1937-38

County Council of Home Demonstration Clubs met at the City Hall
August 27, 1937, at 1:30 o'clock.

Meeting was called to order by County Council President, Mrs.
Phalin. A song "Alabama" followed by reading of minutes of last meeting by the Secretary, Miss Lena Report was given by the Treasurer, Charles Howard.

Interesting report was given by Mrs. C.K. Christiansen on her trip to attend Farmer's Week. She was a representative of the County Council of Home Demonstration Clubs of Chilton County.

Miss Grace, Chilton County Home Agent, made a talk on "Making The Best of Our Opportunities."

An open discussion was held on the County and State Fair.

Mr. Clifford Manning talked on "How To Arrange Exhibits At The Fair."

All members voted for Mr. Manning to help them at the Fair. Volunteers who offered their services during the fair were as follows:

Mrs. C.K. Christiansen, Clanton, Rte. 2;
Mrs. F.M. Jones, Clanton Rte. 2;
Mrs. E.J. Driver, Clanton Rte. 2; Mrs.
J.D. Williams, Clanton Rte. 3; Mrs. S.

E. Jones, Clanton Rte. 3; Mrs. J.M.
Roper, Clanton Rte. 3.

A move was made and seconded that the Council Club women help with the County Fair at Clanton.

The Club voted to appoint a Nominating Committee and to accept their proposed list of County Council officers.
This Committee was appointed as follows:

Miss Lena Downs, Mrs. Horace Pop-well, Mrs. W.B. Strock.

The Club voted to have Year Books made for County Council and the following committee was appointed for same.

Mrs. J.M. Roper, Clanton, Rte. 4;
Mrs. T.J. Littlejohn, Clanton Rte. 4.

Mrs. Maggie Wilson, Clanton, Rte. 5;
The new County Council officers nominated and accepted are as follows:

Mrs. C.K. Christiansen, president Clanton Rte. 4.

Mrs. J.D. Williams, 1st vice-president, Clanton Rte. 3.

Mrs. J.D. Goddard, 2nd vice-president, Thorshy, Ala.

Mrs. J.M. Jones, Secretary, Clanton,
Rte. 2.

Mrs. Olive Welch, Treasurer, Clanton, Ala.

Mrs. E.H. Freeman, Farm Bureau
Chairman, Verbena, Ala.

Mrs. H.E. Virgin, Scholarship Chairman, Calera, Ala., Rte. 1.

Mrs. Stanley Kennedy, Citizenship
Chairman, Clanton, Ala., Rte. 1.

Social Committee:
Mrs. Horace Popwell, Clanton, Ala.;
Mrs. Earle Thomas, Clanton, Ala.;

Miss Lena Downs, Clanton, Rte. 2;
Mrs. Charlie Cox, Clanton, Rte. 5; Mrs.
Olive Welch, Clanton, Ala.

There being no other business the meeting adjourned.

SHILOH SINGING HELD

A small crowd met at this place last Sunday afternoon and organized a singing society. Although the crowd was small we had a good singing and elected the following officers:

Chairman, Vester Bice; Vice-Chairman, Carlos Owen; Secretary, Eloise Keen; Chaplain, J. I. Bice.

The directors for the afternoon were Prof. Audie Brown, O. L. DeVaughn, Willie Nell Owen, Gladys Popwell, Carlos Owen, Helen Durbin, Minnie Nelson, Evelyn Olsen and Louise Keen.

The pianists were Miss Gladys Pop-well and Mrs. Minnie Nelson.

The Sunday afternoon for the regular singing will be announced later.
Everybody watch for the announcement and come to the singing.

Because her husband sprayed her with hok disinfectant, Mrs. Ann Bennet of St. Louis got a divorce.

"Comical Country Cousins" At Isabella

"The Comical Country Cousins" will be given at Isabella High School on Friday night, September 3, at 7:30.
They are the "comical" cousins out of captivity. It's a scream, folks, and if you think you need a tonic see this play or if you're feeling O.K., you should see it just the same.

It's gonna be "bargain" night; more entertainment for ten and twenty cents than ever offered before. The side-splitting play plus the latest in song hits, readings and children performance, and just listen, girls: there will be a beautiful quilt for the prettiest girl there.

This entertainment is sponsored by the Y.W.A. girls and the proceeds will go to the building fund of the church.

IRVIN LANDE HAS PROM PARTY AT HIS HOME HERE

Irvin Lande recently had a "prom party." Delicious refreshments were served after the five-minute proms and the many games.

The color scheme was pink and green, extensively carried out on the beautiful covered refreshment table.

Guests were as follows:
Joan Atkinson, Jean Waite, Essie
White, Katherine Bell, Joe Esco, Raymond Popwell, Joe F. Higgins, Guy Higgins, II, James D. Heflin, Charles Mims and a visitor from Montgomery, Arthur Dees, II.

Other guests were invited but were unable to attend.
The reception room was gaily decorated with brilliant roses. Prizes were won by Miss Joan Atkinson and James Duke Heflin.

A fine time was had by all.

CCC TENNIS TOURNAMENT

The tennis tournament at the CCC Camp starts Monday, August 30, and will continue thru the week. Doubles will begin Monday and singles Tuesday. Youth will be pitted against experience and the winners will be champs of the CCC Camp. The court at the Camp is in good shape and competition is expected to be fierce. Players entered are: James H. Wood, Ras-mond C. Sammon, Willie G. Teal, Mitchell Jones, William J. Gray, John R.
Mobbey, Hugh D. Carmichael, William C. Young, Henry T. Stanley, Willie Roe, Tamplin, Bill Jones, Woodfin
Smitherman, John R. Brown, Thomas A. Hayes, T.H. Walker and Lt. Brown.

Lieutenant Brown, a newcomer, is expected to give some of the old timers plenty of trouble. James H. Wood and Rasmond Sammons are polishing off their game and expect to be in rare form. Horton Walker and W.R. Tamplin are coveting the title too. Woodfin Smitherman can be expected to attempt to carry the title to Auburn if possible. All the other entries are real tennis players and it is a toss up for the championship of Co. 34!

THIRTY VACANCIES IN MARINES TO BE FILLED

Thirty vacancies for service in the United States Marine Corps will be filled from this district during September, it is announced by Major J.M.
Tildsley, District Marine Corps Recruiting Officer, with headquarters at Macon, Ga.

Young men in this vicinity desiring information concerning enlistment in the ranks of the "Sea Soldiers" may

FARMERS TAKE ADVANTAGE OF AGRICULTURAL PROGRAM

6,557,000 Acres In Alabama Are Under National Program

Anniston, Ala.—The 127,000 Alabama farmers who made application for payment under the 1936 Agricultural Conservation Program diverted 987,000 acres from soil-depleting uses and employed soil-building practices on 1,747,427 acres, Walter L. Randolph, in charge of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration program in Alabama, says. The total cropland in Alabama covered by application for payment was 6,557,000 acres.

The payments which Alabama farmers will receive under the 1936 Agricultural Conservation Program will total approximately $10,190,801.69, a report just issued by the AAA shows. Of this amount, payments to farmers, excluding country expenses, through June 30 in this State, amounted to $10,097,843.53. Most of the remainder will be paid by the end of August, Mr. Randolph says.

The annual report of the AAA, recently released, showed that in the 9 states of the Southern Region, of which Alabama is one, the applications for payments covered about 69,775,000 acres of cropland.

Farmers in these states diverted about 10,915,000 acres from soil-depleting crops to soil-conserving crops. Total acreage on which soil-conserving crops was seeded, or on which other soil-building practices were carried out was 14,888,000 acres. Approximately 864,000 farmers in the region took part in the program.

For the country as a whole, payments to farmers, including county expenses totaled $379,814,149.00 for the 1936 program. State office expenses for the fiscal year for all states totaled $11,076,304.00 while State and county expenses, prior to July 1, 1936, totaled $4,383,700.00. Expenses for administration in Washington, for the year through July 30, 1937, totaled $4,446,950.00.

Alabama farmers can control oat smut at a very small cost by treating the seed oats with formaldehyde solution.

"When seed oats are treated properly with formaldehyde solution practically all smut organisms are killed," says J. C. Lowery, agronomist of the Alabama Extension Service, in giving the following directions for treating oats:

1. Buy a one-quart atomizer-type sprayer from a drug store or hardware store.
2. Get from a drug store one pint of formaldehyde (40 per cent) solution for each 50 bushels of seed to be treated.
3. Fill oats to be treated on a clean floor, canvas, or in a tight wagon bed.
4. Pour formaldehyde from the bottle into the sprayer; fill the bottle with water and pour it into the sprayer.
5. While the oats are being shoveled from one pile to another give one good squirt of the solution to each shovel full of oats as they are moved.
6. Round up the treated pile of oats and cover with bags which have been sprayed inside and out with the solution in order that the formaldehyde gas may be retained and penetrate the entire pile.

CCC News

After cover crops planted early in the fall, the purpose of protecting the soil against erosion and increasing the fertility of the land, according to James H. Wood, Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service near Clanton, Alabama, planting is especially important at the standpoint of erosion control, a good ground cover should be established during the fall growing season in order to provide protection against rains of winter and early spring. Mr. Wood pointed out that cover crops which have made good progress before winter sets in will also be more material to be turned under in green manure before spring crops are planted. This will increase the fertility and humus content of the soil and enable it to absorb more water, thus reducing the erosion. A good growth of winter leaved plants depends on a number of factors including proper inoculation, use of phosphate fertilizer, and proper soil culture conditions at the time of planting. The county agent or official of the Soil Conservation Service will be glad to give seeding information. The Chilton County area farmers planning to devote extensive acreage to vetch and Austrian winter peas should have protection for the land during the season when the land is usually covered with vegetation, Mr. Wood said.

Monthly Discomfort

Many women, who formerly suffered from a weak, run-down condition as a result of assimilation of food, say they benefited by taking CAR- a special medicine for women. They found it helped increase the appetite and improve digestion, thereby giving them more strength in their food.

Naturally there is less discomfort at monthly periods when the system has been strengthened and the various organs restored and regulated. Praised by thousands of women, it is well worth trying. If you are not benefited, consult a doctor.

4-H CALF CLUB BOYS HOLD MEETING HERE SATURDAY

Plans For Forthcoming Cattle Show On September 18 Are Discussed At Interesting Meeting In Clanton

The 4-H Calf club boys met at the Vocational Agricultural Building at the Chilton County High School Saturday August 22, at 2:00 o'clock. Plans for the local Cattle Show which is to be held September 18, were discussed by all members present. All members who haven't had their calves registered were requested to do so by Mr. Ivry, before the fair. A new type of insurance was explained for those wanting to insure their stock before carrying it to Birmingham. Any club member interested should see Mr. Ivry or Mr. Joe Mims. The Chilton County Calf Club will have much more competition at the State Fair this year as more counties are entering. Let's all take good care of our calves by keeping them blanketed, brushed and trained by the time of the fair. —A Club Member, Ned Dennis.

Judges To Select Outstanding City

Progress Will Be Measured In Terms Of Beneficial Effect Of Projects In League's Contest

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 2.—Cities that have attained the most beneficial civic improvements and services by wise and economical cooperation with the Federal Works Program will be chosen by a committee of judges in Montgomery on Sept. 11, Ed E. Reid, executive secretary of the Alabama League of Municipalities has announced.

The League is sponsoring the "City Progress" contest in which the outstanding town in each of three population groups will be chosen, the judges giving full consideration to the population of the town and amount of relief labor available. They will also consider the resourcefulness and good management displayed by officials of the towns in making the best use of the opportunities for civic improvement afforded by the Works Program. From the group winners will be chosen one city for the grand award for the state.

Nine cities and towns had entered the contest on August 30 and a number of others were expected to enter before the close of the contest on September 8, Secretary Reid said.

In the above 25,000 group, the cities of Mobile and Montgomery are competing. Birmingham had not announced her entry on Aug. 30.

Gadsden and Bessemer have enrolled for competition in the 10,000 to 25,000 class.

In the less than 10,000 class, Athens, Flomaton, Red Level, Jasper and Georgiana have enrolled. The entry of Greenville and several other towns in this group was expected.

The Committee of Judges is composed of Dr. L. N. Duncan, president of Alabama Polytechnic Institute; Mrs. J. U. Reeves, Mobile, president of the Alabama Federation of Women's Clubs; Dean Lee Biggood, University of Alabama; Mrs. R. B. Showalter, Auburn, president of the Alabama Congress of Parents and Teachers; Grover C. Hall, editor of the "Montgomery Advertiser"; Miss Lorine Barnes, president of the Alabama Education Association, and Dr. B. F. Austin, State Commander of the American Legion.

Must Depend Upon This Year's Seed

The seed crop harvested this year must be depended upon to a greater extent than would ordinarily be the case in providing grass and legume seed needed for the 1938 program, says J. W. Fant, county agent, because of the small carry-over and the fact that the Agricultural Conservation Program has greatly increased the demand for seed of legumes, grasses, and green-manuring crops. Surveys made of the seed situation show that demand for seed of soil-conserving crops in 1937 and the 1938 drought, reduced the commercial reserves of seed of domestic clover, alfalfa, sweet clover, lespedeza, soybeans, cowpeas, velvet beans, and of grass seed in general, to much lower levels than normally prevail. In general, seed that has been grown locally for a period of years is likely to be well adapted, and if properly harvested, stored, and cleaned, may be expected to give excellent results, according to County Agent J. W. Fant.

HEADGEAR

"If you lose your standards, rally to my white plume!" cried Henry of Navarre before the Battle of Ivry and so the helmet of Navarre with its snowy decoration became the sign and symbol of a cause which won and made him king of France.
In American politics, too, voters have rallied behind candidates whose headgear or some other bit of apparel have been characteristic of the man. In the days of Andrew Jackson, loyal Democrats brandished hickory canes in imitation of the one which "Old Hickory" carried. In 1840 the Whigs clapped coonskin caps on their heads and went out to sing and cheer "Old Tippecanoe," the Indiana frontiersman, into the White House.
On the streets of New York the white beaver hat worn by Horace Greeley, editor of the Tribune, was a familiar sight. But perhaps even in those days the "peepul" were suspicious of a "high hat" candidate, so Greeley's supporters, wearing "white plugs," failed to elect him. Ulysses S. Grant once worked in a tannery, therefore parades in his honor were marked by men wearing shaggy and obviously untanned fur coats and bearing signs which declared "Bring on the enemy and we'll tan his hide."
In the Cleveland campaign of 1888 his running mate was Senator Thurman, the last member of the upper house to use snuff. After doing so he would sweep a red bandanna handkerchief out of his pocket with a grand gesture. So Democrats that year had whole suits made of bandannas and women wore bandanna dresses.
Another vice-presidential candidate who furnished a striking headgear symbol for his party was Theodore Roosevelt. Thousands wore Rough Rider hats in the campaign of 1900 and it was still a potent emblem in 1904 when T. R. was candidate for President.
But another quarter of a century was to elapse before a bit of headgear would be a feature of the campaign. In 1928 Alfred E. Smith made the brown derby famous from one end of the land to the other but it became a symbol of defeat instead of victory.

Letters To The Editor

DR GRAGG URGES FULL COOPERATION FOR FAIR

"Well, we are going to have it. Yes, sir, we are going to have a county fair right here in Clanton. Yes, it is going to be a real agricultural fair."

"Of course, it might have been larger, had some better agricultural and livestock exhibits, etc., if we had settled the matter the first of the year like I tried to get it done, and given our farmers a chance to do their best all the year in preparing and getting ready to show their 'stuff' when the time came."

"But that is water over the dam, and should not be mentioned."

"Let everybody put a shoulder to the wheel, push forward, make a determined effort, and we will carry it over with a roaring success."

"Now, folks; farmers, their wives, sons and daughters, get busy at once, right now; not tomorrow, and let's put it over. This will be a tryout; then we can start right next time with a full year ahead to do the thing in grand style and in a big way; but right now we have the present fair on our hands and have only a short time to go."

"The Kiwanis Club is sponsoring this for the benefit of our farmers and business men, and you know the Kiwanians do things. But why let them do it alone? It is for the benefit of all. Let's all get in and help put it over."

ADDRESS WITH NEW ON EDITORIAL

Verhena, Alabama.

August 28, 1937.

Editor, Chilton County News.

Dear Sir:

"I want to congratulate you on your splendid Editorial in regard to the roads of our County, and the controversy between our Commissioners, Mr. Cox, and the Road Supervisor. I agree with you that something should be done. I feel that our Commissioners have done their very best to take care of the County affairs and perform the duties of the office which they were elected to. When the Commissioners had charge of the roads, our roads were worked and they were in keeping with the progress of our County, but since Mr. Cox passed a local act creating the office of a road supervisor, our roads have been neglected, and our people as a whole are dissatisfied."

"I beg to differ with Mr. Cox on the condition of our roads. He states that 80 per cent or 85 per cent of the roads are in average condition. To be conservative, I believe I have been over 50 or 60 per cent of the roads, and I find the roads which I have been over absolutely the reverse of what Mr. Cox says."

"I voted for Commissioners and the Probate Judge, and I am proud of it. I also voted for Mr. Cox to represent us in the Legislature. I am sure if Mr. Cox had been satisfied with the office he was elected to and allowed the Commissioners to look after their duties, our people would have been well pleased with the present administration."

"Yours very truly,
W. Y. KEEL."

When arrested for hitting his wife with a hoe, Julio Rodriguez, a California farmer, denied the charge, declaring that he used a shovel.

George Drexel of Wisconsin continues to work as a farm hand at $15 a month, although he has fallen heir to an estate worth several million dollars.

That's What I Think

OOO

Saul M. Goldstein

In a speech made at a recent Kiwanis meeting with the farmers of Enterprise community, County Agent Fant made the statement that, of Chilton County's population, 19,000 might be classified as farm people and 5,000 as city or town people. Clanton's population alone has been estimated at between 3,500 and 4,000.

Prior to the advent of the Alabama Mills plant, Clanton existed mainly as a trading center for the 19,000 farm folk; even today its chief function is to serve this great mass of the county's population. Doctor, lawyer, merchant, banker, all work for these 19,000 and are dependent upon them for a livelihood. True, they earn that livelihood by rendering services worthy of their fees, but that does not obviate the fact that those fees must come, in the main, from the 19,000.

On any Saturday, Clanton changes from its week-day appearance of the average small town of three to four thousand people to a teeming metropolis whose streets are lined with busy, shopping people—the great bulk of those 19,000 coming to town. They come to town from farms as near as half a mile distant, and as far as twelve to twenty miles away.

The average doctor, lawyer, merchant, banker, etc., in Clanton, lives within four to six city blocks from his office or place of business. Yet these same town people will come to town early Saturday morning in their automobiles and take the best parking spaces, lining the main business streets of Clanton with their cars while their patrons, the farmers who drive for miles and miles to contribute to the growth of Clanton, are forced to seek parking places blocks away from the main streets and walk to do their shopping.

It is not a purposeful discourtesy that prompts townspeople who could walk to work to take up the best parking spaces; it is merely thoughtlessness. Nevertheless it discommodates the farm people, and a change of custom on the part of the townspeople would be greatly appreciated by them.

I do not take credit for this thought. It was called to my attention by one who prefers to be known simply as "absent-minded lawyer of Clanton who has not realized his own discourtesy until now."

Certainly it is not much to ask of Clanton residents that on Saturday they leave their cars at home and walk to and from town, giving the needed parking space to our farmer neighbors to whom it would mean so much; and who, incidentally, are directly or indirectly responsible for Clanton people being able to own cars to park in city streets.

At least, that's what I think.

An Oklahoma man advertised as follows: "Found, lady's purse in my car. If the owner will explain to my wife that I had nothing to do with it, I will pay for this ad."

Small American flags missing from veteran's graves at Port Huron, Mich. were found to have been used by chipmunks to line their nests.

BAD CREDIT IS A THIEF IN THE NIGHT

A thief enters your house at night and robs you of money and valuables. You pay added taxes for police protection to protect your home. A man refuses to pay his bills; your merchant must penalize you to make up his deficit.

Pay Your Obligations Promptly

It is to the interest of everyone of you who pays his bill promptly to get behind this campaign. Why should you be penalized and have to pay higher prices because your neighbor will not pay his just and honest obligations.

Good Credit is the Backbone of Success

If your merchant has been considerate enough to extend your credit then it is your duty to see that he is paid. Only he who is lacking a sense of moral obligation will fail to see his creditor and make a satisfactory arrangement at once.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Clanton Methodist Church News

The truth of the matter is that we had a really good Sunday school last Sunday. The absentees have our sympathy and hope that there will be no absentees next Sunday from any department. Realization of that wish may be improbable, but it really is not impossible, is it? How about it, member?

We want to mention the Men's Bible Class again in complimentary terms because their class is going along nicely. Just keep up the good work, men, and you will have the rest of the classes sitting up and taking notice.

The Sunday school offering last Sunday went to the orphanage. The amount of the offering, we are happy to be able to announce, was more than any Fifth Sunday offering from our church to the orphanage in a long while. The Juniors together with their leader, Mrs. Gore, deserve honorable mention for the offering they brought.

Mr. L. H. Reynolds was the guest teacher of the Wesley Fellowship Class last Sunday, giving an highly interesting, as well as a profitable, message to the young people of that class who heard him. The Wesley Fellowship Class has a number of interested members and an extremely interesting teacher. If you are a member of that class and are not attending regularly, or if you should be a member and are not, you are missing more than you realize by not hearing Mr. Omar Reynolds' discussion each Sunday.

At whatever age you are, there is a good place for you in our Sunday school and we shall be happy to have you come to our Sunday school. If you can't become a member, we welcome and enjoy visitors.

We are glad to have had Dr. Lawrence in the choir Sunday. We should be glad to have his helping the choir each Sunday. Members of the choir don't forget you have a job to do and a place in which you are needed. Don't fail the church.

We can only attempt to describe our joy when we saw the large congregation at the 11:00 o'clock service last Sunday. After hearing our pastor give his message, surely everyone who heard him could truly say, "I'm so glad I went to church," because that message was fraught with moving and inspiring power.

May everyone who heard the message last Sunday go out, spread the tidings, return next Sunday, and bring others that they may also receive a glorious blessing.

The complaint of Mrs. Bessie Dayton against Mrs. Viola Grison, who she said crowned her with a "love seat" was dismissed by a Tulsa judge, who decided that Mrs. Dayton started the row.

What's RIGHT With Alabama?

A person engaging in criticism—self-analysis so that he may improve himself, occasionally comes so intent upon "reviewing" his shortcomings that he loses sight of his virtues. Sometimes a similar thing happens to communities and you find them asking, perhaps too frequently, "What's wrong with us?" and in time seeing much ill, but little good, in that which is about them.

Now, an occasional bit of searching and constructive criticism can be helpful to any us. No doubt there are things and conditions in Alabama which can be, and should be, improved. That is perhaps the case with any individual, community or organization. We are in the course of improvement. I know that is so in our company.

Great forward strides have been made in Alabama within the last few years—socially, industrially, agriculturally. Many things are RIGHT with Alabama—things that are getting "righter" as time passes. The biggest thing RIGHT with Alabama is the determination to move forward!

We have recently reviewed progress made by Alabama during the past 10 to 25 years. It was inspiring to us—we believe that you, too, will find it inspiring. Therefore, we hope to publish in this newspaper soon a series of advertisements based on this review so that you may have a picture of some of the many things that are RIGHT with Alabama.

Cotton Leaf Worms Appear In Alabama

Auburn, Ala.—W. A. Ruffin, entomologist of the Alabama Extension Service, has issued a warning to North and Central Alabama farmers to be on the lookout for cotton leaf worms, commonly known as army worms.

The worms have already appeared in Lawrence and Covington counties, says Mr. Ruffin, in advising that "it is too late for the worms to do much damage in South Alabama, but it is possible for them to do considerable damage in North and Central Alabama."

Miss Shepherd Writes Interesting Word

Picture Of Travels In Japan

People Of Kiejo Found To Be Interesting

Following is another article in the series being written exclusively for the Chilton County News by Miss Ruth Shepherd, of Clanton, who is touring foreign countries.

Korea and Manchouikuo
The trip from Kyoto, Japan to Kiejo, (Chosen) Korea was a pleasant surprise to us. We had expected to be rather uncomfortable, particularly after we had heard that we were to spend the night on a ferry. But what a ferry it turned out to be! Air-conditioning and modernistic furnishing. The only drawback was that we had to get up at 5:30 the next morning to be off the boat by six.

The fact that we were very sleepy the rest of that morning brought on a little experience of its own, however. Hunting for some place where we could stretch out comfortably, three of us found a spacious compartment at the end of the car. We made ourselves at home and had quite a nice nap. It wasn't until several hours later that we found we had been in the section reserved for the Royal Family when they travel on this train!

Kiejo is an interesting city, but that is about as much as I can say for it. If I were to talk about the next most noticeable thing about the town, I'd be forced to say dirt and dirt and dirt. And the fact that it rained almost solidly during our day and a half there didn't help any.

We went through the home of a very wealthy Korean. It was entered through a muddy back alley and the yard was another mud puddle. The fact that the man had sixty servants didn't keep it from being the filthiest place I've ever been in.

Some of Kiejo was very enjoyable, though. We took a long walk down the Main street on Saturday night and were very much surprised in this principal thoroughfare in a city almost as large as Washington. It looked exactly like the Midway of a Fair, only narrower, with all its brightly lighted little shops.

The next day was the Fourth of July. I can't express to you how strange it felt to be spending the Fourth in Korea. If there were any other Americans in town, we didn't see them. We looked around vainly for firecrackers but finally gave it up and went off to look at the palaces and temples that were in use long before the Mayflower sailed.

There are three palaces in Kiejo, the Northern, Eastern, and Western. The Eastern palace is where what is left of the Korean Royal Family (Japan is in control now, of course) lives. The most interesting thing I saw in the Western palace were dwarf trees, just one and two feet high, that were over two hundred years old. In the Northern palace we saw the Emperor's Meditation Room, the God's room, and reception halls; something like Nijo Castle in Japan, but not so impressive. One thing we got a great kick out of was finding a whole patch of four-leaf clovers at the base of a stone pagoda over 2000 years old. We really earned an amazing amount of luck since we landed in Japan.

The people in Kiejo were the most attractive thing about the town. They are handsome people, small, but much better looking than the Japanese. Their dress is different, too. The women wear white blouses and full, long skirts. The young men wear kimonos and many of the older men wear long white tunic effects, and little black stove-pipe hats. Stuffed up in these hats, I understand, they have very long hair. The custom of wearing white has a peculiar origin. (and I wonder they can come out of those homes looking so spic and span.) White was the color worn by all Koreans for a period of three years when a member of the Royal Family died. Once these members died in such succession that the people were in white for over forty years; the habit of wearing it stayed.

Our interest in leaving Korea was heightened by the fact that we were heading for the puppet state, Manchouikuo, with a Russo-Japanese situation brewing. The local papers had taken a very serious tone, the situation was tense, and no one would have been too surprised if Russia and Japan had gone to war over incidents taking place in Manchouikuo. We didn't want to get actually in the middle of a war, of course, but it was exciting to think of

FARM OUTLET FACTS

Prices farmers will receive for eggs this fall are expected to be about the same as they were last fall and are likely to be higher next spring than they were the first half of this year, reports the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Economists of the United States Department of Agriculture expect cattle prices to continue near present high levels the remainder of this year. The seasonal decline in hog prices this fall and early winter will be of about average proportions, predicts the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics predicts that feed and market conditions will be better for dairymen the last of this year than they were a year ago. Butter prices probably will average higher and the relation between the cost of feed and prices of dairy products show promise of being more favorable.

A fifth more hay than last year and pastures that average even better in condition are reported by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in estimating a hay crop of 85,000,000 tons this year. "We can now be reasonably sure of an ample supply of hay and roughage for all the livestock that will need to be fed during the winter," says the Bureau.

A Safety Tip FOR YOUR Labor Day Trip

DON'T take chances on your Labor Day trip. Protect yourself and family by equipping your car with a set of new first-quality Firestone Standard Tires. Firestone builds extra quality and extra safety into these tires and sells them at lower prices because Firestone controls rubber and cotton supplies at their sources, manufactures with greater efficiency and distributes at lower cost.

PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS—8 extra pounds of rubber are added to every 100 pounds of cord by the patented Gum-Dipping process.

PROTECTION AGAINST PUNCTURES—because under the tread are two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords.

PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING—because the tread is scientifically designed.

LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE—because of the extra tough, long-wearing tread. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign today by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Standard Tires.

DON'T RISK YOUR LIFE ON SMOOTH WORN TIRES!

DO YOU KNOW? THAT last year highway accidents cost the lives of more than 38,000 men, women and children?

THAT a million more were injured? THAT more than 40,000 of these deaths and injuries were caused directly by punctures, blowouts and skidding on smooth, worn, unsafe tires?

wedding ring and pay for the marriage license to the couple who will be married on this night. The ceremony will be performed on the Fair's Midway. It is thought that the Clanton business firms will be canvassed and asked to donate merchandise to the couple. Any couple in the county who wishes to be married at the Fair will get in touch with J. W. Fant, chairman of the Fair Committee, or J. M. Martin.

FRIDAY—American Legion Day—All Legionnaires of the county holding 1938 membership cards and their families will be admitted to the Fair free.

SATURDAY—Farmers Day—It is hoped that every farmer in the county will make an effort to attend the Fair one or more days. Saturday has been designated as Farmers Day. Every one is expected to have a big time at the Fair on this day.

Premiums

For the best, greatest variety and most attractive displayed agriculture exhibit, that is, in the opinion of the judges a creditable and fair showing of the products of the farm in this section, and that will grade sixty-five points or above, will be given the following prizes: First prize $50.00, Second prize $40.00, Third prize $30.00, Fourth prize $20.00. If more than four booths in this department, all those grading 65 points will be given $10.00 for their cooperation. Competition open to schools, communities and individuals.

Home Demonstration Club Work Exhibits—First prize $12.50, Second prize $7.50, Third prize $5.00.

LIVESTOCK SHOW—This year the Fair management has decided to add a Livestock Show to the Fair. Two days, Friday and Saturday, some of the best livestock in Chilton County will be at the Fair. All livestock exhibits will be removed from the Fair Grounds Saturday afternoon by 4 P.M. $50.00 in prizes will be awarded to the best exhibits. The prize list will be arranged by Mr. J. W. Fant, County Fair Committee.

SCHOOL WORK—$50.00 will be given for school displays. The arrangements of the premiums for these prizes will be compiled by the County Superintendent and School principals. Entries can be made from 1936-37 year work.

The Fair management will furnish tents for all exhibits.

A watchman will be on duty day and night to see that your exhibits and displays are not bothered.

Each Community Booth entitled to 3 passes.

All exhibits to be removed by 10

P.M. Saturday night, November 6th. Communities, schools and individuals who wish to enter exhibits are requested to communicate with Mr. J. W. Fant, chairman of the Fair Committee, Clanton, Ala., who will furnish all information regarding the 1937 "Bigger and Better" Chilton County Fair.

The Fair will be managed by Thos. P. Littlejohn, veteran Fair manager who states that he has already booked many riding devices, side shows, a good brass band and other entertainments that go to make up a Fair such as this Fair will be. Mr. Littlejohn, with many years experience in managing County Fairs, stated here Tuesday that he is expecting this year's fair to be one of the best Fairs he has ever managed.

Mr. Littlejohn is also working on a Southeast Alabama Fair, which will take place about the middle of October if his plans materialize. Chilton County will be eligible to participate in this Fair if held. The place and other details will be announced by Mr. Littlejohn at a later date.

stitutional amendment to accomplish that end should be adopted. Any other use of road money, the program states, not only is unfair to motorists, but is an unwise and dangerous fiscal policy for the state and counties. Active support of the Committee is promised by motorists, farmers, and other highway users, in seeking approval of the amendment at the general election in November, 1938.

2. The State alone should tax gasoline through a uniform gasoline tax law, and a constitutional amendment prohibiting the taxing of this essential commodity by municipalities and counties should be adopted. It is explained that county and municipal gasoline taxes, on top of federal and state levies, now hit the total tax to 10 cents a gallon in some places, imposing upon consumers a retail sales tax of 71 per cent. Enactment of a uniform law is sought in order to prevent tax evasion and to bring Alabama's tax-collecting methods into line with those of other states.

3. Present laws regulating motor truck operation should be modified to conform with the uniform law adopted by the American Association of State Highway Officials. Free flow of commerce between Southern states is imperative, the program explains, and economical transportation is essential to full development of Alabama's resources. While portions of the uniform law already have been adopted, the six different state laws regulating motor truck operations now conflict in many provisions.

4. Distributors of petroleum and automotive products should enjoy equitable treatment through reduction of present discriminatory license fees. According to the program, present license fees greatly exceed those imposed upon other businesses.

5. Assistance should be rendered to state and federal authorities in detecting and eliminating gasoline tax evasion. The Committee pledges active assistance and cooperation in preventing gasoline tax money paid by motorists from going into the pockets of racketeers.

6. To urge repeal of unfair and unjust federal gasoline and lubricating oil taxes. These depression levies now cost Alabama motorists more than $2,000,000, and since the depression is over should be repealed as promised, the program asserts.

7. To seek only fair and equitable treatment of the petroleum industry and its motorist customers. Excessive taxation, burdensome restrictions, and diversion of highway funds hamper highway development and penalize highway users, the program says, declaring the Committee "vigorously will oppose all tax and other proposals unfair to the petroleum industry and its motorist customers."

stores in this section of Alabama, and one that Chilton County can justly be proud of.

Among other features of the new Yellow Front Store is the parking space available in the rear with two rear doors. Mr. Blacketter stated that customers may use either the two large front entrances or the two rear doors. A special dressing room for ladies is also incorporated in the remodeling features, with a parcel checking booth for customers who wish to leave their parcels there.

D. L. Blacketter, manager of this popular store, is bringing to Chilton County a most complete stock of merchandise in the grocery and dry goods line. The Yellow Front Store is truly a complete store. "Visit Us This Month And Enjoy This Shopping Comfort" reads a part of the special announcement to be found in this issue, and it is truthfully stated because those shopping at The Yellow Front Store will find it most comfortable. The merchandise is so arranged that it can be easily seen. New and modern display counters make this possible. Turn to the advertisement of this store in this issue of the News.

Judge Smith Letter

ly informed, I suggest that Mr. Cox and myself verify the records together and make up a statement for both the local papers as to the amount of money in the treasury and we both certify to same.

"The Clanton-Selma Highway has not been paid for by the County. However we have about enough money in the Treasury to take care of the County's part.

"I note Mr. Cox failed to include in the $5,000.00 which he mentioned approximately $18,000.00 spent for machinery and equipment that the Commissioners Court bought on requisition from the supervisor. I also note Mr. Cox is mistaken in the amount of money which the Commissioners spent on County roads.

"Now as it would only take about thirty minutes of our time, I believe it would be time well spent in order that we may give our people just what the records show, and at any date or hour that suits Mr. Cox, I would be glad to give the people the above information.

"Yours very truly,
"J. LEE SMITH,
Judge of Probate.

Road Office Closed

on the roads to such an extent that the winter months will find the roads in poor condition, according to those who have been advised of the action.

The letter from Mr. Arledge to the Court follows:

August 31, 1937.
Hon. J. L. Smith, Chmn.,
Hon. Commissioner's Court, City.

Gentlemen:
Through the resignation of his clerk, A. D. Maddox, who has been working without payment of wages earned for such services during the months of July and August, 1937, after an order by resolution of your Court that his services were unnecessary the office of the Road Supervisor will be closed effective September 1, 1937, as the Supervisor finds it impossible to maintain such an office and the work of cost-keeping, recording and reporting of such information to your Court as required by law without such clerical aid.

Also, due to the resignation of J. T. Thompson, T. C. Sims, and M. D. Traywick, district road foremen, in charge of field operations and direction of all machine and other maintenance operations, such resignations being based upon them by the Court's refusal to pay their wages earned in their respective positions during the months of May, June, July and August, 1937, after an order by resolution of your Court, dated April 29, 1937, to the effect that their services were unnecessary, the Road Supervisor is forced to suspend all construction maintenance and repairs to the roads and bridges of the county over which he cannot personally supervise and direct such operations.

The Supervisor finds it impossible to cover activities in all districts done, and due to the lack of adequate and competent supervisory direction of such remote activities he is forced to confine the work to one district at the time, working one week of each month in each of the four Commission Districts. This is a very poor set-up at this time of year, when all machines should be going but it is the best any one man can possibly do alone.

Therefore, effective September 1, 1937, only one unit of machinery will be operated until such a time as adequate and competent supervisory force is provided and some assurance is had that the wages of all road employees will be paid when such employment has been obligated by this office.

Respectfully,
THOS. J. ARLEDGE, Road Sup.
By All Commissioners.

9 CENT LOAN FOR COTTON ANNOUNCED

Wallace Discloses New U. S.
Plan As Forecast With
3-Cent Subsidy

Washington, Aug. 30.—Loans of 9 cents a pound will be made on the 1937 cotton crop, Secretary Wallace announced today. In addition, each grower participating in next year's production control program will be eligible for a maximum subsidy of 3 cents a pound on 65 per cent of this year's basic production.

The Commodity Credit Corporation will make 9-cent loans on cotton, classing 7-8 inch middling cotton, or better; 8 cents on cotton classing 13-16 inch staple, and middling or better in grade; 7 3-4 cents on cotton classing 7-8 inch as to staple but under middling as to grade.

The purpose is to buoy up prices of cotton. Sagging prices prompted legislators to demand loan-subsidies at the last session of Congress.

Agreement Demanded

A condition of each loan is that the producer-borrower agrees to participate in the 1938 adjustment program. No loan will be made on 7-8 inch cotton or better in staple which is of a grade not deliverable on contract under the regulations of the New York and New Orleans cotton exchanges, and no loans will be made on 13-16 inch cotton under middling grade.

Loans will bear interest of 4 per cent and mature July 31, next. Cotton must be stored in warehouses approved by the Commodity Credit Corporation to be eligible for loans. Loans if announced will be available as soon as necessary arrangements can be completed, but not later than Sept. 15.

The Commodity Credit Corporation has arranged to borrow $100,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to finance the loan program. Congress authorized Wallace to use $130,000,000 for a cotton price adjustment payment program for the 1937 crop.

Under proof of compliance with a 1938 agricultural program, Wallace announced cotton producers who sell cotton from the 1937 crop prior to July 1 next will be paid the difference between 12 cents a pound and the average price of 7-8 inch middling cotton on the 10 spot markets on the day of sale. But the subsidy trust does not exceed 3 cents a pound. As in 1935, payment will be limited to 65 per cent of a grower's base production.

If the subsidy payments on 65 per cent of the 1937 base production do not equal the $130,000,000 appropriated for this purpose, payments will be made on a larger proportion of the base production, Wallace said.

The secretary said that since adjustments will be related to the price of cotton on the date of sale, producers must sell before next July 1, and should retain original sales receipts on all cotton sold from this year's crop pending announcement of detailed regulations.

The 9-cent maximum loan is in line with Wallace's previously announced views. Southern congressmen had urged 10-cent loans, with subsidy payments to assure producers 12 cents a pound from this year's crop.

Cotton loans of 10 cents a pound were made in 1933 and in 1935, with 12-cent loans in 1934. The government lost money on the 1934 loans.

Cotton now is selling at prices higher than the loan schedule announced today. Cotton classing 7-8 inch middling is selling above 9.5 cents a pound, as compared with the loan figure of 9 cents.

Farm legislation, under a resolution adopted at the congressional session, will receive attention at the beginning of the next session.

President Roosevelt agreed to a cotton loan program only after being assured that crop control would be given prompt attention.

Special Services Sun. At Baptist Church

Dr. S. J. Ezell Begins Sixteenth Year
As Pastor At This Place

There will be special services at Clanton Baptist Church next Sunday, when Dr. S. J. Ezell will preach his anniversary sermon, beginning his sixteenth year as pastor of the church. Coming here the first Sunday in 1922, he has rounded out fifteen years of service in Clanton.

Dr. Ezell hopes that all members of the church, who possibly can, will be present next Sunday. All are invited to come and invite their friends to do likewise.

Miss Paula Arledge has returned home after several weeks visit with friends in Madisonville and Evansville, Ky. Miss Arledge has as her guest, Miss Donna Butts.

Rep. Of Ala. Compensation Commission Be Here September 1

George A. Stoves, field representative of the Alabama Unemployment Compensation Commission, will be in Clanton, beginning September 1, and has invited all employers in this territory who have problems relating to Unemployment Compensation to confer with him. Mr. Stoves is prepared to aid employers in many reports which may be required under the Unemployment Compensation Law, in setting up such records as make easier the task of keeping information required by the federal regulations and in preparing their employees' accounts on the commission's record so they will be able to defend their rights when the Unemployment Compensation Commission begins the payment of benefits to unemployed workers January 1st.

The Unemployment Compensation Commission is anxious to aid employers in complying with the law and to make the work of keeping records, making remittances and submitting reports as light as possible, said Stoves. "If there is any problem connected with the Unemployment Compensation Law on which any employer wants advice I should be glad to telephone call or letter address me at the Exchange Hotel."

SHOWING OF CALF CLUB TO BE HELD 18TH

McCain's Barn Is Place For Calf Club Show Of Local Club

The Local Jersey Calf Club show will be held at McCain's Barn Saturday, September 18. There will be a good many 4-H club Jersey calves brought in at this time which promises to be as good or better than it was last year.

Any farmers who have some Pure-Bred Jerseys and would like to enter them in this show will leave their names and addresses with anyone in the County Agent's office so we will know the number of animals to provide space for in the barn. Do this not later than Saturday of this week. The price list and the classifications of the animals will be found in both papers next week. In the meantime, all who plan to enter animals in the show should keep them out of the sun, feed them some grain, brush them daily and teach them to lead and stand so they will be easy to lead in the ring.

Don't get this date, September 18, confused. It is to be a week before the State Fair which is September 27, in order that we may judge and pick out the best animals to be carried to the State Fair.

Signed:
B. N. IVEY, Asst. County Agent in 4-H Club Work.

PICTURES ON SYPHILLIS TO BE PRESENTED

Educational Program On Disease To Start In Chilton County

A motion picture prepared for the lay public and showing very clearly the nature and extent, causes and cure of venereal diseases in the United States, has been made available to the Chilton County Council of County Workers by the State Health Department. This picture will be shown in the auditorium of the County Courthouse on Friday evening, September 10th, at 8 o'clock, under the auspices of the Chilton County Council. The picture has been approved by the Chilton County Medical Association. It deals with a subject which has long been considered taboo, but which medical authorities feel should be brought more forcibly to the attention of the public, because of the increasingly serious nature of the great social problem involved.

The Council, sponsoring the showing of this picture, was organized on September 28, 1936, and is composed of representatives of every public service agency in the county. The object of the Council is to bring the various agencies into closer harmony and to discuss and attack together major problems of county-wide interest. The Council has, from time to time, discussed such problems as the control of tuberculosis and the establishment of a sanatorium for the care of patients suffering from this dreaded disease.

As the United States Public Health Service is conducting a publicity campaign, this year, in an effort to stamp out venereal diseases, we feel that the sponsoring of this educational picture is timely and we urge every public-spirited citizen of Chilton County to avail himself of this opportunity to become better informed about this grave problem, which is confronting the County and endangering the lives and happiness of its citizens.

(Signed)
NOLAN MERONEY, Council Chrm

Arrangements are being made to have some outstanding singers and quartets to attend this session. Those who attend are assured of an enjoyable time.

EDITORIAL

THE NEWS CONGRATULATES MR. COX, THE COMMISSIONERS COURT AND THE ENTIRE COUNTY

The citizens of Chilton County will extend hearty congratulations to Mr. C. B. Cox for his broad view on the road problems of this county as expressed in his statement on the front page of this issue. The News wishes to be among the first to offer congratulations to Mr. Cox.

Like Mr. Cox, the News has for sometime now, advocated a decided change in the present unworkable plan of maintaining our county's roads, in order to bring the best possible results from the spending of the county's money on roads. Mr. Cox is one man who can bring about this change and the News believes Mr. Cox when he says he will.

We believe that Mr. Cox, as Chilton County's representative in the Legislature, was conscientious in his beliefs about our Road Law, when he introduced and passed it into a law.

The statement as published this week from Mr. Cox is one of the most honorable and commendable things a man can do and the News is glad that he has reached the conclusion as expressed in his statement to the citizens of the county. He has done the big thing—the act that opens a direct route for harmony in our county relative to road matters. He has placed his cards on the table, face up, and has followed his principle of doing what he believed to be the right thing for the interest of his county. For that, the News also congratulates Mr. Cox.

Being able to see that a mistake is being made and then being big and broad enough to make sacrifices to eliminate possibilities of more ill effects in the future, shows that a man does have a high principle.

The News also believes Mr. Cox when he says he will abolish this Road Law if given the opportunity. We believe him in that because we have gone into this matter thoroughly with Mr. Cox, for sometime. We believe him when he says that, even though he realizes that a road engineer for Chilton County is needed and will aid the Commissioners greatly in their work of building and maintaining roads, that he is willing, for the sake of harmony, for the interest of the county, and to serve the people to the best of his ability, to abolish Chilton County's present unworkable and harassed Road Law.

Now, in face of Mr. Cox's signed statement to The News, we see no reason why our Road Department shouldn't show much more results before the winter months, since the Law must be complied with until it is stricken from the Statute Books. We sincerely hope that the Road Supervisor, and the Commissioners Court will keep in mind that the present unsatisfactory road set-up will be eliminated as soon as possible, whether Mr. Cox does it, or it is done by someone else, and that until then, Chilton County's roads must be properly maintained. The suggestion from Mr. Cox to the Commissioners Court and the Road Supervisor, whoever he may be, that they lend every assistance within their power to give the people the best service possible under the present road Law, is worthy of being promptly carried out. The News congratulates Mr. Cox, the Probate Judge, members of the Commissioners Court, and the entire county, and we hope this action on the part of our Representative will do exactly what the News believes it is intended to do. Then, Chilton County will progress in road building.

Local Road Law Should Be Repealed, Says Cox

STAMPS-BAXTER QUARTET TO BE HERE THURSDAY SEPT. 16

The Stamps-Baxter Happy Hitters quartet will give a program at the courthouse on Thursday night, Sept. 16 at 8:00. Admission charges will be 15c and 25c.

Almost everyone has heard this quartet sing and know that they are real entertainers. Everybody has a cordial invitation.

URGES COMMISSIONERS AND SUPERVISOR TO RUSH WORK

Says He Will Abolish Law If Special Term Is Called Or Will Help Elect Candidate Who Stands For Repeal Of Road Law

Coming as a most timely statement, The News has been given a statement from Representative C. B. Cox to the effect that he will abolish the present Road Law of Chilton County if a special session of the Legislature is called during this term, or if no special session is called, he will help elect a man who stands for the repeal of the Law which created the office of Road Supervisor in this county.

HIGH SCHOOL P.T.A. DOING HEALTH WORK

Address At High School Next Tuesday Will Open Program

A social program of much importance to Chilton County is being sponsored by the High School P.T.A. in the interest of the Health and well being of the youth of our high school.

Dr. B. F. Austin, Health Authority and outstanding speaker of Montgomery, will deliver an address at the Chilton County high school next Tuesday afternoon at three-thirty, Sept. 14.

All patrons of the school are urged to be present. All interested in our young people are invited to be present. This is the first meeting of the P.T.A. and will be a good time for you to join. We need you and you need us. The dues are only fifty cents each year. If you do not wish to join, please do not fail to come to this meeting.

Dr. Kimmey, our County Health Officer will give us some valuable information about our children, discovered in his work last year.

It is very important that you attend this meeting.

S. A. Jones Opens New Feed Store In Clanton

S. A. Jones announces the opening of a seed and feed store, known as Jones Seed and Feed Company. This business is located next to the railroad.

Mr. Jones is an experienced seed and feed man having been employed by local feed and seed stores for the past four years. He will carry a complete line of bulk garden and field seed from T. W. Wood and Sons, Seed Co., one of the oldest seed houses in the United States. He feels that he knows the best seeds adapted to the climate and soils in this county.

You will also find a full line of fresh feed for all purposes. In about two weeks he will install a modern cream station.

Mr. Jones invites all his friends to come in to see him when in Clanton.

Chilton County's Fair Becoming Much Larger

Kiwanis Club And Other Committees Find That Plans For Fair Are Growing Bigger And Better As Time Nears

Chilton County's Fair, which opens Tuesday night, September 28th and runs through October 2nd, is becoming bigger and better as the days go by and additional plans are formulated, according to J. W. Fant, chairman and J. M. Martin, secretary of the Fair committee.

The Fair will be held on the grounds directly in front of the CCC camp, just west of the business section of Clanton. Plans are being rapidly completed now and the Fair promises to be much bigger than was originally planned and expected. A large tent, 70 feet by 100 feet will house the various agricultural and other exhibits, while the livestock will occupy another place in the Fair. Side shows and other attractions will be brought to Clanton to add to this gala event for Chilton County. Special days, designated as Children's Day, Farmers' day and others will be set aside and on those dates special concessions will be made those so honored.

Prizes for winners in the exhibits will probably be made Friday during the Fair. Those in charge stated that they are more than pleased with the splendid cooperation and assistance they have been receiving to make this Fair complete and a success.

Next week more detailed information will be given with a more complete outline of the entire Fair program.

No Respect For Pussy Footers

Nobody respects a "pussy footer."

That applies to nations as well as individuals. In the present state of world affairs, it may be well for us all to consider this as we view the possibilities of foreign entanglement.

We don't want war with Japan; we have no quarrel with any of the powers of Europe; we don't intend to send American soldiers drafted from all walks of life, to a foreign land to settle a foreign grudge.

But we cannot readily forget how we got into trouble twenty years ago. For three long years we watched the civilized nations of Europe engage in what looked like an outbreak of international insanity. When nations were fighting desperately to save themselves, we tried to maintain a policy of neutrality. But during those years we tolerated violation of our rights which were perpetrated by both sides.

British warships stopped American ships, took American citizens into custody, caused heavy loss to American interests. Germany went a little farther. With her submarines she destroyed American shipping and caused a heavy loss of American lives.

Then we jumped into the fray, after three years of desperate juggling in an effort to keep out of trouble.

Are we going to repeat that same error again or are we going to make other nations of the world understand that we propose to protect our rights, live up to our commitments, but take no partisan side in any controversy that is not of our own making?

A war is being waged in the orient today. The aggressor nation, Japan, is the one nation in the world whose policies seem to conflict most with our own. Even since the world war the bulk of the American navy has been concentrated on the West coast because there lies our danger point the War and Navy departments agree.

The Japanese-Chinese war is highly complicated for us. It is all made difficult by the existence of old treaties, almost thirty-seven years old, under which we agreed to assume part of the responsibility of policing the international concessions in China.

If we simply walk out of that part of the world today and refuse to assume any of the obligations we have long accepted and recognized, it is certain that we will arouse not only the hostility of the Chinese but of other nations as well. There are a lot of American citizens in that part of the world upon whom the Chinese might decide to take revenge. If we meddle too much Japan may take steps which will create difficulty.

It would seem that a nation as powerful as ours should announce its policy, and then adhere to it strictly. More than that we might let the world understand that we intend to protect our rights as neutrals. If nations at war are made to understand that they cannot violate our rights with impunity, there will be few violations.

This view may not conform to that of many of our citizens, but we cannot forget that the "wishy-washy" policy of twenty years ago did not work. We see no reason now to repeat the same mistake.

Your Influence

Example is more effective than argument in influencing people. If you argue in behalf of a cause but show by every act that you are not sincere, you cannot expect people to give serious consideration to what you say.

This applies especially to this highly important subject of buying here at home. If you urge your customers to buy at home and then send your own trade outside the community your influence will not amount to much.

Consider Our Good Fortune

"Oh, yes, I'd like to go back to the old country to visit some of my relatives, but not to live. Oh, no, this is the country for me."

This is the way they talk, those who have known the hardships, the poverty and the slim opportunity offered the average man in almost any nation in the world. Talk to one of these earnest people who have come to America in recent years and make their home here, if you would, and their faith in your own country restored.

A conversation with almost any recently naturalized American inevitably turns to an enthusiastic expression of love of our country and its institutions. To hear such a person talk should make us regret all the complaints and criticism we have to offer against the order under which we live.

Scan the news of the world. In Spain class struggle has broken into one of the most savage wars of modern times. Japan determined to extend her influence is slaughtering Chinese soldiers and civilians indiscriminately. Over most of the world people are taxed almost beyond the limit of human endurance to support huge armaments. Blood purges, mass executions, and almost everywhere poverty, this is the picture that a vast area of the earth's surface presents.

But here in America nobody starves. Those who really can make an honest living. Those who are particularly unfortunate because of many circumstances are taken care of by the government, and incidentally these people live better than the working classes in almost any other nation in the world.

Yet we kick when business isn't quite up to our hopes; complain when we can't get a vacation when we want it; or feel sorry for ourselves because we can't afford one of the new model cars as soon as they are on the market.

There are times when we should count our blessings and realize that in spite of everything which may be wrong in our country, we are indeed the most fortunate people on the face of the earth.

The Foundation Of Prosperity

We read an article in a magazine recently by Secretary Henry A. Wallace, of the Department of Agriculture. In it he advances his arguments in favor of soil conservation and the ever normal granary plan.

The technicalities of his proposal would serve as the subject of an almost interminable argument. There surely are two sides, and we have neither the opportunity nor inclination to present both of them here at the present time.

There is one point he emphasizes, however, with which we must all agree. That is the inter-dependence of all classes of workers whether they toil in the field or in the factory. The prosperity of agriculture is essential to the success of industry and the maintenance of the American standard of living, the Secretary emphasizes.

The farm is the great market for a vast proportion of the output of American industry. When the farmer cannot buy new machinery, lumber for his buildings, new furnishings for his home and barn, new cars and new trucks then factory employment begins to drop and both wages and dividends exhibit a marked decline.

All economists and well informed individuals agree that the foundation of American wealth comes from the soil, and that when those who are engaged in producing essentials cannot get a fair return for the labor and capital expended and invested, serious trouble comes to the entire nation.

For this reason we urge that the farmers consider the need and advisability of organizing and promoting intelligently directed cooperatives and associations. Though conditions may not be unfavorable for agriculture right at the present, the need for intelligent organization of the industry is as great as ever.

It is not merely the welfare of agriculture which is at stake. It is the prosperity and happiness of the entire nation.

The outlook for the future looks none too bright if we believe that history will continue to repeat itself.

Strange, isn't it, how we all stop bragging about the mileage on the car until we go to trade it in.

In Soviet Russia minority groups are shot. That can't happen here, because all of our minority groups together constitute a majority.

The time is approaching when the trailer will supplant the truck as a subject of wisecracks.

MORALECHOES

D. W. Haslow

A little boy came to his pastor with a cucumber in a bottle and challenged him to get the cucumber out through the neck. The preacher looked it over and remarked, "Why son, there is no way of getting it out only by picking it into pieces." The bottle was almost full of the cucumber and the minister wanted to know how the little boy got it into the bottle. Then with a note of meriment he replied, "Why I took the stem when the cucumber was very small and stuck it into the bottle neck and let it grow on the inside." The bottle was filled by a growth from within. Often I see men and women with habits that seem to be almost as large as the one having them, and I wonder how any one with any sense at all could become so filled with such habits. They are so dominated and so mastered by their habits until I wonder how they were mastered by them. Perhaps they grew into them while they were young and now it seems almost impossible to slip them out. Why not refuse to the bottle into which bad habits are slipped to grow. They are hard to get out when they grow from within.

While sitting on the porch I observed the ways and movements of the hens that walked about over the front yard. Suppose that you watch a yard full of hens as I did and see if they get a bug every time they peck. Each hen is pecking constantly here and there. If the old hen should be given the power of speech she would lift her head and say "I peck much, but I catch only a few bugs." In other words it takes many pecks to every bug caught. That leads me to say that we can learn a lesson from the hen in the yard. We need not expect to strike a pot of gold every time we dig. Remember however, if we refuse to dig we strike no gold at all. Just keep pecking, like the hen in the yard, and some day you will meet with success. Life would be too easy if the hen caught a bug every time she pecked. In like manner life would be too easy if we met success in every effort.

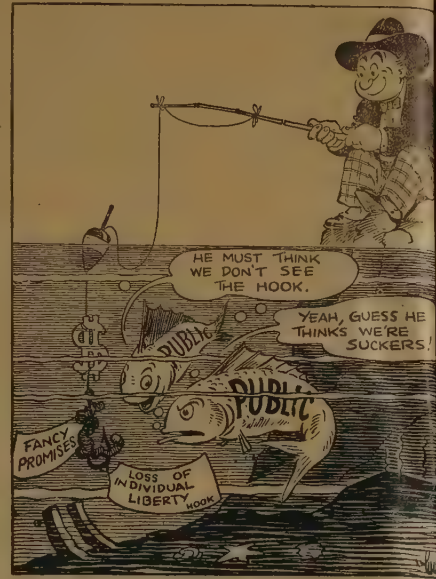

The story is that a pastor bought a new book and placed it on his desk. He labeled it, "A complaint Book for my Members." When a member would come in and register a complaint against another member the pastor would reach for his book and pencil and say, "We will record that complaint and I will take it up before the official board at their next meeting." Then the one complaining would say, "Hold on pastor before you record anything. I do not care to have this complaint recorded or discussed by any one." For twenty years this pastor reached for his complaint book hundreds of times, but never a word was written within. The most of the complaints that we hear in the church and out of it would look bad in the handwriting of a man of God. Not many who complain of other folks would be willing to face that complaint in black and white. Here are two rules that will help each of us in our complaints if we will follow them. First, never complain about any one until you are sure that you are doing better. Second, never utter a complaint until you are willing to face the complaint on a record book and meet it in open conference.

And it came to pass that a certain man carried a large sack upon his back and he groaned much under its burden. One day the angel of wisdom met him on the highway and addressed him thus, "My friend, what carriest thou?" He made answer, "Sir, in this bag I carry my worries." The angel requested that he open the sack and they would look upon his worries. On opening the sack they found that it was empty. Seeing nothing in the sack the man cried, "I was carrying two great worries too heavy for a man to bear." "True," replied the angel, "But one was the worries of yesterday and they are gone. The other one was the worries of tomorrow and they have not come." Then the angel of wisdom smiled upon the man with pity. The man understood and flung his sack of worries to one side and went on with a smile upon his face and with a song in his heart. How foolish it is for men to carry a sack of worries upon their backs as they travel along.

I joined a group of men around a stove in the rear of a country store and listened in upon their conversation for a few moments. Without saying anything but a pleasant good morning, I left the room in a hurry. Later I met one of the group on the street and he wanted to know why I did not tarry with them. My reply was, "You fellows were doing nothing but talking gloom and trouble and I had heard so much of that until it was about to poison my mind and heart." When a man meets trouble and gloom at every turn of the road, where he hears nothing but gloom and trouble coming from the lips of folks, before he is aware of it, the corners of his mouth will drop, his shoulders will droop and he will be seeing dark clouds everywhere. Life becomes to us when we associate with folks who are cheerful and who are doing things. Refuse to poison your life with gloom.

After being on the dole for two years James Hawtreys of Hull, England, found his wife had a bank account and paid back all he had received.

It's RIGHT with Alabama?

EDIBLE INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION

Twenty-five years ago Alabama was the land of cotton and little else. But the quarter-century has been to an incredible industrial expansion rarely equalled in the history of any state, in a period.

It is not a mere "booster" report of the Census of Manufactures, published by the U. S. Bureau of the Census, shows that from 1909 to the value of Alabama's manufactured products increased 2½ times. Purchases by Alabama have increased 2½ times. Exports have increased 2½ times. And what a variety of products manufactured in Alabama compared to a mere trailer, steel and shirts, bags and baby food, trinkets and toys—a host of others every year more numerous!

Many things in Alabama have been RIGHT to bring all about. Vast stores of natural resources to furnish materials. Efficient labor becoming factories. Growing markets to consume goods. Rail, water, highway transportation to bring them to the market. Available at low cost to the section of Alabama.

We like to feel that our effort to develop a statewide system, and to interest industry in Alabama, have been fruitful—that these, too, have been among the many RIGHT things in Alabama which have proved progress.

FARMERS ADVISED KEEP COTTON SALES RECORDS

AUBURN, ALA.—Farmers should keep sales receipts on all cotton sold from the 1937 crop, advises P. O. Davis, director, Alabama Extension Service, in calling Alabama farmers attention to the fact that the receipts may be essential for obtaining the cotton price adjustment payment on this year's cotton crop.

"It is important that account sales showing date, to whom sold grade and staple and price be kept for all cotton sold of this crop," emphasizes R. J. Goode, State Commissioner of Agriculture. "The producers of all such cotton will be eligible to a price adjustment up to 12 cents per pound if they comply with the provisions of next year's control program," he says.

The Commodity Credit Corporation has made plans to lend producers of up to 100,000 bales of 500 lb. cotton classing 7-8 inch middling cotton, or better; 8 cents per pound on cotton classing 13-16 inch in staple, and middling or better in grade; 7-3-4 per pound on cotton classing 7-8 inch as to staple but under middling as to grade. No loan will be made on 7-8 inch cotton or better in staple which is of a grade not deliverable on contract under the regulations of the New York and New Orleans cotton exchanges and no loan will be made on 13-16 inch cotton under middling grade.

The loans will bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent and mature on July 31, 1938, and will be made on 65 per cent of the grower's base production. To be eligible for loans cotton must be stored in warehouses approved by the Commodity Credit Corporation. The loans will be available as soon as the necessary arrangements can be completed, but not later than September 15.

A condition of each loan is that the producer-borrower agrees to participate in and comply with the 1938 adjustment program.

11,454 loans, averaging $248 each, were made to individual rural rehabilitation families in Alabama, reports Julian Brown, state director. "In addition to loans to individuals, 50 co-operative loans were made to communities to enable individuals to avail themselves of much needed services they could not afford to purchase.

Assistant county agents of the Alabama Extension Service and district and county home management supervisors of the Resettlement Administration spent the past week in Auburn studying the latest agricultural and home management information available.

Approximately 7,000 Alabama 4-H club boys and girls attended 4-H club camps throughout the state during the summer months. Some 3,000 club boys of 31 Alabama counties also made tours of the Muscle Shoals area from August 11 to August 28.

Poultrymen and hatcherymen lose 40 million dollar a year because about one third of their hatching eggs never hatch, estimates T. C. Byerly, of the Bureau of Animal Industry. This can be improved by giving hens plenty of sunshine and green feed and by doing breed-improvement work.

Hints for Homemakers
By Jane Rogers

NO more wilted cucumber pickles at the top of the jar! This welcome news greets every housewife who undoubtedly has had the disconcerting experience of opening a delicious looking jar of pickles only to find that the top layer is not immersed in the pickling solution and has become soft.

A new process for hermetically sealing foods packed in glass called vapor-vacuum sealing now keeps cucumber pickles crisp on top as well as at the bottom of the jar. The seal is made with a very high vacuum to retain the crispness of the cucumber, and the vacuum is accomplished without any loss of the pickling solution, which would leave slices of pickles in the headspace, without liquor, to get soft and rancid.

Interesting, also, is the new easy to remove cap which the high vacuum created in the headspace of the jar makes it possible to apply. This type of cap can be removed without damage to fingers, merely by lifting with the broad side of a sturdy table knife. The cap can be replaced securely after each opening of the jar because it is not bent when first removed.

When Women Need Cardui

If you seem to have lost some of your strength you had for your favorite activities, or for your housework . . . and care less about your meals . . . and suffer severe discomfort at certain times, try Cardui! Thousands and thousands of women say it has helped them. By increasing the appetite, improving digestion, Cardui helps you to get more nourishment. As strength returns, unnecessary functional aches, pains and nervousness just seem to go away.

Egg Goodness Is Decided By Kitchen Testing

Housewife Determines Quality of Eggs By Several Tests.

Any housewife who wishes to check on the quality of eggs she buys can do so fairly accurately right in her own kitchen. By breaking an egg into a dish and looking up the yolk with the fingers, the amount of thick white, the amount of thin white, and the firmness of the yolk, can be determined.

A good baking and poaching egg contains mostly thick white that clings to the yolk when the raw egg is picked up with the fingers.

There should be more thick white than thin. The yolk should be firm and rounded. When the yolk is picked up with the fingers, the thick white should cling to the yolk and the thin white should separate and remain in the dish. The more thick white the better the egg. Thin whites mean watery eggs.

Yolk Can Be Bounced In Hand

To test the egg further, the yolk should be subjected to the "pitching test." Eggs prepared by firm and high quality feeds contain yolks that may be bounced up and down in the hand without breaking. When the white is removed the yolk should remain unbroken even when tossed from hand to hand. When an egg stands up under this test the housewife can be pretty sure that she has a good egg.

Another kitchen test of eggs is the making of angel food cakes. The amount of difference in the rise and fluffy smoothness of cakes is due to the thickness of white of eggs used in baking. Eggs with thin whites result in flat, soggy cakes that lack the fluffiness and smoothness of cakes made with eggs having thick whites.

But perhaps the most exacting test of an egg is its appearance after poaching. Because the white of the high quality egg is thicker and stands up higher on the yolk very little is lost to the water. There are no big pieces of white floating around in the water when a quality egg is poached. With an ordinary egg as much as 25 per cent of the white may be lost in cooking.

Hen Makes Egg From Feed

How to judge the interior of eggs when buying them is a perplexing problem. It is only when the housewife knows how the hens that laid them are fed that she can be sure of what the interiors are like. Feed determines entirely the color of the yolk, and to some extent the amount of thick and thin white in a fresh egg.

Practical poultry raisers and scientists agree that since the egg is made entirely from what the hen eats, "real feeding" must be practiced if eggs of uniformly high quality are to be produced. In the Purina laboratories and on the Purina experimental farm an all-in-one laying mash that gives controlled interiors has been developed. Hens fed on this complete feed produce eggs with a wholesome delicious flavor, lemon colored yolks, and whites that stand up well when cooked.

To obtain such eggs go to the local feed merchant handling Purina check-board feeds and ask him for the names of his customers using this Layena mash. Poultry raisers who feed Layena to their birds produce the kind of eggs the American housewife is seeking.

Poultry Pointers

G. S. Vickers, of the Ohio Poultry Improvement Association, reports that Ohio Poultry Farm Records show that poultrymen whose pullets lay more than 88 eggs during December, January, February, and March, make money. Poultrymen whose pullets lay fewer than 88 eggs during those four months lose money. Only pullets that get what they need during the growing period to use during the laying period can be expected to go above the 88 egg profit line. Small undersized, knobby pullets can't make the grade. Their bodies are still immature and undeveloped. They have to use laying mash as a growing feed while birds that had a complete growing ration during the summer months start laying laying when after being put into the laying house.

DeKalb County paid more poll tax last year than any other county in the State except Jefferson and Montgomery. Jefferson paid $40,688, Montgomery $16,129, and DeKalb $14,482. Mobile was fourth with $14,361. Bullock was at the foot of the list with a total of $1,045.

Cool comfort in a beautiful CONCRETE HOME

Coolness is only one of the comfort features of the concrete home. It's a thrifty material that makes homes surprisingly moderate in first cost and lowest of all types in upkeep. Its permanence defies the attacks of fire and storm, of termites and decay. For generations of happy living, it remains free from annoying faults—sagging floors, cracked walls, sticking doors and windows.

Whatever size or style of home you want, whatever color or surface texture, you can build it economically with concrete.

TELL YOUR ARCHITECT you want a concrete home. Before you build, ask a concrete contractor or concrete products man to estimate your house with fireproof concrete walls and floors. Be sure that your architect and builder are familiar with the new concrete technique.

The Clanton Kiwanis Club is sponsoring a County Fair. It will be held from September 28 to Oct. 2, inclusive, at an especially arranged fair grounds opposite the CCC camp on the Selma Highway, just west of Clanton. There will be exhibit tents, prize awards for prize products of Chilton County, slideshows, unusual rides for children and grownups, amusement attractions, candy, soda pop, cracker-jack, chewing gum, and all the trimmings that usually accompany the carnival spirit.

It will serve a number of highly useful purposes. It will provide clean, wholesome entertainment for children of all ages from six to sixty—a field very highly limited in Chilton County; it will bring to the attention of the citizens of the county the number, variety and quality of products of all types of which the county can boast; and it will help to encourage the producer in achieving a higher standard of quality.

For the craftsman is proud of his craft. The shoemaker is jealously proud of the neat turn to the sole, the strong fastening of the last, the solid heel, the carpenter justly proud of his well-fastened housing; so is the farmer proud of strong healthy cattle, fine long-staple cotton, good corn and quality products of all types. That pride in the fruit of his labor is the incentive which makes him work hard to produce even better quality products; and such production is not only advantageous but vitally necessary to the welfare of Chilton County as a whole.

For these reasons, the Chilton County Fair is a worthy project, one to be supported by townspeople and farm folk alike; by clerk, hired hand and mill hand; and every citizen in the county should make it his business to attend the fair—and bring the children along! Or, if you're not that way just yet, bring along the girl friend and join the success of the 1937 edition of the Chilton County Fair.

At least, that's what I think.

CCC CAMP NEWS

Farmers who believe in "making hay while the sun shines" are finding that making hay on portions of their farms which are especially subject to erosion is also a good practice.

As a part of the Soil Conservation Service program in the area near Clanton, erosion-resisting crops have been increased by 3196 acres, on farms of cooperators, according to James H. Wood.

The use of these close-growing crops for strip cropping in cultivated fields, in vegetated waterways where surplus water from terraces is emptied, and on portions of the farm where clean-tilled crops cannot safely be grown, is providing an additional supply of hay, which is badly needed on most of the farms.

Farmers are thus getting other benefits from the use of such crops, in addition to the primary purpose of controlling erosion, Mr. Wood pointed out. Where legumes are used in rotations, soil fertility is increased, which means increased yields of following crops.

Even land on which close-growing crops can be safely grown should be given protection of close growing crops during the fall, winter and early spring through the use of winter cover crops. But in order to develop good growth and provide maximum protection over as long a period as possible, winter cover crops should be planted early, Mr. Wood said.

Getting the wagon before the horse may be an unmater procedure, but building the last part of a terrace system first has greatly reduced construction costs in the Soil Conservation Service area near Clanton, according to Henry T. Stanley, Camp Engineer.

In order to plan a terracing system properly, it is necessary to determine in advance how to surplus water from the terraces is to be disposed of, Mr. Stanley pointed out. When a meadow strip is to be used as a terrace outlet channel, it is often impractical to build the meadow strip first and construct the terraces later.

Since there will be no large, volume of water to take care of until after the terraces are built, the meadow strip can be seeded to a meadow strip mixture or sprigged to Bermuda grass instead of being sodded and a good sod can be established before the terraces are built.

If it is not practical to construct the meadow strip first, the same thing can be accomplished by using diversion ditches on each side of the strip until the sod has become well established. This requires considerable additional labor, however, and is much less desirable than building the meadow strip first.

This is just one illustration of how planning a complete farming program in advance can increase the efficiency of methods used for erosion control, Mr. Stanley commented.

Hogs can be produced in southeast Alabama for as low as 3 cents a pound, reports J. P. Wilson, manager of the Wiregrass Sub-Experiment Station at Headland, Alabama. He is producing them at this cost.

Strength During MIDDLE LIFE

Strength is extra-important for women going through the change of life. Then the body needs the very best nourishment to fortify it against the changes that are taking place.

In such cases, Cardui has proved helpful to many women. It increases the appetite and aids digestion, favoring more complete transformation of food into living tissue, resulting in improved nutrition and building up and strengthening of the whole system.

FACTS FROM THE RECORD

Written by F. G. Stephens, Publisher of The Southern Democrat, Oneonta.

Strange as it may seem Alabama was collecting more poll taxes in 1899, than it is now collecting. During that year it collected $315,000.00. During the poll tax year ending February 1, 1937, it collected $241,208.00.

This was about the normal amount usually collected. During the past 20 years the annual poll tax collections have varied from $140,000.00 in 1917 to $417,645.00 in 1934. This was the highest point reached during the twenty year period and is probably an all-time high. The second highest point reached was in 1926. It will be recalled that in both of these years hot campaigns were being conducted for Governor of the State, and an unusual number of County officials were to be elected.

The lowest point reached in poll tax collections since 1917 was in 1933 when the receipts amounted to only $142,004.00.

Going back to 1931, when the woods were being shelled by candidates for Governor, the total receipts amounted to 283,304.00. The following year the receipts dropped to $160,236.00.

The largest number to pay poll tax in any one year was in 1923 when the total number reached 130,377.

Prior to the adoption of the present Constitution in 1901, all male persons between the ages of 21 and 45 were required to pay poll tax each year. The 1901 Constitution eliminated the compulsory requirement, but made the payment of poll tax a prerequisite to voting. When this was adopted most of the negroes ceased to pay poll tax.

When the Woman's Suffrage amendment was adopted in 1920 this made the women between the ages of 21 and 45 subject to poll tax the same as the men. They are now required to pay poll tax if they vote.

Under the Constitution, and a decision of the Supreme Court, all poll taxes must be paid on or before February 1st, to entitle the person to vote in any election held prior to February 1st of the following year. For example: A person who did not pay poll taxes due by him on or before February 1st, 1937, cannot pay up after the poll tax books are opened October 1st, 1937, and participate in any election held prior to February 1st, 1938. He must have paid his poll taxes not later than February 1st, 1937 to be eligible to vote in any election being held this year or during the month of January of next year.

According to the last Federal Census there are now 591,189 white people in Alabama within the poll tax age of 21 to 45. Some fifty thousand of these are World War Veterans and are not subject to the payment of poll tax. If all the remainder should pay the State would receive $811,000.00 instead of $241,208.00. All of this goes for education. If all the white people subject to poll tax should pay, it would add to the school funds more than a half million dollars annually. Another half million would be added if all the negroes in the poll tax age were paying.

In an effort to increase interest in cows, hens and hogs, 4-H club boys and girls in Montgomery, Autauga, Elmore, Lowndes, Lee, Russell and Etowah Counties were awarded a large number of purebred gilts and will be given some calves and chickens later. The animals were awarded winners in a "Sow-Cow-Hen" contest.

Hints for Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

If you reach for the catsup bottle and find that it has a black ring and a thickened plug of sauce at the top of its neck it is wearing an old-fashioned cap.

The latest fashion in catsup bottle caps prevents both these unsatisfactory conditions. These caps which may be single or double shell have no liners, such as cork, to contaminate the flavor of the product. They are trim and give a neat closure that may be removed simply by lifting up with the flat side of a sturdy table knife, and when replaced afford perfect hermetic resealing as many times as the bottle is uncapped.

The caps are originally applied by a process called vapor-vacuum sealing. This process involves the evacuation of the head space by hot, dry vapor, which in addition to evacuating the air, sterilizes the head cap, and seals the package with a high vacuum. This high vacuum condition in the head space of the bottle eliminates oxidation, which process turns the surface of the catsup dark, preserves the aroma in all its freshness, prevents the plug of catsup usually found in the neck, and by reason of the cap, gives a perfect hermetic vacuum seal.

CLANTON CCC CAMP TO LOSE 65 MEN ON OCTOBER FIRST

Because of new service restrictions approximately sixty-five men who are enrolled at the local camp will have to leave the CCC on or before Oct. 1, 1937. This list includes almost all the skilled workers, mechanics, truck drivers, clerks, leaders, sub-leaders and otherwise seasoned men.

Employers who are in need of any of these men are urged to get in touch with the officials of the camp for further information in regard to these men's ability. Inasmuch as these young men are more or less isolated at work they have little or no opportunity to look for jobs, and because of the large number who must go it is felt that an employer in need of help will have an unusual opportunity to find the type of employee he wants in this group.

If you would like to interview one or more of these men we will appreciate your letting us know, indicating the type desired or the work that will be required of him so that we may select and eliminate. Employers may be assured that these men will not be sent unless we feel that he will reasonably qualify for the place, and be dependable. Our intimate acquaintance with these young men makes it possible to discriminate rather accurately employer who may be in need of one or more of these men please in touch with the Educational Director or Commanding Officer of the camp.

A good one-horse planter for legume seed is now being manufactured and are available to at very low costs, reports E. G. H. assistant agricultural engineer, Alabama Experiment Station. Mr. H. will be glad to furnish farmers information about the planter.

"We already have orders placed us for about 2,500,000 pounds of ter legume seed," says A. N. C. secretary-manager, Farmers Marketing and Exchange Association, Montgomery. "Our sales should exceed 3,000,000 pounds," he concludes.

Spinach With a Foreign Flavor

Italian with an American accent is the only way to describe this role of spinach and cheese topped with bacon cubes and crisp flake crumbs.

By Barbara B. Brooks

THERE is nothing that will relieve menu monotony as quickly as food with a foreign flavor. The dish itself need not be an authentic reproduction of some foreign culinary masterpiece. The ingredients in the original recipe may be too difficult to secure so far from their native clime.

An adaptation of a foreign dish, however, always inspires interest. Perhaps it is the manner in which it is prepared or served. Take Italian spinach, for example. It is prepared with a rich cheese sauce and served from an oven proof casserole, and is so rich in food elements that it makes a delightful as well as well-balanced main dish when meat is not served as the piece de resistance. To give the dish added appetite appeal, the American housewife adds a purely American accent—a topping of savory bacon and crisp corn flake crumbs. The result is effective. Under the Italian banner spinach becomes new and interesting vegetable.

The triple tasted recipe follows:

Italian Spinach
1/2 cup milk
8 ounces packaged cheese
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup milk
3 slices bacon
Heat milk and cheese in top double boiler, stirring until cheese is melted. Add seasonings. Drain spinach thoroughly and place in casserole. Over it pour the cheese mixture. Crush corn flakes slightly, mix with bacon, and sprinkle over mixture. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) about 30 minutes. Serves 6.

Note: If fresh spinach is used cook in small amount of water drain and chop.

IN MEMORY OF SALLIE CLECKLER

On Monday morning, August 23, 1937, the death angel visited the home of Mrs. D. M. Weathers and carried away the gentle spirit of her mother, Sallie Cleckler. She had been ill for a long time, but bore her suffering patiently. Grandmother was a devoted Christian having been a member of Mount Pisgah church for many years. She leaves one daughter and a host of grandchildren, great grandchildren and great great grandchildren to mourn for her. Grandmother was loved by all who knew her and her vacant place can never be filled. We can only be submissive to God's will and can truly say:

Her work on earth is done,
Her life crown has been won.
And she is now at rest with Him above.
And some glad morning,
She I know will welcome me,
To that eternal Home of peace and love.

Her great, great granddaughter,
DORRIS PARKER.

DAVID T. SMITH

On the 24th day of August, 1937 a very dark cloud over shadowed the home of David T. Smith and bore away his spirit to the saints. Everlasting rest and peace. Bro. Smith having lived in this vicinity all his life of 69 years we all knew and loved him sincerely. He united with the church 35 years ago. He left a brilliant testimonial of his passing and its results. He was ill a long period but died in faith. He was a faithful father and a loyal neighbor. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife Mrs. Oddie Smith, 2 daughters, Mrs. Richard Raspberry, Miss U. L. Smith, 3 sons, Leonard, Curtis, Willie; 1 brother, 1 sister. His remains were laid to rest in Mt. Nebo cemetery. The writer officiating. Spiegner in charge.

SLUMBER PARTY GIVEN BY MISS LANGSTON

Miss Dot Langston of Jacksonville, Fla., who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Langston of Jemison, Ala., gave a slumber party at her home Thursday night.

Dancing and games were enjoyed until a late hour, when a mid-night supper was served. Those present with the hostess were the following:

Misses Elizabeth Bald, Mary Julia Hubbard, Mary Frank Wells, Frances Lee Mathews, Margaret Robinson and Ruth McNeil of Birmingham.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to our friends and neighbors for their help and sympathy during the recent illness and death of our dear husband and father, Mr. D. T. Smith. May God's richest blessings rest on each and every one who helped in any way is our prayer.

11,000 Trees Planted 12 Alabama Counties

More than 11,000 trees were planted in 12 Alabama counties the past year on farms of 908 cooperators in soil conservation demonstration projects and CCC camp areas.

These plantings were made in Calhoun, Clay, Chilton, Tallapoosa, Lee, Pike, Butler, Hale, Marengo, Sumpter, Pickens and Chambers Counties and will serve to demonstrate the value of reforestation in erosion control and proper land use.

A total of 9,432,605 pines, chiefly slash and loblolly, were planted on land too poor, too steep, or too severely eroded for cultivation or pasture. Of 1,709,492 hardwoods planted, 1,631,192 were black locust, according to Sam Morgan, project forester at Dadeville.

About half of the black locusts were planted on fairly good, but erodible, land. They were fertilized and will be cultivated for one year for the purpose of producing a crop of fence posts in a minimum time as well as to control erosion.

The remainder of the locusts were planted in soil material which had collected above brush dams built in gullies on areas that were to be retired to trees. The trees will thus replace the temporary dams when they give way, Morgan said.

Funeral services for Frank A. Thuis at Vincennes, Ind., were conducted by his three sons, all Catholic priests, and attended by his daughter, a nun.

LIVESTOCK PRODUCTION INCREASES IN ALABAMA

Livestock production in Alabama, "Interest in raising livestock is increasing," reports Dr. R. S. Smith, extension livestock specialist, in figures showing 983,000 cattle in 1936 compared with 955,000 in 1935. In 1936 with 695,000 in 1935. He also gave figures showing 1,050,000 hogs in 1936 compared with 648,000 six years earlier. Sheep, horses and mules showed a decrease during the same period.

Cash income from livestock and poultry in 1936 was $16,231,000 or 13 1/2 per cent of the total farm income, while in 1935 the cash income from livestock was $17,119,000 or 17 1/2 per cent of the total says Dr. Smith.

Farmers are increasing their livestock production through better breeding stock, improved pastures and more careful handling, report county agents of the Alabama Extension Service. Higher livestock prices and lower prices for field crops, especially cotton are causing farmers to devote more time and efforts to livestock.

COX WILL REPEAL ROAD LAW

the minds of the people of this county relative to the county's roads and bridges and in view of the above expression from a majority of the Commissioners Court, and in order to carry out my intentions of serving the people to the best of my ability while their Representative in the Legislature and to bring harmony in the county, that this local Law creating the office of Road Supervisor, should be repealed.

Following the careful study of the present set-up, should the Governor of Alabama call a special session of the Legislature during my term as Representative, I shall take steps to have this road Law repealed for the above reasons. And, if there be no special session of the Legislature called during my term, then I will help elect a man from this county to the Legislature who stands for the repeal of said Law. I realize that we are nearing the point of hard-surfacing some of our county roads, for which I have the highest appreciation and to which I give my endorsement. I shall lend every effort in my power to help carry out this hard-surfacing work in our county. In this connection, if and when our present road Law is repealed I suggest and heartily recommend to the Probate Judge and Commissioners Court of this county that they carry out their idea to maintain a trained, skilled road and bridge engineer who will act in an advisory capacity in the work of building and maintaining the county's roads and bridges and in the work of hard-surfacing the county's roads.

Since the Law under which our roads are being worked is a Law and on the statute books, and will remain so until the Legislature is convened and the Law is repealed, I offer a suggestion to the Probate Judge, Commissioners of the county and the Road Supervisor, whoever he may be, that they lend every assistance in their power and within the official duties of their respective offices toward giving the best possible service to the people on their roads to thoroughly prepare our roads for the coming winter months. I want the people of Chilton County who elected me to serve as their Representative in the Legislature, and also those who did not help elect me, to be assured that I was sincere, honest and conscientious in my beliefs when this present road Law was drawn up and passed. I was convinced that such a law, if properly carried out, would give the people dollar for dollar value in road building and maintenance, as it has proven itself in several other counties in our state.

I sincerely hope that my friends, and foes, will accept this statement from me in the spirit and cooperative desire as is intended by me.

Respectfully,
C. B. COX.

Cox Replies To Smith Statement

"To the People of Chilton County: I noticed in the Chilton County News last week that Judge Smith was questioning the figures that I gave the week before, in regard to the amount of money that had been spent on our county roads and that we now had in the treasury. If these figures are wrong the W. P. A. office in Montgomery is wrong, as I gave the very same figures that they gave me. I sent a man to our county Treasurer's office to get the figures off of his books and he told me that the Treasurer took these figures himself and gave them to him. I give you herewith the figures that the county Treasurer taken from the bank report as of August 1, including some checks that he held on August 12 when he, the Treasurer gave these figures. Here is the entire or total figures that could be used under the law for road and bridge work as of August 12:

County General Fund	$26,643.82
Gasoline Fund	16,022.42
Road and Bridge fund	2,450.97
Clanton-Selma Road	22,522.07
Total	$67,639.28

"I understand that these checks had been in the Treasurer's safe for several days. The reason for not depositing these checks is unknown to me. Of course we all know that the Treasurer's book will not be the same any two days, as there is money going in or out of the county treasury every day and I was quoting what the records showed on August 12 and not what they might show today.

"I wrote my letter to give the people true information and not hoping to raise any argument in the newspaper or with my fellow-man, however I am going to let the people make their own decision on whether there is a 'negro in the woodpile' if so who put him there and who is trying to keep him covered."

Yours very truly,
C. B. COX.

NOTICE OF STRAYED COW

On August 30th, 1937 there came to my place one light cream colored cowly-headed cow, and I have sought diligently to find the owner of said cow and having so far been unable to find an owner, I hereby advertise by public notice for the owner of said cow to call at my place one mile southwest of Clanton, Ala., and get the cow by paying all costs of caring for and advertising.

MARTHA A. GROTHY, AGE 88 DIED AT THORSBY HOME

Ann Martha Grothy, age 88, died at her home in Thorsby Wednesday afternoon of last week following a lingering illness.

Funeral services were held last Sunday afternoon with burial in Concordia cemetery. Services were conducted in the Lutheran church with the Rev. E. W. Butler officiating, assisted by Lawrence L. Stanley. She is survived by three daughters, Nellie Werners, Anna Werners and Matilda Langville.

Pallbearers were E. E. Hanson, J. L. Mixon, C. R. Foss, Vernon Carlson, Frank Nelson and James Nelson.

IN TRAINING AT SOUTH HIGHLAND HOSPITAL

Miss Elaine Deason left Sept. 7 for South Highland hospital in Birmingham where she is training for a nurse. She is a graduate of Isabella high school and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Deason, of Pool's Cross Road community. Her many friends wish her much success.

Miss Irma Thraillkill, of Verbena Ala., returned home Saturday night from an eight weeks visit with relatives in Orange, Texas.

GRAND JURY RETURNS 32 INDICTMENTS

Makes Comment On Law Creating Office Of The Road Supervisor

STATE OF ALABAMA,
Chilton County.

To Hon. Arthur Glover as Judge of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama:

We the Grand Jury empaneled for the July term of the Circuit Court after receiving your Honor's able and instructive charge, entered upon our investigation of the matters that came before us as Grand Jurors and here submit the following report:

During our investigation we have considered 53 cases and have examined 122 witnesses and are returning herewith 36 true bills.

We have examined the fee book of the Probate Judge and find it neatly kept and correct in so far as we were able to ascertain. We have examined the bonds of the various county officials and find that they are ample for the protection of the public and on our examination of the sheriff's account with the state for feeding prisoners we find it being kept in accordance with the law. On our examination of the office of the County Superintendent of Education we find that his books, records and papers are being kept neatly and in accordance with the law in so far as we were able to ascertain.

The Grand Jury learned from the County Superintendent of Education that the Grammar schools of the county are scheduled to run seven months

GOES TO PROVIDENCE R. I.

Miss Lurline Harper left Saturday for Providence, R. I. Miss Harper was selected as an exchange teacher to Providence.

Miss Eleanor Lowe from Providence comes to Birmingham to take Miss Harper's place. At the end of the school year both teachers return to their former places. Exchange teachers are also being sent to Los Angeles, California, and Portland Ore.

NOTICE

There will be a musical concert at Shiloh church next Friday night, Sept. 10. This concert marks the ending of a very successful singing school taught by Mr. A. L. Brown. There will be no admission charge. We expect this to be one of the best singing had yet. Everyone invited.

and that the High Schools of the county are scheduled to run nine months. We feel that the citizenship of the county should take pride in the fact that the schools of the county are scheduled to operate for seven and nine months for the approaching school session.

We have made a personal inspection of the county jail and believe it to be sufficiently safe for the keeping of the prisoners and find that the prisoners confined therein are being well fed and cared for with reasonable comfort.

The Grand Jury took occasion to give some study to the local law that now prevails in Chilton County, which provides for the control, making, maintenance and improvement of the public roads and bridges of Chilton County, Alabama. This law passed at the Extra Session of the 1936 Legislature created the office of Road Supervisor and appointed that the Road Supervisor be appointed by the Governor and is to hold office under this appointment until the first Monday in February of 1939; that for the new term of office for the Road Supervisor beginning the first Monday in February, 1939, it shall be filled by appointment of the Commissioners Court and the Probate Judge. The County had complete charge of the roads of the County and this Jury wishes to go on record as strongly recommending that the Act for Chilton County creating the Road Supervisor be repealed.

The Grand Jury wishes to express its appreciation to Sheriff J. R. and his deputies and to our Bailiff G. N. Easterling, for the many tests shown us during the week these officers discharged their duties in getting for us the necessary witnesses that we needed.

We wish to thank you for the very able charge given us, we first impaneled and for the high and efficient manner in which you outlined our duties as Grand Jurors. We having complied to the best of our ability with your Honor's respectfully ask that you now be missed until such time as you may see fit and think proper to us again convene.

Alabama. The Grand Jury after thought and consideration is impressed with the fact that the Probate Judge and the Commissioners of the County who are directly answerable to the citizenship of the County the ballot box should have full control and management of the making, maintenance, building and improvement of public roads and bridges of Chilton County, and further that if an engineer or technically trained person needed that he should be answerable to the Probate Judge and Commissioners who in turn are answerable to the people at the ballot box. The Grand Jury is instructed with the spending of the appropriation of the public funds of Chilton County and we feel that they should prevail as to how and when this money should be spent and should they care to have the addition of a trained engineer or Road Supervisor that they should be free to do so, he should be answerable to the law as it is now on the books of Alabama. The law passed at the Extra Session of the 1936 Legislature creating the Road Supervisor for Chilton County, in our opinion is unworkable and in our view the voters of the County should on guard and take steps to elect a representative to the Legislature for Chilton County for the next session who will insure the people that this law will be repealed. We the County at present is not progressing under this law as the County would progress if the Commissioners of the County and the Probate Judge had complete charge of the roads of the County and this Jury wishes to go on record as strongly recommending that the Act for Chilton County creating the Road Supervisor be repealed.

The Grand Jury wishes to express its appreciation to Sheriff J. R. and his deputies and to our Bailiff G. N. Easterling, for the many tests shown us during the week these officers discharged their duties in getting for us the necessary witnesses that we needed.

We wish to thank you for the very able charge given us, we first impaneled and for the high and efficient manner in which you outlined our duties as Grand Jurors. We having complied to the best of our ability with your Honor's respectfully ask that you now be missed until such time as you may see fit and think proper to us again convene.

PASSING FOOTPRINTS Of The Times

highly recommend to readers of this week, the splendid article Miss Ruth Shepherd, of Clanton, who has been spending several months touring foreign countries. An interesting account of how the opium in China comes first hand and how it is then smuggled into this country is given in part of the article. Miss Shepherd is writing these articles exclusively for the Chilton County News. The article which is published this week as we know Miss Shepherd in China about the time the trouble there with Japan. She is daughter of Mrs. J. F. Shepherd of Clanton.

Exemptions
Tax Assessor and Tax Collector still urging the taxpayers of Clanton to come in and take advantage of the Homestead Exemption which exempts homesteads of up to $20,000 valuation. Alabama statute in having such a law and not to go on record as commendation of body of lawmakers who voted this exemption. It means a heavy burden will be placed on the shoulders of our farmers and others. Any farmer or other who is not registered to this matter before October 1st.

The Spirit
The time draws near for Chilton County's Bigger and Better Fair, we are actually getting the real Fair spirit and are ready for the fair. There's something about a County Fair—an atmosphere that is not able to find anywhere else. The spirit gets into the blood of one during Fair Week. Judging pictures we have seen and from account of the program this week, we are convinced that it will truly be a Bigger and Better Fair.

Bigger Taboo
Americans are getting away from those diseases that for long were taboo even in closest contacts. It is evidenced by the great interest in being shown in the sign to stamp out Syphilis—a disease that our forefathers would not mention. But, it has reached the point now that people are educated in the fact that his disease can be cured by an innocent person and there is no need for a person to refrain from going to a doctor immediately for treatment. It is a glad to see that our county authorities are getting into this fight against this disease as they should. The people of the county give their fullest cooperation in working to rid this county of the disease and to give treatment to those who have contracted it. It is a taboo in the United States to talk frankly of such subjects.

We're Right
Very seldom we become positive in right about any matter we show, but we have been positive in our views relative to the action of our Representative, C. B. McInley, who advocated the repeal of the law in this county. We are disappointed with the tremendous number of people who have complimented Mr. McInley on this act and who say that "he is the big and honorable thing."

Stylish
Visit to the stores in Clanton have shown us that the merchants are on their toes to bring to the people the latest in clothing styles and the latest in everything needed for Fall and Winter. We were particularly impressed with the large display of new Fall wearing apparel in the good stores in Clanton. We were impressed with the line of ladies who have been arriving here and on display, because this is an indication of the fact that we believe the law will be able to find what they want in Clanton in the way of clothing and most reasonable prices.

ARRESTS REPORTED BY SHERIFF DURING WEEK
Arrests were reported by Sheriff for the past week. These include: 2 for driving while intoxicated; 1 for reckless driving; 3 for public nuisance; 1 for violating internal law; 1 for disturbing religious worship; and one for violating the prohibition law.

DOCTORS OF COUNTY MEET IN CLANTON
Discuss Program Against Syphilis And Urge Cooperation

The Central Alabama Hospital was host to the Chilton County Medical Society on Tuesday, September 7th. Following a delightful luncheon served by the nurses of the Hospital staff, the doctors held their regular monthly meeting.

The problem of syphilis control was discussed briefly by Dr. Smith of the State Health Department, after which there was a general discussion by members of the Society. It was decided that the County Medical Society would sponsor a clinic for the treatment of syphilis among those unable to pay their family physician for this service. The patients treated in the clinic will be only those referred by their family physician, and the clinic will be conducted by members of the staff.

PILOT CLUB IS PLANNING CONVENTION
International President Of Clubs Is Recent Visitor To City

A most enjoyable time was spent by the Clanton Pilot Club last Wednesday when they met for a winter roast at Jones Tourist Camp at 5:30 o'clock. Weiners and marshmallows were roasted by the barfitter and hotdogs "with all the trimmings" were made and enjoyed with cold drinks.

Those enjoying this outing were: Mamie C. Smith, Sophia Jones, Ruth Sessions, Nolan Meroney, Howard Maddox, Sarah Colley, Frances Moore, Irene Smithman, Marvin Durbin, Gertrude Riquett, Bertha Dennis, Lona Thompson, Dellah Grant, Olive Welch, and Gertrude Callaway.

The members of the club enjoyed mixing and talking with the members of Luther Little's Sunday School class and their guests, who were also having a barbecue chicken supper at the camp at the same time. Their cake was delicious.

At 4 o'clock last Saturday afternoon the International President, Martha Aldridge and Emily Pointer of Selma, Ala., met with members of the Clanton club to formulate plans for the coming Convention. "Convention" is a frequent topic at present. We bid each and every member of the Crew of Clanton Pilots to help set the sails for this wonderful program which is being arranged.

350 ENROLLED AT LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL SO FAR
Members Of Faculty Are Of Best Instructors To Be Had Here

The enrollment at the local high school for the second day was 350, which is about twenty more than enrolled the first month of last year. The total enrollment for last year was 362 and this number will doubtless be reached by the end of this week.

The superintendent and principal believe they have assembled a splendid teaching force for this year for the high school. The teachers with their home address and subjects taught are as follows:

Miss Martha Blackhear, Physical Education for girls, Headland, Ala.
Miss Virginia Cook, Home Economics, Roanoke, Ala.
Mr. Dewey L. Cox, History, Ensley, Ala.
Mr. B. E. Evans, Director Occupations, Birmingham, Ala.
Mr. J. A. Hayes, Shop and Occupations, Thorsby, Ala.
Mr. J. H. Jackson, Agriculture, Le Roy, Ala.

O. P. Klinner Takes Over Service Station

A business change in Clanton was affected last week when O. P. Klinner purchased the interest of W. W. Bishop in the Bishop Sinclair Service Station located near the News Building on the highway.

Mr. Klinner is one of the county's well known service station operators and has had several years experience along this line.

The station is now undergoing extensive remodeling and a large shed, or top, being erected over the driveway. Hereafter the drive has been opened. The station is also being repainted throughout. Mr. Klinner invites his friends to drive in to see him and get some of their efficient service on automobiles.

PATROL CARS ARE EQUIPPED WITH RADIOS
Highway Patrolmen Show Effective Work In This County

Alabama's popular and efficient Highway Patrol is becoming more efficient now with the recent installation of short wave radio receiving sets on all patrol cars and motorcycles. The sets are tuned in at all times to receive calls from Montgomery, Mobile and Birmingham.

In Chilton County patrolmen Earl Henley and Wallace Waites have arranged with the Thorsby Garage, in Thorsby, for calls to be received there in cases of emergency when their services are needed. That station will either immediately notify the local patrolmen or call the headquarters where a general call will be broadcast. Patrolmen Waites and Henley urge the people of this section not to fail to use this new service if and when it is necessary.

During the past two weeks Patrolmen Waites and Henley have been doing some effective work along safety lines on the highways, and are cautioning owners of wagons that they must carry lighted lanterns when traveling any road at night. Their arrest reports show week before last: 3 for drunken driving; 1 for violating carrier law; 1 for improper trip ticket; 2 for no drivers license; 2 for reckless driving and 1 for having no flags or flares.

The past week, 13 arrests were made, composed of: 2 for driving while intoxicated; 4 for speeding; 2 for having no carriers permit; 2 for drunkenness; 2 for reckless driving and 1 for having no drivers license.

MISS SHEPHERD NARROWLY MISSES WAR WHILE VISITING IN CHINA Unusual Experiences Interestingly Related In Exclusive Story Given To The News

(By Ruth Shepherd)

Our stay in China was the most exciting that we've had yet. It's not only the most interesting country we've been in, but also what has turned out to be a really serious piece of warfare had its beginning in Peiping while we were there. We were ready to believe that old saying "out of the frying pan into the fire" literally: from a tense Russo-Japanese situation in Manchoukuo to fighting in northern China.

The trouble started two days before we left Peiping. I don't know what the papers at home have had to say about how the fighting began, but this is the account we got in Peiping.

A company of Japanese infantry stationed just outside the city walls, while holding night maneuvers near Marco Polo bridge, fired on a wrong target by mistake. Chinese soldiers there thought it was intentional and retaliated by opening fire. When Japanese roll was called, it was found that one soldier was missing. Meanwhile more Chinese soldiers had marched onto the bridge.

The Japanese demanded entrance to the town to investigate who had done the shooting, but the Chinese refused admittance of foreign soldiers into the town at night. The Japanese threatened to surround the town if they were not permitted to enter. By this time the missing Japanese soldier had turned up, so the Chinese said there was no longer any necessity for an investigation, but the Japanese insisted.

The Chinese finally granted permission to enter to a group of delegates. While negotiations were under way, however, the Japanese fired twice on the Chinese, who did not return fire. During the next few hours over one hundred and fifty Chinese were killed and Chinese authorities stated that if Japanese attacks continued, the Chinese would be forced to retaliate.

During the next couple of days firing was intermittent. Every few hours we could hear shots from the hotel. All the city gates were closed and train service etc., stopped. No one was allowed in or out of the city and Peiping itself was under Martial law.

Our last night there we ventured out of the hotel—which was on one of the main thoroughfares. There was not a soul on the street except a few soldiers and most of the lights were out. We got just about a quarter of a block before we were sent home.

The next day we went to see the American Consul and he told us that if it could be arranged for us to get out of the city, we had better jump and be thankful. We waited around all day and didn't know until about twenty minutes before we left that night whether or not the train would be able to run. Incidentally, it was the only train that had gotten through five days later when we left Shanghai. I hear that the Japanese blew up part of the track shortly afterwards.

We didn't travel in great style by (Continued to back page)

Definite Program For Fair Is Announced Here

Nell's Eat Shoppe To Get New Location

The popular Nell's Eat Shoppe of Clanton will soon have a new home, and the north business section of the city will have a fine eating place.

The building across the street from the News building has been undergoing some extensive renovating in preparation for the cafe, which will open there sometime during the earlier part of next week.

A feature of the new home of Nell's Eat Shoppe is that the kitchen, will be equipped with new furniture and will be open for inspection at all times during the day will bring many visitors to the place as they will serve free coffee and dainties.

COLLINS CHAPEL TO ELECT PASTOR FOURTH SUNDAY

The Collins Chapel church will elect its pastor on the fourth Sunday in September, according to an announcement given the News. All members are urged to attend the Sunday morning, eleven o'clock services.

New Hatchery Is Now Open In Clanton

Perhaps Clanton's newest business enterprise is The Clanton Hatchery, located in the rear of the Western Tire & Supply Co., next door to the News Building.

This new hatchery is operated by J. J. Freeman, manager of the accessory store. Mr. Freeman stated they hatch only quality chicks and eggs from blood-tested flocks. They have one of the best electric incubators on the market and which has a capacity of about 3,000 chicks. Mr. Freeman also stated that they will secure any particular strain of eggs desired by a customer on short notice. They guarantee their chicks to be free from disease and at lowest possible prices. He invites the public to see the new incubator.

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS HAVE BEEN ARRANGED FOR WEEK

Deadline For Exhibits Is Set; Fathers' Day Set For Friday With Free Performances Each Afternoon During The Fair

Arrangements for the Chilton County Fair are taking on concrete form. Definite arrangements have been made for the attractions for the different days. All exhibits must be in by 4 p. m., Tuesday. On Tuesday night all exhibits will be admitted free. This will be the initial and grand opening of all the attractions.

Arrangements for the Chilton county fair are taking on concrete form. Definite arrangements have been made for the attractions for the different days.

All exhibits must be in by 4 p. m., Tuesday. On Tuesday night all exhibits will be admitted free. This will be the initial and grand opening of all the attractions.

Wednesday will be school day, and as stated before, special privileges will be accorded all school children, whether their schools have already opened or not. Bus drivers and teachers also will enjoy special privileges on Wednesday and Wednesday night.

On Thursday the big event will be the judging of exhibits. Blue ribbons will be placed on the winning exhibits and displays. On Thursday night comes the wedding when a prominent couple will be united in matrimony. All arrangements have been made for this event. Ten dollars in cash will be given the couple, as well as the license, ring and a shower by the merchants of the county.

The most important day of all will be Friday—farmers' day. Of course, all the days will be for the farmers of the county, but they have been given Friday especially to call their own day. The prizes will be awarded on farmers' day. At noon Friday, pass out checks will be issued to anyone wishing to leave the fair grounds and return later without having to pay again. It is hoped that the farmers will take full advantage of all the privileges accorded them Friday, and make a real success of that day.

Saturday is everybody's day, when everybody with the whole family is expected to be on hand. Everybody will be in Clanton Saturday and Saturday night for the closing day and night of the bigger and better Chilton County Fair.

SCHEDULE OF FOOTBALL AT HIGH SCHOOL

Season Opens With First Game To Be Played On October 1st

Football practice opens at C. C. H. S. Monday September 6. All boys that are interested in football see any of the coaching staff or Mr. Hicks.

Most prominent prospects for the team are:

Williamson at full back, 3rd year; Lawrence, Thornton and Armstrong at halves, 2nd year; Johnson and Littlejohn at ends, 3rd year. Other line material includes Reynolds, Captain; McGee, McDowell, Headley and Bean. A number of boys on last year's scrub team should win places on this year's squad as well as some boys entering school for the first time.

Football Schedule

Oct. 1—Verbena at Clanton.
Oct. 8—Wetumpka at Clanton.
Oct. 15—Tallahassee at Tallahassee (night game).

Why Editors Go Bugs

One Little Letter Misspelled Makes Maniacs Of Them

There is a fascination about newspaper work or writing a medium which goes to the head, but it is a task beset with snags. One wrong little letter or word makes maniacs out of editors.

Writing about this in Maniacs of Them, Edmund Pearson once wrote: "The editing incidents which make editors mad are made readers smile while the author in a padded cell was pulling out his hair in great handfuls."

For instance, her name was misspelled to a description of the President Roosevelt taking a walk with William McKinley. The editor went bay-wire wild and entered the word "outh" and the following was the result:

"For sheer democratic dignity nothing could exceed the moment when surrounded by the cabinet, Mr. Roosevelt took his simple lunch as president of the United States."

In an obituary notice, the editor speaking of the death of a prominent woman wrote: "Above all the ladies in this town, she was distinguished for her charity," but the typesetter in a moment of amnesia set it up: "distinguished for her chastity."

The bride was accompanied to the altar by eight bridesmaids, made the country editor flee the town when it appeared in the paper that the "bride was accompanied by eight bridesmaids."

A newspaper reported an accident when a train "hit a cow and cut her into calves." What the writer wanted to say was cut her in halves."

And finally a fine publication dealing principally with home and home decorations, advised its readers that nothing gives a greater variety to the appearance of a house than a few "undraped widows." Selected.

THE LADY CANDIDATE

EVER hear of Mrs. Belva Lockwood of New York? She was a woman who was twice a candidate for the presidency of the United States on the Equal Suffrage ticket. That she was defeated on occasions is beside the point. The record shows that she was perhaps the most stalwart of the day advocates of "emancipation" in all its forms for the women. And she accomplished her aim.

In 1882, two years before her names were seen on presidential banners, Mrs. Lockwood obtained the admission of women to the Supreme Court of the United States. It was the culmination of a year battle, launched at the large convention in Lincoln hall, Washington, in 1877.

Mrs. Lockwood was a practicing lawyer herself. For three years she had been empowered to appear before the Supreme Court of District but was barred from the United States body by lack of precedent. She established the precedent. But it required a follow-up campaign of briefs, speeches and bills to obtain the desired end.

The speech of Mrs. Lockwood at the 1877 convention was convincing her hearers. Contrary to current recollections of the masculine type of woman who first demanded political equality, she is described in a contemporary reprint as entirely feminine. As an example, Mrs. Lockwood wore a velvet dress and train.

Mrs. Lockwood was a candidate in 1888 as well as in 1884. She was in public life almost to the day of her death in 1917, when she was seventy-seven years old. After women were allowed before the United States Supreme Court she championed the right of Negro lawyers to appear there. Then she secured legal censure for the Indian, went as a peace commissioner to Europe, engaged in a score of other worthwhile activities.

CHRYSLER ENLARGES PLANTS TO MEET HEAVIER SCHEDULES

Unprecedented public acceptance of the 1937 Chrysler line having naturally resulted in a greatly increased production schedule, the Chrysler Division Chrysler Corporation, has found it necessary to expand both its body and manufacturing plants. Work now in progress will give 110,000 additional square feet of production floor area in the Chrysler plant and 76,000 additional square feet in the Kercheval body plant directly across the street.

According to David A. Wallace, president of the Chrysler Division, under whose direction the expansion is being effected, the increased production space will be available when Chrysler begins operations on the 1938 models.

"A great percentage of this increased area is allotted to our machining operations," says Mr. Wallace. "The building extension is to be equipped with the latest type of machinery and will have the most modern and efficient lighting system known to the industry. Our experience has proved that nothing is more conducive to efficiency and high quality work than proper lighting and ample space for the operatives."

"Our receiving and shipping facilities have been greatly increased to meet the demands of additional operations entailed in handling the enormous amount of material necessitated by the heavier schedules."

"In addition to the installation of much new machinery for this increased production, it has been necessary to relocate some 3,000 of our present machines. This work is being done with no interruption in our production operations. Each machine with its operator is moved to its new position with practically no disturbance to the production line. We believe that never before has so much machinery been relocated in so short a time with so little productive time lost."

"The increased floor space in the machining division not actually occupied by machines will be used for storing material ahead of the machining and assembly operations, so that there will be a minimum of time and effort expended in getting material to the operatives."

"Because of the expansion of the machine shop and the increasing number of cars driven away by dealers and owners, we have found it necessary to increase our driveway operations, now located north of Jefferson avenue and east of Corey street. With increased room and better facilities, we are prepared to handle the heavy 1938 schedule in a most efficient manner."

"In the Kercheval body plant, where we build our all-steel bodies, expansion has kept pace with that of the Chrysler plant. To meet the demands of 1938 we have found it necessary to construct additional building totaling 76,000 square feet of floor space. These new buildings will house our body-in-the-white assembly operations, comprising the automatic welders where our bodies are constructed and the storage of material ahead of these operations."

"These buildings are of the newest type factory construction, with improved lighting and ventilation. By improving the working conditions even over our existing high standards, these expansions will tend to raise the quality of the bodies produced in this division."

"In connection with this building expansion, we are making a decided improvement in our paint division by the installation of a new type of paint booth. This new type will improve the quality of our paint job, increase the volume of production in this department and also improve the working conditions of our employees, which even now are exceptionally good."

MOTORISTS BEING TAXED ABOVE ABILITY

Tax On Gasoline Main Item In Burden On Auto Owners

Continuing studies of special additional taxes imposed upon motor vehicle ownership and use already have revealed that motorists are being taxed as if luxuries, according to J. B. Kelley, Vice-Chairman of the Alabama Petroleum Industries Committee. Mr. Kelley said that automobile clubs and other organization should be given a vote of public thanks for their work in promoting reasonable taxation and proper use of public funds.

"State legislatures and the Federal congress have been piling tax after tax on the motorists without considering his ability to pay," said Mr. Kelley. Something like 27 different types of special automotive taxes now are imposed, making the motor vehicle the most heavily taxed property in this country today.

"Yet results of continuing studies of these taxes, while incomplete, already have revealed that the typical motorist is a worker earning $320 to $30 a week, and forced to work two weeks to earn money to pay automotive taxes, the bulk of which are quadruplicating Federal, city, county and State levies on gasoline. The typical motorist lives in suburban low-rent areas, provides his own transportation, and uses his car chiefly in driving between home and job. He is not a man of affluence any way you look at it."

"The typical motor vehicle, far from being a luxury, is a necessity to the owner. The average car is a small, used vehicle, manufactured five or more years ago, and worth only about $212. Yet it is taxed about one third of its value every year!"

"It looks as if those who impose such taxes will have to revive their ideas if they intend to leave any money in the pockets of the motorists. They can improve the situation by making tax reasonable, spending economically for planned and needed roads, and avoiding the highway spending spaces which have created heavy expenses and high taxes in so many states."

"Automobile clubs and other organizations, studying the automotive tax problem, should be given a vote of thanks by the public. Out of their work of promoting reasonable taxation and proper use of public funds in many ways we can afford should come the greater good—government at a cost we can afford."

Alabama's Unemployment Compensation Trust Fund Hits Up To $6,704,303

Alabama's unemployment compensation trust fund, from which benefits will be paid to eligible unemployed workers on and after Jan. 1, 1938, has reached $6,704,303.81 and will run beyond $8,000,000 by the time the first benefit check is written.

M. H. Harper, chairman of the Unemployment Compensation Commission, Friday afternoon made public statistics showing the condition of the trust fund and the number of employees and wage-earners protected by the law.

More than 300,000 workers are now covered by the trust fund and can draw benefits if they become unemployed.

The total has jumped from 214,000 since the United States Supreme Court upheld the validity of the social security law and the Alabama unemployment compensation law. Contributions are now being made to the fund by 4,987 business establishments and their employees. Mr. Harper said the exact number of employees cannot be given for the reason that the total is changing each day. Reports of field agents and remittals by covered employers make increases in the total while a few reductions result from the elimination of duplications of names.

The Alabama commission has on deposit in the United States treasury a total of $6,135,739.77. This includes earned interest of $23,392.47 which has been redited to the fund. Another credit of interest will be made at the end of the quarter Sept. 1. In addition, the State treasury holds $568,564.04 which will be deposited in the United States treasury in a few days.

"The condition of the fund indicates that the total will run beyond $8,000,000 before Jan. 1, when the first benefit payments can be made under the law," said Mr. Harper. "It is possible that it will go beyond $9,000,000. Wisconsin, the only State now paying benefits to unemployed, used about $1,000,000 of its trust fund the first year. If Alabama's experience is similar this State should have a large fund available for benefits before another serious business depression begins. No part of the fund can be used for any purpose than the payment of benefits. The cost of administering the law, including salaries, is being paid by Federal funds allocated to this State by the Social Security Board."

Alabama will be one of the 22 States to begin the payment of benefits Jan. 1. Seven other States will start payments before the end of 1938.

Power Company To Abandon Sheffield Electric Service

Expiration of Franchise and TVA Cited as Causes

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Alabama
Power Company, on September 10 filed with the Alabama Public Service Commission a petition for the abandonment of electric service in the City of Sheffield and surrounding territory, on or about November 1.

The petition recites that the franchise to the company to engage in the business of an electric utility in Sheffield expired in October, 1932, but that the company has continued up to the present time to supply the electric requirements of the city and its inhabitants under an indefinite franchise.

The desire to abandon service is brought about by the refusal of the City of Sheffield to purchase the Alabama Power Company distribution system—which in May, 1936, was offered at a price of $180,000, payment to be made with the city's 4% revenue bonds, secured by a mortgage on the distribution system—and the city's decision to build a duplicate system at a cost of $295,- 000. The City of Sheffield in March, 1937, issued and sold $385,000 of bonds, bearing 4% interest, and is now constructing an electric distribution system and incidental works and facilities.

According to the petition the action of the city will result in the destruction of the company's system in and around Sheffield valued at more than $200,000. Salvage value after removal will be only $70,000, with a net loss of $130,000 resulting.

Commenting on the petition, T. W.
Martin, President of Alabama Power Company, stated:

"As the company has no franchise in Sheffield, its lines become worthless as the city goes ahead with its construction. All of the company's customers will soon be served by the city and the entire system of the company will have to be taken down and junked. This is a wanton destruction of property and is an incident of the policies of the TVA."

"At the time we offered to sell our property to the City of Sheffield our franchise had expired. The system was and now is modern and efficient and has sufficient capacity to supply the requirements of the City of Sheffield for a long future period, and the price at which the system was offered was greatly less than its reasonable market value. If the City of Sheffield is going into the electric light and power business on a business-like basis, it is difficult to understand its refusal to buy out system at the reasonable price and terms offered, and its decision to build instead a system no better costing $115,000 more than our system in good operating condition would have cost it, and at a 12% higher interest rate than we offered on the deferred payments."

In applying for a divorce, Mrs. Paul Costello of New York City stated:
"My husband was selected a judge in a bathing beauty contest, and now he never comes home."

MEASUREMENTS

There will be a "guessing contest" held Saturday September 18th at the farm of Mr. E. S. Jones just north of the Selma highway west of Clanton near Isabella School house. It is set for 2 o'clock in the afternoon and is sponsored by the Isabella F. F. A. chapter cooperating with the Chilean Nitrate Educational Bureau.

The guessing will be done on the field of cotton on a plot fertilized with 200 lbs of Chilean Nitrate of soda, 300 lbs of super phosphate and 50 lbs of Muriate of Potash and on a plot fertilized with 300 lbs of Super phosphate and 50 pounds of Muriate of potash.
The person guessing nearest amount will receive $2.00 as the award.

The largest crop of cotton ever produced in this country was in 1927 when the total reached 19,206,400 bales. Only one time during the present Century has the production fell below ten million bales. That was in 1935 when the official count was 9,470,000 bales. In 1937 the number of bales exported was 11,243,000. At no other time has the exports gone over ten million bales except in 1912 when the number exported was 10,719,000. The South has been leading the north in the consumption of cotton since 1910. In 1936 Southern mills took 5,730,000 bales while the Northern mills used only 1,331,000. The total production that year was 13,321,- 000 bales of which 6,098,000 were exported. The present crop is estimated at 16,094,000 bales.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

COLPORTAGE

Dear Editor:

Please let me announce through your paper, the new work I am entering in connection with my ministry.
The work is selling and distributing Bibles, books, gospel tracts and all kinds religious literature.

I have been very much interested in this sort of enterprise in our county in the rural districts, as well as in our towns and villages. There is a real need among our people for some Christian person to advise with them the kind of literature the young people and children should have placed before them in developing their minds and spiritual lives.

I am not interested in merely the sale of books and the profit derived therefrom. I am far more interested in rendering the highest type of service in character building.

On Saturdays you will find me located at Kemp Dry Goods Co., in Clanton, and on the various routes other days of the week.

This in no way will interfere with my ministry or any of my duties as a minister, but will lend strength and increase my opportunities for service.
Come in and see what I have and I shall be very glad to serve you.

Sincerely,
G. G. WILLIAMS

JOBS SHOWING INCREASE IN WORK IN ALA

Jobs Found For 1,092 Persons In State During Past Week

Montgomery, Ala. Sept. 15.—Employment in private industry in Alabama continued to show an increase, last week compared with the preceding week while the number of placements in Public Works jobs showed a decrease, according to comparative statistics released today by J. G. Duncan, Jr., Director of the Alabama State Employment Service.

Jobs were found for 1,092 persons during the week, compared with 1,021 the preceding week. Of the total for the past week 876 were placed in private industry compared with 793 the preceding week.

The total number of applicants for jobs in the active file during the past week also showed a decrease, indicating that private industry is gradually absorbing idle workers. At the end of the past week the Alabama State Employment Service had on file 72,961 applications for jobs compared with 73,- 726 the preceding week, a decrease of 765. During the past week 823 were interviewed by the Service and their applications for jobs received, compared with 1,139 in the preceding week, a decrease of 316.

Dallas County made the best record for private placements during the week. One hundred and thirty-five applicants were placed in jobs in that county, only three going to public employment. Jefferson County took the lead for the total placements with 158, of which 90 were located in private jobs. Mobile was third with 93, 76 being placed in private jobs. Etowah was fourth with 81, all being in private jobs. Houston was fifth with 84, all being in private jobs. Montgomery sixth with 67, 32 being in private positions. Escambia was seventh with 53, Butler eighth with 50 and Walker and Tuscaloosa tied for ninth place with 45 each.

Miss Mildred Smith of Collins Chapel, left last week for Arlton, Ala., where she has accepted a position as a member of the faculty of the Arlton high school.

Under an Act of the 1935 Legisla-

The Railroad Problem ... and You!

To the Public: September 14, 1937

THE Association of American Railroads has successfully shown through a series of advertisements during the past year that the railroads remain the outstanding transportation industry of the Country.
It has shown that they are dependable and progressive; are necessary agencies of distribution in times of peace, and of defense and offense in times of war; and that not only are a million people directly employed by them, but that the life of virtually every citizen is in one way or another affected by their service.

The impression has been gained by some that all railroads are prosperous. This is partly true of only a very few. The reverse is true for the industry as a whole. In 1936 when the depression was over, the Net Income of all railroads was $164,630,000. This was the amount available for improvements, reduction of debt, and dividends; yet even in that year railroads operating 38% of the country's total mileage had no net income at all, and about 30% were in the hands of receivers or trustees.

Now, what is the situation for 1937? The Net Income, which in 1936 was $164,630,000, is subject in 1937 to the following adverse influences, which are already in effect:

Loss of emergency freight rates, authorized during depression by Interstate Commerce Commission, and cancelled Decem- ber 31, 1936, which produced in 1936 revenues amounting to...	$150,000,000
Estimated increased cost over 1936 of materials and supplies being used in 1937...	125,000,000
Estimated increased charges over 1936 of Social Security and Retirement taxes for 1937...	$9,000,000
Wage increases granted certain employes of 14 non-operating brotherhoods, August 1, 1937, costing about $98,000,000 per year; estimated effect on year 1937...	41,000,000
	$375,000,000

These four items total $375,000,000, which is $210,370,000 greater than the entire net income of 1936. For the railroads to break even in 1937, they must, in view of the foregoing loss of revenue and added expense, handle nearly 30% more traffic than they did in 1936. The actual increase in carloadings for the first eight months of 1937 compared with 1936 was only 11.9%.

In addition to the above, the following items of increased cost are pending:

Demand of five operating brotherhoods for 20% increase in wages, equal per year to...	$116,000,000
Proposed law, sponsored in Congress (the bill has already passed the Senate) by certain railroad labor organizations, limiting the length of freight trains to 70 cars, which would add annually to railroad expense...	100,000,000
	$216,000,000

This figure added to the $375,000,000 above, makes the huge total of $591,000,000 per year, or three and one-half times greater than the actual net income of 1936.

It is self-evident to any thinking person, therefore, that with such additional burdens imposed on the railroads, a serious situation exists.
One of two things is inevitable: Either higher freight and passenger rates must be obtained to offset these increases, or practically all the remaining roads will be bankrupt. This means that the living expenses of every citizen will be higher through increased cost of transportation, or there will be government ownership, with its consequent ill-heavier taxes to pay the cost of buying the railroads, loss of taxes now paid by the railroads, inefficient service and annual deficits to be made up by additional taxation.

In either case, the welfare of the public, as well as that of the railroads, is at stake. Nothing can be done about the increased burdens already in effect amounting to $375,000,000, except to the extent that increased rates may be granted by the Commission. There is still time, however, to prevent the pending increases of $216,000,000, but to do so imperatively requires the strong influence of public expression against such demands. The railroads have refused the demands of the five operating brotherhoods for increased wages; the issue may reach a fact-finding commission appointed by the President of the United States. The Train Limit bill is pending in the House, and will likely be given prompt attention by Congress next January.

The citizens of this country are so vitally affected by these two questions that they should oppose them in every reasonable way.

Further details of these and other railroad matters will be discussed in future statements.

FACTS FROM THE RECORD

Written by
F. G. Stephens, Publisher of The Southern Democrat, Oneonta

The State Department of Health was created by legislative enactment on February 19, 1875—and thus there was brought into being an organization designed to be of service to all citizens of the commonwealth. The statutes place upon the State Department of Health the responsibility. —

1. Of exercising general control over the enforcement of the laws relating to public health, and of adopting and promulgating rules and regulations for the administration of said laws;
2. Of investigating the causes, mode or propagation and means of prevention of disease.
3. Of safeguarding the source and avenues of conveyance of drinking water;

4. Of inspecting establishments and institutions in commodities or dispensing service that may have a public health aspect; and
5. Of exercising control over county boards of health and county health officers.

The State Department of Health is charged with the duty also of—

6. Supervising the collection of vital statistics;
7. Conducting bacteriologic, serologic and vaccine laboratories;
8. Furnishing rabies treatments to persons bitten by rabid animals.

9. Conducting educational campaigns for the dissemination of knowledge regarding tuberculosis, hookworm disease, typhoid fever, malaria, and other preventable diseases.
10. Exercising supervision over milk supplies.

11. Promoting the physical welfare of the entire citizenship of the state, particularly the younger age groups of the population, and, finally,

FARMERS ADVISED NOT DUMP THEIR COTTONSEED

P. O. Davis, director, Alabama Extension Service, spent several days in Washington the past week working with various Government agencies in trying to work out a program so that farmers receive better prices for their cotton seed.

"The price of cotton seed is distressingly low, being about $20 per ton, or 1 cent per pound. At this price the seed will not pick and gin a bale of cotton," he said in emphasizing the importance that something be done.

Mr. Davis urges that farmers not dump their seed on the market. "Apparently, oil mills are being glutted with seed," he says.

state in all medical matters and matters of sanitation and public health.

Many important services are rendered directly by the State Department of Health, also through local units known as county health departments. Each county has a board of health which is charged with the protection of the public health within its jurisdiction. This protection is vouchsafed in fifty-eight (at this writing) of Alabama's sixty-seven counties; and plans for organizations are under way in the remaining nine.

To finance these operations (central administration and local health service) the legislature makes an appropriation from the General Fund, contingent on the income of the state; which monies are being supplemented at present by a fixed sum contributed by the federal government and designed primarily, to finance essential auxiliary personnel.

All counties share these appropriations; and add thereto from their revenues such sums as needs in the field of public health demand and ability to pay will permit. By these combined means Alabama has been brought to the threshold of state-wide health service on a county unit basis, but four counties remaining to set apart monies for the purpose.

ADJUSTMENT PAYMENTS ON COTTON ARE EXPLAINED

Every-Day Questions Asked By The Farmer Are Answered In A Statement By The Demonstration Agent Here

The following information was given us by J. A. Beaty, General manager Alabama Cotton Cooperation Association, on cotton "Adjustment Payments."

Who Are Eligible For These Adjustment Payments? Only those persons who, having produced and sold cotton from the 1937 crop, and who shall engage in the production of cotton in 1938 in accordance and in compliance with the 1938 Adjustment Program.

What is the Rate For Pound of the Adjustment Payments? The rate of the Adjustment Payments will be the difference between the average of the ten spot markets on the day the producer makes a bona fide sale of his cotton and 12 cents, but not to exceed three cents per pound.

Upon What Part of The 1937 Crop Will Adjustment Payments be Made? These payments will be made to those producers complying in the 1938 program upon not less than 65 per centum of the base production from the 1937 crop as that base production of each producer was determined, or may hereafter be determined, in accordance with the regulations applicable to the 1937 Soil Conservation program. (Those who participated in the 1937 program know just what their base acreage and normal production figures are. Those who have not cooperated under the 1937 Soil Conservation program may obtain their designated base acreage and normal production by application to the County Agricultural Extension Agent, or to the Chairman of the County Committee administering the Soil Conservation program.)

During What Period of time must the Producer sell his cotton in order to become entitled to the Adjustment Payment?

His cotton must be sold on or before June 30, 1938. Cotton that was sold before the formulation of this program shall be eligible for Adjustment payments to the same extent as that selling thereafter.

When Will Adjustment Payments be Made? The date payment will be actually made is problematical. Payments will be made only to those producers who comply with and cooperate in the application of such Agricultural Adjustment Program as may hereafter be formulated by the United States Department of Agriculture under authority of legislation will not be made on a promise to comply with a program but upon proof that the 1938 Agricultural Program has been complied with. Therefore, it would appear that payments will not be made earlier than July or August, 1938.

The representatives of the Cotton Cooperative Association maintain a record of the cotton handled through the Association and can furnish the necessary information so that at the proper time documents may be filed with the County Agricultural Extension Agent for the Adjustment payments.

Who is Eligible to Borrow? Any farmer who produced cotton this season who will obligate himself to comply with the adjustment program for 1938 as may hereafter be formulated.

What Cotton is eligible for the loan? Any cotton produced from the 1937 crop by or for the applicant which classes 13/16 inch in staple and middling or better in grade, or which classes 7/8 inch or better as to staple and low middling or better as to grade.

At What Rate For pound will loans be made? Middling or better in grade 7/8 inch or better in staple, 4c; Middling or better in grade, 13-16 inch in staple, 3c; Under middling, not below low middling, 7/8 inch or better in staple, 7-3-4c.

By whom will the class of the cotton, upon which loans are made, be determined? The applicant for the loan will state in his loan papers that the cotton is equal to or better than the class required to justify a loan at the rate per pound shown therein. The warehouseman with whom the cotton is stored will furnish a certificate guaranteeing the class of the cotton to be as represented in the loan papers.

What rate of interest will be charged and when will the Notes Mature? The rate of interest will be four per cent per annum and the notes will mature July 31, 1938.

How are these loans made? The procedure for obtaining these loans will be identical with the procedure applicable to loans made against the crop of 1935.

May a Producer place his cotton in the loan and thereafter receive the benefit of the "Adjustment Payment" to be made by the Secretary of Agriculture? A producer may place his cotton in the loan and thereafter with, draw his cotton by paying off the loan, and may then sell his cotton and, if otherwise eligible receive the benefit of "Adjustment Payments" provided the cotton is withdrawn and actually sold prior to July 1, 1938.

Will the cotton cooperative Association Make These Loans? Yes. The Association's representatives in the interior will prepare the loan papers and pay the producers the loan value at that time, for which a charge of fifty cents per bale will be made.

The Association will have a supply of the loan forms as soon as they are available.

J. W. FANT, County Agent.

Protective Life Is Now Observing Its 30th Anniversary

In commemoration of its thirtieth anniversary the Protective Life Insurance Company of Birmingham is running a schedule of advertising in Alabama newspapers. The anniversary advertisement appears in this issue of the Chilton County News. The company is represented in Clanton by John M. Vanderveer, Jr.

The Protective Life was organized thirty years ago this week by the late Governor William D. Jelks. It now operates in territory which extends, Washington, D. C. to Texas.

For three years it has led all companies in the United States in the amount of ordinary business written in Alabama. Its insurance in force now totals approximately $103,000,000 and it occupies a high place among the life insurance companies of the United States.

During the first eight months of 1937 it has increased its insurance force more than it did during the entire year of 1936 which was an record year. The Protective writes all the standard policies and competitive rates plus group and individual, group health and accident, life insurance, family income savings, old age income, and annuities.

CCC CAMP NEWS

Farmers who have found that inoculating hogs and livestock against certain diseases is a profitable course to follow, are finding that inoculation of legumes with bacteria that promote healthy growth is also a profitable practice, according to James H. Wood of the Soil Conservation Service area near Clanton.

Although lespedeza and most of the summer legumes used for erosion control do not require inoculation for successful growth, due to the fact that the soil in this section is already inoculated with bacteria of these groups, crimson clover, vetch, and most of the winter legumes do require inoculation, Mr. Wood said.

Where a good growth of the same crop has been previously made on the land, inoculation probably will not be necessary for growing the crop again, as the soil has been inoculated by the previous growth. Soil from such inoculated areas can be used to aid in inoculating seed of the same crop to be planted on other locations.

Since effective control of erosion by winter legumes depends on getting a good growth that will provide a dense cover for the land, proper inoculation often determines the success or failure of the crop as far as erosion control is concerned, Mr. Wood said.

County Agent J. W. Fant will be glad to advise farmers on the kind of commercial inoculant to buy and the proper method of inoculating their winter legumes, Mr. Wood added.

Clanton Methodist Church News

Each member of every department of our Sunday School should be—and we trust is—quite happy because of the increase not only in attendance, but also in membership of practically every department last Sunday. Did you know that the increase averaged about 25 per cent. And did you also know that we could stand an increase of 50 per cent in our attendance and membership? Would we like to have that increase? Let's prove that we would like for that to happen by working this week among our friends and have that 50 per cent increase by next Sunday. We can have it and we should.

You men of the Bible Class are realizing a nice growth. You have a wonderful opportunity for great growth. Just an invitation here and a word there and a little encouragement another time would be easy for you and a fine thing for your class. How about it, men? We are depending on you to make your class a big one.

If we knew just the word for it, we'd use it and let the choir know how very much they meant to us in the church hour last Sunday. Your singing, choir, filled our hearts with that joy of the soul which, it seems, only the singing of grand old hymns can create. You deserve our appreciation and we give it, while pleading for the same each church service. Please, choir, we need you every one every time.

The attendance at both 11 o'clock and the 7:30 services was good. Those who attended know how extremely good was the sermon Dr. Andrews preached at the 11 o'clock hour and the sermon preached by Dr. Truett at the 7:30 hour. The ones who did not attend really cannot realize what they missed.

Anyway when we attend we receive a mighty blessing which we miss when we do not attend. Is it our desire to miss any blessing? Then let us be at Sunday School next Sunday morning at 9:45; stay for the 1 o'clock service, and then return to church at 7:30 Sunday night.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Miss Margaret Davison, of Thorsby, will talk to the members of the Young Peoples' department of the Sunday School at the Methodist church next Sunday, September 19th, 1937. Every member is urged to attend. It will be a treat to hear Miss Davison.

Bill Fiquette Buys Fine Stallion From Reed Farm In Ohio

(Exclusive to the News)
With the outlook for a bumper year in crops the purebred horse business is swinging into new activity. Preparation for the first exclusive National Percheron Show in October is also giving impetus to the purebred Percheron horse business.

Following the present trend in, increased buying is W. A. Fiquette of Clanton, Ala., who has recently selected the stallion La Hovah 222187 from the herd of Harry E. Reed of Milford Center, Ohio.

This grey yearling colt carries the names of some of the most outstanding progenitors of championship stock in his pedigree. He is sired by La Fayette 196884, a son of the colorful Live which sired numerous International Livestock Exposition grand champions than any other sire of the breed. La Hovah is out of Reneva 2032228, a granddaughter of imported Jehovah grand champion son of the prolific Carnot, winner of the Get of Sire class at every International between 1912-1921, inclusive, and again in 1923, a record never equalled by any other sire of the breed.

Buying of Percherons at the National Show is expected to be the greatest in the history of any fair. So great was the enthusiasm of Percheron breeders to have a National Percheron Show exclusive of all other draft horse breeds at Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 9 to 16, that several of them made up a fund for the expense of advertising and publicizing this show, all of which will be used to attract prospective buyers. Premiums totalling $5,500 will be offered, the largest amount ever given at any Percheron show in the United States. The rich prize money, fall showing and cool weather will combine to make this first exclusive National Percheron Show the most colorful, the most outstanding Percheron exhibition ever held in this country, and one of the most outstanding ever held in the world.

Charging her husband with cruelty, Mrs. Isabelle Mitchell of Mount Vernon, N. Y., who weighs 230 pounds sued for divorce when he bought a midget automobile.

COLLECTING LIQUID RUBBER ON FIRESTONE PLANTATIONS IN LIBERIA

THAT'S WHY YOU GET MORE FOR YOUR MONEY IN FIRESTONE STANDARD TIRES

FIRESTONE builds a first-quality tire made of top grade materials and sells it for less money because Firestone passes savings along to you in the form of extra values. Firestone controls rubber and cotton supplies at their sources, manufactures with greater efficiency and distributes at lower cost. Because of these economies you get —

PROTECTION AGAINST BLOWOUTS—8 extra pounds of rubber are added to every 100 pounds of cord by the patented Gum-Dipping process.

PROTECTION AGAINST PUNCTURES—because under the tread are two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords.

PROTECTION AGAINST SKIDDING—because the tread is scientifically designed.

LONGER NON-SKID MILEAGE—because of the extra tough, long-wearing tread.

Make your car tire-safe now for fall and winter driving. Join the Firestone SAVE A LIFE Campaign today by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Standard Tires—today's top tire value.

RECORDS REQUIRED FOR ADJUSTMENT PAYMENTS

Auburn, Ala.—Cotton producers applying for cotton price adjustment payments will be required to file with their county agricultural conservation associations the original sales certificates or receipts for all cotton sold from the 1937 crop, announces the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. These receipts must show the date of sale, name and address of the producer, number and gross weight of the bales and the signature and address of the buyer.

If cotton is sold in the seed, the receipt must show the number of pounds of seed cotton and the number of pounds expressed in terms of lint cotton, rather than the number of bales. The receipts must also show the pounds of lint, rather than the number of bales and gross weight.

For sales already made, cotton producers will be required to obtain sales certificates or receipts and file them with the secretaries of their county agricultural conservation associations not later than Sept. 30, 1937. This may be done either by mailing the receipt to the secretary of the association or delivering it in person. Duplicate sales certificates or receipts should be retained by the producers.

Receipts for cotton sold after Sept. 15, 1937, must be filed with the secretary of the county agricultural conservation association not later than 15 days after the date of sale.

Under the cotton price adjustment payment plan, for which Congress appropriated $130,000,000, payments will be made on 65 per cent of a grower's 1937 base production, provided the cotton is sold prior to July 1, 1938. A grower, however, will not be paid in excess of his 1937 production. If sufficient funds remain from the $130,000,000, payments will be made on a larger percentage of the base production. The payments will be the difference between 12 cents per pound and the average price of 7-8 inch middling cotton on the day of sale. No payment, however, will be more than 3 cents a pound.

4-H CLUB NEWS

were lovely. Only God can reward such deeds of kindness and expressions of sympathy.

Mrs. Carl Langville, Misses Nelle and Ann Werness and grandchildren.

IN MEMORY

Thorsby has truly lost an esteemed citizen in the passing of Mrs. Martha Ann Grothy on September 8th, age 88.

Her life work was devoted to relieving the sufferings of others. She truly possessed the Charity of which God speaks. "Love thy neighbor as thyself." No task was too great nor time inopportune for her to go when and where she was called.

For six years she was a most patient invalid, but her long useful life and peaceful passing assures us that God in His mercy will bless her with happiness in her eternal home.

Among those from out of town who attended the funeral, September 12th, were: Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Elliott, and Howard, Jr., and granddaughter, Inga Louise Horn all of Birmingham, Mrs. P. C. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Rae-gan of Clanton, and Miss Naomi Turner.

A very touching coincidence follows the death and burial of Mrs. Grothy and the friend who has served as her pastor for the past two winters.

The Rev. A. T. Fant of Moline, Ill., well known to many of our citizens through his winter residence here in recent years, and who had endeared himself to Mrs. Grothy and others in affiliation, passed out of this life on the day preceding the death of Mrs. Grothy.

After her death there was found on his desk a card addressed to Mrs. Grothy. This card reached the daughters one week after their Mother's burial. The card was in the Norwegian language and its translation would be somewhat as follows: "He goes with me all the way. We shall soon find peace and rest over there."

Needless to say this card will be among the treasured possessions of Mrs. Grothy's daughters.

Final plans are being made for the 1937 Chilton County 4-H Jersey Cattle show at McCain's Barn Saturday, September 18th, beginning at 1:00 o'clock.

There will be from 25 to 30 pure-bred Jerseys brought in for this show to compete for prizes. The judges have been obtained. They consist of Mr. A. A. Lauderdale, County Agent from Shelby county, Mr. W. J. Bailey, Dairyman of Montevallo, and the field representative of American Jersey Cattle Club.

The best animals in this show will be cared for another week at which time they will be carried to the State Fair in Birmingham to compete with club calves from eight other counties.

Everyone is extended a cordial invitation to attend this show and see the animals that the boys have been working with during the year.

Below you will find a list of the prizes and their classification, along with a schedule of events to take place during the afternoon:

1:00 p. m.—Judging by club members.

2:00 p. m.—Judging and award of prizes.

NOTICE OF FINAL SETTLEMENT
The State of Alabama, Chilton County.
Probate Court.
In re: Estate of Robert Foshee, Deceased. Lucy A. Skipper, Administratrix.
Lucy A. Skipper, Administratrix of the estate of Robert C. Skipper, appeared on this the 23rd day of August, 1937, and filed her inventory, accounts, vouchers and petition for a final settlement of her administration.
Ordered by the court that the day of September, 1937, be and it is hereby set on which to settle the estate, at which time all persons interested may appear and contest the said settlement, if they so desire.
J. LEE SMITH,
Judge of Probate.

The Mt. Pleasant Home Demonstration Club, met Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 7 at the home of Mrs. Lloyd Mims. We were very glad indeed to have Miss Grace with us.
The meeting was called to order at two o'clock by the President, Mrs. Emmett Smith. The Secretary, Mr. Stanley Kennedy, called the roll and read the minutes of the last meeting. Scripture reading, Psalms 100 were given by Martha Kennedy, which was followed by a song.
During the business discussion, we decided to have a Parcel Post sale and a party on Thursday evening, September 11th at 7 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Emmett Smith. All club members and their families are invited.
Nominations were now in order for the election of new officers. They were elected as follows:
President, Mrs. Emmett Smith; vice President, Mrs. Emmett Reid; Secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Roy Wilson; Assistant secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Kelly Gillespie; Leaders, Mrs. Stanley Kennedy, Martha Kennedy, Mrs. J. B. Parrish, Mrs. Roy Wilson.
Chairmen for the three objectives: Citizenship, Mrs. Emmett Smith; Farm Bureau, Mrs. Emmett Reid; Scholarship, Martha Kennedy.
Following the election of officers Miss Grace gave a very interesting report on her trip to Washington and the many things she learned while away.

We were dismissed by repeating the pledge.
The place of the next meeting will be announced at the party, and ladies, don't forget the party on Thursday the 16th, and a gift to be sold at the parcel post sale, and remember that the husbands are invited too. Every one should bring along an extra dime or maybe two of them to buy a package from the Post office. There will be lots of games too, so prepare for a really enjoyable evening.

STATE OF ALABAMA
CHILTON COUNTY.
IN PROBATE COURT
To Virginia Duncan and Vivienne Duncan, Who Are Minors 12 Years of Age and Who Reside in Atlanta, Ga.:
Whereas, John Foshee, Joint Owner with Virginia Duncan and Vivienne Duncan and Anna R. Foshee, has filed his petition in this Court for an order and proceeding to sell certain real estate for division belonging to said joint owners and the 29th day of September, 1937, has been appointed as the day for the hearing of said petition at the Court House in Chilton County, Alabama.
You are, therefore, hereby commanded as joint owners of said property to appear before the said Court at said time and place and contest said petition if you think proper.
Witness my hand this 2nd day of September, 1937.
J. LEE SMITH,
Judge of Probate.

The State of Alabama, Chilton County, Probate Court, August 1937, Estate of Herbert E. Foshee, Deceased.
To John Foshee, Centerville, Alabama, Virginia and Vivienne Duncan, minors in custody of Mrs. J. P. Wimberly, 775 St. Charles Avenue, Atlanta, Georgia; and Mrs. J. P. Wimberly (formerly Jennie Lee Duncan), 775 St. Charles Avenue, Atlanta, Georgia, as guardian of said minors; and Ethel Foshee, as administratrix de bonis non of the estate of Herbert E. Foshee, deceased; and all other parties interested in said estate, take notice:
That this day came Margaret Foshee, as administratrix of the estate of M. S. Foshee, deceased, and filed her accounts, vouchers, evidence, and statement for final settlement of the acts of such deceased administrator.
It is, therefore, ordered that the 30 day of September, 1937, be appointed a day for making such final settlement; at which time, all parties in interest may appear and contest the same, if they think proper.

CHILTON COUNTY ASSOCIATION

To all pastors, church clerks and chairmen of Committees to re report at the 1937 annual session of the Chilton County Association, may we urge you to be making all necessary arrangements for a full and complete session of our body that is soon to meet with Shiloh church which is located about 8 miles Southwest of Clanton on Route 3. We wish to call to the attention of the churches of our body the all-importance of filling every item possible on your associational letter, also doing it plain, complete and accurate by putting all lamounds and numbers under their proper heading that we may have the correct information by which to have our minutes printed, thereby giving all churches full and complete credit for the things marked for by them during the year. Pastors you please urge all of your churches to pay at least some on the cooperative program. May we all pray that we may have a great meeting to our good and especially that the Master's name will be very greatly honored in our meeting together.

COUNTY FAIR

County Fair.

The free acts will be at 2:00 p. m., Friday, and will consist of Latham's dog, pony and monkey show. A special concession will be Texas Jack and Jean Lee, rapid pistol shot. This is an educational and historical attraction. There are thirty or more other concessions.

The whole outfit will be under the supervision of Littlejohn Exposition Shows, an organization old in the conduct of county fairs and similar attractions. Mr. Littlejohn announces that three session passes will be issued with each community exhibit placed in the exhibit tent.

And in speaking of exhibits—prospects are that there will be a large array of them, and they will be fine, attractively arranged and commanding the attention of all spectators. You are going to be agreeably surprised at the exhibits that will be at this fair; and you will be enlightened about some of the products of Chilton County.

The ball park lot across Maplesville Highway from the CCC camp has been selected as the site for the Bigger and Better Chilton County Fair to be held here beginning on Tuesday, September 28, and ending Saturday, October 2. A complete committee has been selected to assist the committee of the Kiwanis Club in charge of the fair arrangements, and every effort is being put forth to make the fair a real success from every viewpoint.

The site selected is easily accessible, there being plenty of parking space and plenty of room for all the tents, everything connected with the fair and the concessions. Word from Mr. Littlejohn, the manager of the fair, says that from his end of the line, everything points toward a most successful fair at Clanton. He is arranging for all the tents, and there will be two car loads of paraphernalia here ready to be placed on the ground the first of the week.

The cooperation of the farmers of the county is respectfully solicited by the officials and committee in charge of the fair. This is a farmers' proposition, and the more cooperation that is received from the farmers the greater success it will be. Therefore, let us urge that the farmers of the county lend their aid to the Chilton County fair. We want to make it a lasting institution of lasting value; this can be done only by everybody pulling together to make the whole thing a glowing success. This can be done, and it must be done.

any means. As a matter of fact, we rode to Teintsin (about four hours) in a dark baggage car. There we changed to the famous Shanghai Express (That railway station at Teintsin, by the way, was the scene of much shooting not so many days after we were there.) The Shanghai Express was so crowded that Mandy and I had to sleep on the floor of our compartment (built for two and used by five or six for two nights. The heat was awfully bad. I've never been as thoroughly uncomfortable. I kept thinking of the picture "Shanghai Express" of a few years ago and Marlene Dietrich in her flowing chiffons. Wonder how she would have handled the situation.

We can't be sure about it, but we've heard from fairly good sources that the hotel we stayed in in Shanghai has since been blown up. We are certain, however, that the wharf from which we sailed to Hongkong met that fate. We were delayed there at the Junkong Wharf for a whole day, incidentally, while the Chinese had twenty-three million dollars in silver and gold loaded on our boat to be taken to Hongkong. Nothing happened, of course, but it was interesting to know that we were sort of unofficially escorted down to Hongkong by two Japanese submarines.

About a week later when we went over to Canton, we got in for a rather bit of the war scare. It was all over the papers that the Japanese had a number of planes ready to bomb the major Chinese cities (including Canton) the minute they were given the signal. We got there and back, however, without encountering even the famed river pirates of that vicinity (the boat that we were on had been stopped and rifled only two months before. Now the stercor passengers down below were kept under lock and key with armed guards.)

The whole thing was an exciting experience, but we were very thankful to have gotten out of China when we did. Not that the idea of a war is pleasant any time, but at least it's much more comfortable to be sitting in a safe part of the world reading about it than to be right in the middle of it.

County Medical Society.

Dr. W. L. Parrish, County Inspector, reported that he had vaccinated approximately 4250 dogs—rabies during the recent rounds made through the County for this purpose. The County Board of Health strongly urged Dr. Parrish to continue the strict enforcement of the law, especially as it applied to persons who deliberately refuse to have their dogs vaccinated. Dr. Parrish assured the members of this society that it is to see that the law is enforced, that he will do everything possible toward having dogs vaccinated.

Dr. C. P. Hayes, of Elba, Vice-president of the State Medical Society, was a guest of the County Society and read an interesting paper on Typhus fever. After a discussion of the paper by members of the Society, Dr. Hayes discussed the possibility of having a meeting of the Southern Division of the State Medical Society in Chilton County. The Society invited the members of this Division over which Dr. Hayes presides, to a meeting to be held at Mitchell on October 14th.

to some typographical errors in the News we were glad to see the article headed "Why Editors Go to the Front Page." One of the notices particularly appearing in the heading of the story of the Fair. The head stated that "the Fair" would be Friday at the Impressed on the Chilton County Council meeting recently at Alpine, we impressed with some well chosen uttered there by our own Judge the county, in keeping with the program of the county, but due to a local act in the 1936 Legislature, men have been deprived of their

GEO. A. M'CAIN TAKES PAN-AM AGENCY HERE

Becomes Wholesale Distributor For Well Known Oil Company

The announcement that George A. McCain had taken over the agency of the Pan American Petroleum products in this county was made in Clanton recently.

Mr. McCain, for several years one of the most outstanding stable owners and dealers in horses and mules in this county, is widely known throughout this section as a business man as well. He stated that in becoming local wholesale distributor for the well-known Pan-Am gasoline, oils and greases, he intended giving his customers the best to be had in service.

He will have as his assistant and truck driver, Mr. A. D. (Dool) Maddox, who is also well known and liked throughout the county. Mr. Maddox has had several years experience in and around gasoline service stations and will be an asset to the George A. McCain Agency.

Mr. McCain took over the agency succeeding H. G. Popwell, of Clanton. He will have his office in the new Pan-Am Service Station on the highway just north of the McCain Sales Station in Clanton. The Pan American Petroleum Co. is fortunate in securing Mr. McCain as their distributor in this county as his business ability will mean much to the continued growth in popularity of these products.

JERSEY CALF SHOW IS HELD ON SATURDAY

Prize Winners In Various Classes Are Named By The Cattle Judges

The Chilton County 4-H Jersey Cattle show went over with much success. Visits were made to McCain's barn all during the day by farmers and others looking at the cattle brought in by the boys.

During the afternoon the 4-H boys did some judging in order to pick three winners to do the judging at the State Fair, September 27. At two o'clock the cattle were shown and judged, by Mr. A. A. Lauderdale, and Mr. W. J. Bailey. After they made the placings they gave their reasons for the benefit of those attending the show.

Below is a list of the ones that won places in the show:

Clanton Band Composed Of Over Twenty Members Making Rapid Progress In Work

Clanton will soon have a band of young musicians that will be able to hold a light to most any small band in the state, judging from recent activities of the group during practice nights.

The band is composed of both boys and girls who have purchased their own musical instruments and who are paying for their instructions. These instructions are given each Friday night and during the day on Saturdays with Prof. H. A. Crosby, of Wetumpka, as instructor.

Prof. Crosby is one of the outstanding instructors and musicians of the state and has organized a splendid school band at Wetumpka which is playing regularly. He has studied music in the United States Army and Navy and has done some excellent work with the group of young people, here who were organized about a month ago.

Series of Advertisements Tell "What Is Right With Alabama"

One of the most interesting and informative series of advertisements ever released by the Alabama Power Company begins in this issue of the Chilton County News.

These advertisements—except they are not really advertising the power company, but Alabama instead—go a long way in pointing out "What Is Right With Alabama" as president Thomas W. Martin, of the Alabama Power Company, says.

Every citizen of the state will do well to read each of the releases in this series, and find out what is "right" with Alabama. The Alabama Power Company is to be commended for this step in bringing to the attention of the people of this state these interesting and important facts.

Gin Report Shows Big Drop In County

The report of the Bureau of the Census of cotton ginned in Chilton County this year shows a tremendous drop as compared with last year, according to V. C. McKee, special agent of the Bureau.

There were 245 bales of cotton ginned in Chilton County form the crop of 1937 prior to September 1st, as compared with 1500 bales ginned to September 1st of 1936, the report shows.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE PARR PARENTS OF FINE SON

Mr. and Mrs. George Parr (Corrine Polk) have announced the arrival of a fine young son at St. Margaret's Hospital in Montgomery. The young fellow who tipped the scales at better than eight pounds, arrived on September 15th, and has been named George Christopher. Mother and son are doing fine and expect to return to their home here the latter part of the week.

That this is true is evidenced in the splendid line of new Fall and Winter merchandise being displayed in the dry goods stores here now. Each year it seems that the larger stores in Clanton have tied to these honors as they are showing some of the most outstanding values in high quality merchandise and at the most reasonable prices.

Men's suits, sweaters, shoes, hats, ties, shirts and a complete Fall outfit stands out among the new Fall goods. The ladies will have no trouble in finding the nicest things they want in shoes, dresses, hats, coats and even including fur coats.

The point Clanton merchants are bringing out this season is that it is not necessary for even the most particular man or woman to go to larger cities to make their purchase of clothing. A little careful shopping in Clanton at the various dry goods stores will prove this statement. The idea is—shop Clanton first, and read the advertisements in your local newspaper.

Chilton County High School Now Offers Practical Instructions For Life's Work

A study of the enrollment of the Chilton County High school students of this year will reveal that the school is giving practical instructions that can be used by the students today in the process of making a living.

The boys and girls of the Junior 1 and 2 years are making a study of the occupations of Clanton, Chilton county, and of Alabama. What these occupations call for in the way of preparation, are they crowded, or do they offer an opening that promises a job when one is ready to go into this line of work. Do these occupations require special training, and what may one expect in the way of compensation from this kind of work. One hundred eighteen children are studying this course. Eighteen boys and girls are studying directed occupations. This work is limited to the boys and girls of the Senior 2 and 3 classes. These students have a specially trained supervisor to direct them in their study, and to supervise their work while they are actually on the job.

In the field of Vocational Agriculture the boys are taught all phases of scientific agriculture as well as all subjects related to successful farming, such as marketing, cooperative buying and many other subjects. Thirty boys are taking this course.

Vocational Home Economics gives training to the girls in all phases of home making and housekeeping. Fifty-six girls are enrolled in this department.

Good Business Policy

The merchant or dealer who insists upon prompt payments of bills and adopts a strict credit policy is merely observing the rules of good business—good business for himself and good business for you.

Credit losses must be absorbed by the buying public if the merchant is to remain in business. It is directly in favor of your interest as a consumer and buyer that these losses be held at a minimum.

Why should you, who always pay your bills, help take care of the credit extended to one who is careless in meeting his obligations? Why should you, indirectly of course, pay the other fellow's grocery bills, meat account, or clothing bill?

The next time some merchant insists upon prompt payment of any account you may owe, just consider this phase of the subject. Realize that in the end such a policy reacts to your benefit.

If he is slack in his credit policies you may be reasonably sure that he will compel you, in some manner, to pay the account of someone who is willing to run bills but is never willing to pay.

Good Sportsmanship

We have an acquaintance who is a top-notch sportsman. He can cast a fly with amazing skill, and land the big ones if they are there. He has an excellent eye and any bird that passes within the range of his gun has little chance of continuing its flight. He is almost equally proficient at all other outdoor sports.

But we've heard him brag: "I got the limit" after a day in the field, the duck blind or on a stream.

For, in addition to being a good sportsman he is also an ardent conservationist. He is satisfied with a small bag, realizing that the fun of the sport is more important than a full bag, or a limit catch. He doesn't believe in violating game laws, because, he argues, "those laws have been enacted to preserve our sport for years to come. Even when the laws don't seem quite right to me, I observe them anyway, because once we start violating there is no end of it."

No, friends, this fellow is not a character of pure fiction. He is just one of thousands of good sportsmen who have come to realize that unless we practice conservation and carefully observe game laws and the code of good sportsmanship, the time will come soon when all outdoor sports will be under the ban: when there will be no fish in the lakes and streams and no birds in the marshes or highlands.

Now that another hunting season is almost here we feel that the example of such an individual is worth citing. Don't brag about how many birds you have been able to kill; don't think that it a mark of good sportsmanship to take advantage of any good luck that may come your way.

Remember, the number of hunters has increased tremendously in recent years. This puts a heavy strain on the available stock of wild game. It behooves each individual who enjoys outdoor sports, therefore, to become a good conservationist and help preserve the sport for years to come.

After all it's not meat you're after. It's the fun of a day's tramp in the woods or fields or the thrill of getting within range of a flock of wily mallards.

—O—O—

We'd like to see a prize fight or football game that was half as exciting as the radio announcer's version.

A medical group reports that nothing can be done about a bald head. It's not surprising. It seems rather difficult to make any improvements on any heads.

It has been observed that the man who sells his soul rarely sells at a profit.

Let's Temper Our Individualism

"Yes, they'll all co-operate in buying the machinery if they can thresh first," was the cryptic remark of a friend of ours who has spent much time and effort in the cause of co-operation in agriculture.

But it occurred to us that what he had to say about agriculture and the difficulties in acquiring an active spirit of co-operation applies to communities like Chilton County as well. We are all ready to cooperate if we can see sufficient immediate benefits for ourselves. If the goal is a bit remote; if we must accept something on faith, then our enthusiasm for co-operation exhibits a rapid decline.

We wouldn't condemn our fellow citizens severely for this trait. We are all by nature selfish beings, and the experience of the race or thousands of years has emphasized the necessity of looking out for ones own interest first. Many a man finds that he receives little thanks and no return for what he does in behalf of the community, the class or profession in which he is engaged. He is forced to realize early in his career that he must look first to his own welfare and the welfare of those directly dependent upon him.

But sometimes this perfectly normal human trait seems to be a bit exaggerated. There are individuals who might well try to adopt a broader view of the propositions and enterprizes in which they are asked to cooperate and realize that they will gain in the end through the collective action of the citizens of the community.

Individualism is fine but it must be tempered with a little bit of the spirit of cooperation.

—O—O—

For A Broader Understanding

Headlines today are startling. News from the world presents a gory picture of the present state of modern civilization. War against civilians is an accepted fact in China; and the outbreak in Spain proved conclusively that men become no more humane as they advance in the stage of civilization.

It all makes the thoughtful citizen shudder as he considers the dangers now running riot throughout the world. Little wonder there is that American opinion is positively opposed to any step in our international policies which may lead us into a war beyond our own boundaries.

But something more is required today than merely the wish and desire to maintain American neutrality. This is a small world in which we are living, made small by the inventions of the scientists. Transatlantic flight on a regular commercial basis is now inevitable within the next few months. American planes are crossing the Pacific ocean in a few hours. Commerce moves everywhere. Those few places in the world that we consider remote may now be reached in only a few hours. Any neutrality policy our nation is apt to adopt is almost certain to create economic distress if war does come.

These reasons and other arguments are cited by many students of international problems who say that we will avoid war should another world outbreak occur. They recall the American attitude as late as 1916, just one year before we began mustering troops and floating Liberty Loans twenty years ago, to prove that the present attitude may be of little influence in keeping us out of the inevitable world conflict.

These people believe that we can keep our nation free from the scourge of war only if we adopt policies which will help to avert war rather than merely attempt to maintain a position of American isolation.

To discuss this complex and imponderable subject would require a vast amount of time, effort, space and learning. We do not feel equal to the task. But we do believe that the time is approaching when every American citizen should give some thought and devote some study to the interesting subject, because public policy in a nation like ours is nothing more than a reflection of popular opinion. In other words our nation can adopt a sane and logical foreign policy only if its citizens are well informed on the present trend of world affairs.

An understanding of world trends is as important as a knowledge of domestic policies if we, as sovereign voters, are to direct our nation through the maze of complicated issues that face every government in the world.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

In conversation with a devoted mother she made this remark to me, "I never allow my children to eat under gloomy circumstances and I never let them go to bed in a bad humor." Many times have I seen little children driven away from the table in tears and many a time have I heard them cry themselves to sleep. We all know that tears hinder digestion and that there is an inner growth during the hours of slumber. If the child eats while it is shattered under the weight of dark emotions, or if it sleeps when there is a hurting of the heart, that child suffers an injury that should not be pushed into its growing life. We should be very careful indeed to make the meal hour one of joy and to send the children to bed with a happy shout in their souls.

I was in the court room while a man was being tried for stealing. On being placed in the witness chair he decided to make a clean breast of his thieving. He was asked by the lawyer, "Tell the court just how you got into that store." And here is his reply. "I carried a very small boy with me and after breaking out the pane of a window I lifted the small boy through the broken window and made him lift the latch to the back door so I could get in. Thought I to myself, that is just how people get into large sinning. They carry a little sin along with them and that small sin is lifted into the life and that small sin opens the door for larger ones. People commit adultery after they have been to petting parties. People curse after they have used slang. People rob banks after they have taken small change. People get drunk after they have taken drinks in social life. Because of small sins that enter your life—they will soon open the door to larger ones."

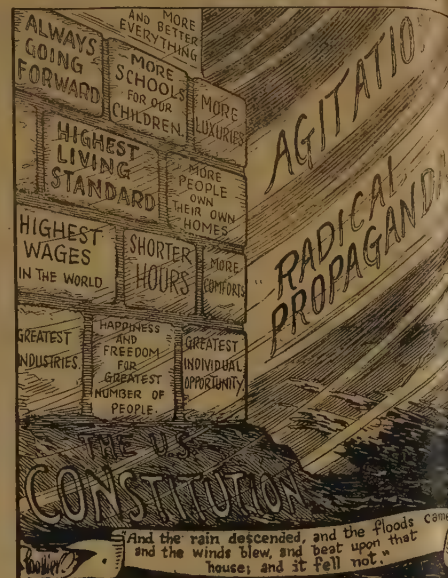

In a certain city a Cathedral clock with its unusual chimes had charmed the community for years. One morning the sweet music did not come from the cathedral spire and a gloom settled down over the community. Something was lacking and on every street corner clusters of people gathered to talk of the missing melody. An expert was sent to examine the clock and the chimes and after much investigation, he found that a small butterfly had become entangled in the machinery and every wheel was standing still. The obstruction was removed and the music again floated into the air. A new happiness settled down over the crowded streets and contentment was felt everywhere. Better be on your guard against little sins. Once you are happy and full of a heavenly music; but in recent years, months or weeks—you have felt a deadness, a dullness in your soul that has robbed you of the joy that once was within. Some little sin has come into your life and that sin has clogged your soul and hushed the music of the heart. Better get the Expert of Galilee to look you over and remove the obstruction and fill your soul with music again.

Many a time at night have I been riding along through a woodland section and looked out and saw a small light glowing on a decaying stump, or among a pile of rubbish. I have investigated these lights to find out that they were small glowworms emitting a bright little candle. At first sight I thought them to be stationary. The glowworms seemed to be standing still, but on patient watching I found that the worm was slowly moving. It is a fact that when a glowworm ceases to move, it also ceases to shine. What a lesson for Christian people to be learned from that little worm. You may be a very small Christian, but you have the power to shine. Remember also, that as long as you grow in grace, as long as you move out in service, as long as you move upward toward God you will emit a light that shines for Christ, but the very moment that you become dormant, the very moment that you cease to serve and move heavenward, that very moment you cease to shine. Like the glowworm—move and shine.

Far out on the plains of the West there is a wood known as the "Locoweed." When cattle feed on this weed it has a strange effect on their vision and locomotion. After eating heartily of the Locoweed a cow will lose its power of coordination. It has no sense of proportion. A wide stream becomes narrow and a narrow stream very wide. The cow that is under the spell of the weed has been seen to pause at a stick on the ground that is not two inches in thickness, lift its front feet into the air and make a great jump to go over, and then in a few moments the same cow will try to step over a high fence. Have you not seen negative thinking men who must have been feasting on the Locoweed? They take a small problem and make it large and they take a large problem and make it small. How foolish to see a full grown cow jumping over a hoe handle. In like manner, how foolish it is for full grown men to make a mountain out of a molehill. Stop eating that Locoweed that makes you jump high over a hoe handle and then try to step over the moon.

When D. K. Kesler of Loveland, Colo., investigated the squeak in the engine of his car, he found a nest of five mice.

Present Development In Transportation Makes Interesting Reading To Public

By W. T. MANER

The Montgomery Advertiser) development of transportation, in agriculture in Alabama has and in hand, each depending upon others.

Settlers connected villages and some of which also used numerous rivers and creeks for inter-communication.

Thousands of miles of railroads and highways make for speedy transportation and communication between the cities and rural sections, and other states.

On the larger rivers, but to a great extent than before railroad development came. Several established routes provide swifter travel than of less than a generation ago.

Bridges Replace Ferries
Concrete and steel bridges have taken the place of practically all ferries and bus lines have supplanted coaches which once operated Alabama's former winding, muddy roads—3,232 miles of which are now surfaced.

The story of transportation in Alabama is in itself an intriguing one, and recently told by Marie Bank-Owen, director of the State Department of Archives and History, in an unpublished volume on Alabama's land and economic history.

The arrival of white settlers in the eighteenth century, traveling in wagons and carriages, some of them bringing household effects in rolling hog-wheeled wagons, made it necessary for the old trails to be widened into roads for ferries to be installed, says Owen.

Along the roads opening up as main lines of travel were the Natchez, the old Federal road and General "military road," names still dear to modern Alabama. Along the 1846 came the development of "roads," then ultra-modern. In the Legislature provided for the construction of companies to construct, graded, turn-pike, railroads and plankroads.

Highway Department Started
The State Highway Department was organized in 1911. Transition of transition from the plank road era to a gigantic roadbuilding developments is another story that dates from then. Meanwhile, steamboats and flatboats plied the Warrior, Alabama, Coosa, Tallapoosa, Tombigbee and Tennessee Rivers. They went as far north as Rome, Ga., then, but deforestation and other factors that shallowed the rivers, together with the development of steam railroads have caused this method of transportation to fall largely into disuse.

However, boats still operate on the Mobile-Alabama waterway as far upstream as Selma—and once in a great while to Montgomery—on the Tennessee, and on the Warrior to Birmingham. An intercoastal canal traverses the southern coast, facilitating the movement of heavy freight without the necessity of barges taking to the rough sea.

"Just as the old Indian canoes had given way to the flatboat, and the flatboat to the steamboat, the latter in time had to give way to the railroad," said Mrs. Owen. "When steam power was discovered and applied to boats, no one thought that this same power would be applied to land transportation."

First Railroad In 1830

Alabama's first little railroad with its huffing and puffing engine was built in 1830. That was the start of the development of a great network of railroad systems totaling more than 5,000 miles.

This State also was the scene of early development of electrical car transportation, Montgomery claiming the distinction of having the first successful street car system in the world, which replaced mule-drawn cars in 1884. The street cars now have been abandoned in favor of motor buses.

Alabama, too, had a part in the early history of aviation. Orville and Wilbur Wright established an experimental air station at Montgomery, on the present site of Maxwell Field, huge U. S. Air Corps tactical school in 1910.

Today Alabama has more than a score of airports and landing fields and is served by two regular airlines.

James H. Hodge of Cincinnati was granted a "love injunction" when he appealed to the court for protection from the unwanted attentions of a girl.

ALABAMA GETS NEW SOIL CONSERVATION PROJECT

A new soil conservation demonstration project, under the Soil Conservation Service, including approximately 4,000 acres is being established in Perry County on the Boguchitta watershed at an early date. The project headquarters will be located in the town of Marion.

Scientific soil-conserving methods will be established on cooperating farms on the new soil erosion control demonstration area. In cooperation with farmers in the area the Service will demonstrate modern soil conserving methods. These will include terracing, contour cultivation, strip cropping, the use of cover crops, systematic crop rotations, the planting and re-seeding of pastures and retired areas, woodland management improvement, and other conservation methods which are suited to land conditions in that part of the state.

The demonstration project is located in two of the principal soil provinces of the state. The upper half of the project area is in the upper coastal plains soil province and the lower half is in the Black Belt soil province.

The Alabama Extension Service will cooperate in this project.

NEWS FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

The Alabama Firemen's Association will conduct its second annual convention here October 6-7. Chief C. L. Ingram, of the Montgomery Fire Department, the convention host, said more than 300 delegates have indicated they will attend.

The convention will be preceded by the annual fireman's institute September 30-October 5. Advanced methods in combating fires will be taught enrollees. Chief Ingram is president of the association; Donald C. White, Florence, first vice-president; L. L. Perry, Mobile, second vice-president and G. E. Grossett, Birmingham, Secretary.

Montgomery, Ala.—Civic agencies of the Capital City are preparing an extensive program of entertainment for Alabama Confederate veterans who will assemble in annual re-union here October 7-8. The veterans were scheduled to convene in May but voted to hold fall sessions instead so as not to conflict with the general reunion held at Jackson, Miss. Paul B. Fuller, Montgomery chamber of commerce secretary and convention chairman, announced headquarters would be maintained at the Jefferson Davis hotel.

Invitations to attend the re-union will be attached to pension checks which State Auditor Charles E. McCall will mail on October 1. Mr. McCall said the pension roll contains 154 names of veterans although many are reported to have died since the last roll was checked.

Montgomery, Ala.—Chairman E. Roy Albright, of the Alabama Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has announced a program of expansion under which counties which voted for repeal will get state liquor stores in the immediate future while in other counties more stores will be opened.

In the classification of counties to get more stores is Montgomery, its third, while unconfirmed reports about the capitol during the week were that Birmingham, Mobile and other larger cities would have their liquor distribution systems expanded well in advance of the holiday season.

While liquor board authorities prepared a program of expansion, Comptroller Charles W. Fox announced the first slice of liquor store revenue would go out to cities and counties by September 30. There was no estimate of the amount of such revenues. Division of the profits under repeal legislation provides that all counties, regardless of whether wet or dry shall receive 20 per cent of the total, the money to be applied equally between health and welfare work in the general fund. Cities in which liquor stores are located will divide the next 20 per cent with no restriction on its use. The state's general fund gets 50 per cent of the remaining liquor money with the welfare fund coming in for 10 per cent.

Your city is judged by its streets
CONCRETE rates 100%

From every standpoint, concrete is the ideal paving material. It saves taxpayers money by reducing original and upkeep costs... is safe in any weather, drains quickly and increases visibility... improves property values—lasts the longest.

Your driving costs are reduced by saving on gas, tires and car repair expense.

Concrete pavements give a clean, spick and span appearance to the community. Concrete's pleasing gray color reflects light, makes it easier to see—reduces accidents, in every kind of weather.

Insist on concrete for safety, comfort and money-saving.

Polk Bros. Offer Fall Auto Service

Wise car owners have their automobiles thoroughly checked over as part of regular September service, according to W. A. Hillman, service manager for Chrysler Sales Corporation, division of Chrysler Corporation.

"Hard summer driving conditions have no ill effects on a well-made car," Mr. Hillman said, "but the combination of high mileage, dusty roads, and heavy demands on tires must be recognized as wearing factors."

"Heavy oil and grease recommended by the manufacturer for warm weather lubrication is no longer suitable in the cool fall weather. Every motorist knows the need for changing lubricants to meet winter weather, but many do not realize the wear entailed when a very heavy grease is still in use during the pleasantly chilly autumn."

"Vacation trips on hot road surfaces of all kinds are bound to have their effects on tires. Even if tires are in safe condition, the knowledge that they have been inspected and tested by an experienced service man contributes to relaxed driving."

"Head-light bulbs lose efficiency with age, reflectors cloud or tarnish, salts used to lay dust on gravel roads attack the paint, and gritty brake linings may score the drums. These conditions may be corrected at small cost by trained men."

Polk Bros. Motor Co., local Chrysler-Plymouth dealer, offer complete service facilities, and a factory-trained personnel under the direction of C. R. Copelan, for correct checking and fall conditioning.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Anderson of Pinkard, Ala., were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. John Kimmey last week end. Dr. and Mrs. John Kimmey had as their guests Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Henner Nichols of Columbiana.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Jones spent the week end in Shawmut, Ala., visiting her brother, Mr. Otis Kent. Mr. and Mrs. Lester Crenshaw accompanied them to Fairfax where they visited relatives of Mr. Crenshaw. Mrs. P. T. Hinkle of Kilby, Ala., was the guest Monday and Tuesday of Mrs. M. L. White.

Mr. and Mrs. George McCain and children spent Sunday as guests of Dr. and Mrs. Hinkle at Kilby, Ala.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Smith and son of Tallapoosa were week end guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Davis.

Miss Ruth Gowan of Alabama College was at home with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Gowan for the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris Hardy of Birmingham were guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Foshee, the past week end.

Mrs. Louie Smith has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Guy of Mt. Creek.

MAPLE SPRINGS

Sunday School was very well attended Sunday though we could make our crowd a little bit larger as some of our folks and lets pull our Sunday School up to an A-1 Sunday School. Mr. Houston Blacklock spent a while Sunday with Mr. Otis Glenn. Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Sandlin was in this community Sunday visiting friends and relatives. Virgie and Virgie Glenn spent a while Saturday evening with Mr. Joe Wilson. Mrs. W. F. Glenn is on our sick list this week. Mr. Joe Dennis spent a while Sunday evening with Mr. Rudolph McDowell. Mr. Clyde Wright spent a while Wednesday night with Mr. Merritt Wilson. Mr. Sam Davis spent a while Friday night with Mr. Oliver Glenn. Miss Elsie Thornton was in this community Sunday afternoon. Several from here attended the singing at Prattville. They reported a nice time. Messrs. Arthur and Evan Mitchell spent a while Saturday night with Mr. Otis Glenn.

Pletcher-Alpine Club Has Barbecue Friday

The Alpine church, west of Clanton, was the scene last Friday afternoon of a fine gathering of people when the Pletcher-Alpine Home Demonstration Club entertained with a chicken barbecue.

The barbecue was held outdoors near the church and the guests included members of the Commissioners Court of the county, the husbands of members of the Club and other prominent citizens of the county. Following the delicious supper, which was prepared by the club members the crowd retired to the church where several short talks were made.

UNUSUAL TOMATO GROWTH BROUGHT TO NEWS OFFICE

C. O. Bell, one of the county's well known farmers brought a most unusual tomato growth to the News office recently. The tomato, or rather, it appeared to be several tomatoes grown together to form one large tomato weighed one pound and was perfectly sound. Mr. Bell is widely known also as an outstanding truck farmer of the county.

Y. W. A. ENJOY WEINER ROAST

The Y. W. A. of the Clanton Baptist church were entertained with a weiner roast given by Pearl, Ruth and Edith Hand last Monday night at Sims grove. The roasting of weiners and marshmallows was enjoyed by the following members: Evelyn Teel, Dorothy Manning, Marilyn Hardy, Gerrie Fiquette, Willie Maude Kelley, Acolian McRee, Louise Morton, Mary Frances Duke, Julia Ruth Hester, Euna Powell, Edna Sumner, Mary Charles Larimore, Ruby Abbott, Mrs. J. R. Mullins and the hostesses.

PREACHING AT LIBERTY HILL ON LAST SUNDAY

Last Sunday was regular meeting day at Liberty Hill church. A large crowd was present and Rev. J. S. Holland delivered an excellent sermon. Rev. Holland is beginning his eleventh year of service at Liberty Hill and all his congregation felt that he is doing a wonderful work and all love him dearly.

Plans are being made to remodel the church and the deacons will meet next Sunday morning at 10:00 at the church to discuss the matter. All are urged to attend this meeting.

Need For More And Better Pastures Seen

At this time of the year cattlemen begin to think in terms of the prospects of their pastures for another year.

When new land is to be put in pasture the clearing of the woods should be done in the fall, so the seed can be planted the following spring (later part of February).

Chilton County needs more and better pastures for this present livestock and for the future development of beef production in this section. In this connection we are planning a trip with Mr. H. S. Shaw to visit his pastures that have been developed in the past few years by planting the adopted varieties of pasture grasses.

The same trip was made last year by farmers and 4-H club members and they found it to be very interesting and beneficial one. Anyone wishing to see Mr. Shaw's pasture and cattlemen should be at the County Agent's office by 1:30 Saturday, September 25th. Mr. Shaw is kindly furnishing a truck and if more room is needed cars will be carried.

Hoping everyone interested in the development of better pastures for

BAKER CLUB NEWS

The Baker Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Miss Annie Baker Tuesday, September 14, with 8 members and two visitors present. Two new members were welcomed to the club. The Club was called to order by the president, Mrs. J. A. Marcus. Several songs were sung after which the roll was called by the Secretary, and the minutes of the previous meeting was read and approved. This being the first meeting of the year new officers were elected for this year's work. The ones elected were as follows:

President, Mrs. J. A. Marcus; vice-president, Mrs. Tom Littlejohn; Secretary, Miss Pauline Sisk; Treasurer, Mrs. Kate Smith; Reporter, Miss Pauline Sisk.

Club chairman of County Council Objectives were appointed as follows: Farm Bureau, Miss Pauline Sisk; Citizenship, Mrs. G. E. Stutz; Scholarship, Mrs. Earl Lowery.

Leaders elected for the new year were as follows:

*Mrs. J. M. Roper, Mrs. Horace Popwell, Mrs. D. G. Baker and Miss Gladys Roper.

After the election of officers the County-wide Fair was discussed and plans were made for the exhibit to be put on by the club women. The following women and girls were put on a committee to help at least a half a day at the Fair at the booth where the club exhibit is. These were as follows: Mrs. Tom Littlejohn, Mrs. J. A. Roper, Mrs. Horace Popwell, Mrs. Kate Smith, Mrs. I. E. Edwards, Mrs. J. A. Marcus, Mrs. D. G. Baker, Miss Gladys Roper and Miss Pauline Sisk. These ladies will help Wednesday, "Children's Day" they will have ice cream, old drinks, different kinds of pies and lots of other things to sell, so come and have a big time with us all.

At a late hour the club was dismissed to meet in October with Mrs. Kate Smith.

FAIRVIEW CLUB NEWS

The Fairview Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. Alice Durbin, on August 17, 1937.

There were eleven members present. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. J. D. Williams. The minutes were read and approved. A demonstration was given at this meeting as it was the first for the new year and new officers were to be elected. These new officers and leaders are as follows:

President, Mrs. J. D. Williams; vice-president, Mrs. W. L. Henley; Secretary, Mrs. Estelle Cowart; Leaders, Mrs. Ruth Jones and Miss Inez McKee.

There being no other business the meeting adjourned until next month.

Poorly Nourished Women— They Just Can't Hold Up

Are you getting proper nourishment from your food, and restful sleep?

A poorly nourished body just can't hold up. And as for that run-down feeling, that nervous fatigue, —don't neglect it!

Cardul, for lack of appetite, poor digestion and nervous fatigue, has been recommended by mothers to daughters — women to women — for over fifty years.

Try it! Thousands of women testify Cardul helped them. Of course, if it does not benefit you, consult a physician.

SARDIS CLUB NEWS

The Sardis Home Demonstration Club met Friday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock at the Sardis Church.

The meeting opened with songs with Mrs. H. R. Ratliff, presiding. Old and new business was taken up and the new officers elected for the coming year were as follows:

President, Mrs. H. L. Ratliff; vice-president, Mrs. R. P. Kendrick, Secretary, Miss Mildred Sansom; Reporter, Miss Mildred Sansom; Leaders, Mrs. G. W. Sansom, Mrs. W. W. Headley, Mrs. E. W. Clinker, Mrs. G. L. Deason.

We were happy to have two visitors from the Alpine-Pletcher club, Mrs. A. B. Jones and daughter, Arrabelle. Mrs. Jones gave a very interesting talk of their club work and how they keep interest in the club.

Various members of the club offered products to be used in the exhibits for the Fair.

With these new officers and leaders we are expecting this year to be one of the best Club years we have ever had.

There being no other business the meeting was closed by praying the Lord's prayer.

Mt. Carmel

Our Sunday School attendance was not so good last Sunday. Maybe because some were so tired they wanted to rest. But we should attend church services and we urge you to be at Sunday School every Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Leach and children spent Sunday with J. C. Scott and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Tarence Eiland were the dinner guests of Mrs. Rita W. Wiley last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Higgins were the Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Childress.

Mr. John Paul Jones of Isabella spent Sunday with Mr. Turner Watley.

Miss Mary Carr Mims is spending this week with her grandfather at Thorsby.

We want to thank Mr. Tarence Eiland for the lamp he gave to the church Sunday night. We pray that the Lord will let his light shine as bright as the lamp light did last night in the church.

There was a good attendance at the B. Y. P. U. last Sunday night and it seemed like everybody was happy.

son is a forceful speaker and we hope to have a large congregation present at his sermon on this occasion. We will raise at this meeting by a free-will offering, money enough to pay the church debt. "It can be done."
A splendid musical program consisting of quartets, solos and congregational singing is being arranged. Refreshments will be served at close of service when the session of fellowship will be enjoyed. The people of Thorsby and adjoining communities cordially invited to attend this service.

Congregational Choir meets at Mrs. H. R. Maddox, president, was in charge of the evening. Group games and stunts were a part of the evening's entertainment. Miss Kathryn Foss music teacher at the Institute, sang

"My Lovely Celia" and "The Slumber Boat." Delicious punch was served.
It was one of the most enjoyable occasions ever held at the Institute.

On Friday afternoon the old members of the Philomathic and Pushmataha Clubs had their first business meeting of the school year. Sponsors chosen for the clubs were Mary Christ for the Pushmataha and Ruth Clark for the Philomathic. This week new members will be chosen.

Proper Managing Of Woods Urged

The new point of view of considering farm woods as a "crop" has been an important factor in reducing such practices as clean-cutting, uncontrolled grazing, and burning over of woodland in the Soil Conservation Service area near Clanton, according to James H. Wood, Superintendent.

Proper management of existing woodland as well as reforestation of steep and badly eroded land is an important phase of soil erosion control, since approximately 3 per cent of all and under cooperative agreement in the area is in woods, Mr. Wood pointed out.

With proper management, almost complete protection would be afforded on this large acreage by existing woods. When clean-cutting, uncontrolled grazing, and burning over of the woodland occur, however, the value of the woods for erosion is greatly reduced, he said. The same practices also reduce the value of the woods as a cash crop.

The crop tree method of woodland management, which is being followed by many cooperating farmers in the area, provides for the marking of certain trees to be developed as a future crop of sawlogs. Thinning and pruning operations are done with a view to increasing the development of these crop trees, Mr. Wood explained.

Under the old practice, many farmers cut their best trees for fuel, fence posts, and other purposes, and left standing the crooked, diseased, and slow-growing trees. The crop tree method has reversed this process and by keeping the undesirable trees thinned out promotes the growth of straight, healthy vigorous trees.

"When the farmer sees his woods from the point of view of a valuable future cash crop," Mr. Wood said, "He has an incentive for protecting his woodland from uncontrolled grazing and fire. When woodland is so protected it provides one of the best known agencies for erosion control."

HISTORY OF HONEY
Some Interesting Facts By D. C. Babcock And Appearing In "The Bee Hive" Of July

EDITOR'S NOTE: The News is indebted to E. H. Calfee, well known farmer and bee raiser of Clanton, Rt. 6 for the following interesting article on honey. It was written by D. C. Babcock, managing editor of "The Bee Hive" a publication devoted to the interests of apirists.

Honey is the oldest and most healthful sweet known to mankind. The Greek philosopher, charmed by the fragrance and flavor of honey, declared it to be dew, distilled from the star and the rainbow. For centuries previous to the development of other sugars, the honeybee provided practically all of the sweet known.

The praises of honey began with the earliest records of ancient Greece. Honey was an important item in the diet of the ancient Greeks and Romans and many of our readers will recall the fable in which Melissa, the honey goddess, saved Jupiter from his devouring father.

The sacred books of India, China, Persia and Egypt speak of honey in laudatory terms. The Old and New Testament, The Talmud, the Koran and the Scandinavian Sagas refer to its invigorating and medicinal properties. The Greek athletes ate honey before entering the arena.

Jacob sent honey as an offering to Joseph, the ruler of Egypt. At least 3,000 years before the first sugar refinery was built.

The ancient heathens used it in sacred ceremonies and the Jewish Ritual forbade its use in sacrifice. Sometimes grafts from precious trees, valuable seeds and birds eggs, when being sent long distances were packed in honey. King Tut was said to have used honey, and a jar of honey 3,000 years old was found in his burial chamber. Even in the days of Mother Goose, "The queen was in the parlor eating bread and honey."

Man's body was created to receive its sweets from fruit sugars and honeys.

What is honey? Honey is the nectar of flowers, gathered by the bees, stored in the hives, where a chemical change and evaporation take place, transforming it into clear honey. It is the nectar of blossoms distilled by the bees. What could be purer?

The raw nectar in the blossoms is little more than sweetened water, plus the essential oils that give each flower its characteristic perfume. Some possess a delicate fragrance that nothing else in the world can give. Honey is not only a sweet but a food sweet and a flavor food. It holds the sunshine from gardens and meadows, the native sweetness of tranquil rain and soils. No synthetics or artificial flavoring can duplicate the mellow deliciousness of honey. It is Nature's purest food sweet!

Within the hive the bees transform it into a substance of nearly equal parts of grape-sugar and fruit sugar, dextrose and levulose. Chemically considered, honey is a concentrated solution of invert sugar and small portions of practically every element used by the human body. It retains all of its original elements, which include: vitamins, sugar (dextrose and levulose), phosphoric acid, lime, iron, and nitrates, and sulphates and carbonates combined with salts of lime and iron.

Ordinarily, honey is judged by its color, flavor, and density. There is almost an endless variety of flowers, making it possible to suit the most exacting connoisseur. Color is a fair guide but not always so. For the famous heather honey of Europe is quite dark and yet no honey stands higher in esteem on that continent. The best honeys of this country are usually spoken of as white.

It is not generally known that there are many different varieties of honey, depending upon the flowers from which the nectar was gathered. As there are thousands of different kinds of flowers, so there are thousands of different flavors of nectar, all gathered by the bees. Just as each flower has its own distinctive perfume, so the nectar from the flowers produces different honeys each with its own particular taste and appearance.

Honey is produced in marketable quantities from the blossoms of many plants. Among the more important are white clover, known the world over; the alfalfa and sweet clover from western states; the orange and sage of California; the catclaw and mesquite of Texas and Arizona, the raspberry from northern Michigan, and linden tulip, and buckwheat from various sections.

Honey not only serves as fuel for muscular activity, but it contributes to the building of a healthy body since it furnishes besides the qualities for vital energy, phosphoric acid, lime, nitrates, sulphates, carbonates, combined with salts of lime and iron, and all in absolutely digestible form.

In preparation for the production of honey, the beekeeper places on his colony of bees either small or large boxes called supers, depending upon whether it is his desire to produce comb or extracted honey. In the case of the small sections or comb honey as ordinarily bought in the grocery store, the bees fill the sections and the beekeeper removes them. After scraping the wood part of sections clean and grading, they are sent to market. Extracted honey is produced in frames ordinarily about 9 inches deep, 17-1/2 inches long and about an inch thick. A sheet of embossed beeswax is placed in the middle of the frame. Upon this wax (comb foundation) the bees construct the cells in which to store honey. The cells are practically the same size, are six-sided and measure approximately 1-5 of an inch across. These cells are built out little by little on each side of the sheet of wax in the center by the bees, and then they proceed to fill the cells with nectar. When nectar is first brought in from the field, it is very thin and contains an excessive amount of moisture. After the honey is stored in the cells, the bees manipulate it in such a manner that the excess moisture is driven off and certain enzymes added to it, converting it into honey. After the honey is ripened by circulating currents of warm air, the bees cover every cell over with a very thin layer of pure white beeswax.

A series of these wax-covered cells together form what is known as a frame of honey. When these frames are completely filled the beekeeper removes them from the hives, takes a hot knife and cuts the tops off the cells of honey. This process is known as uncapping. When all the cells are uncapped, the frames are placed on end in baskets connected with a centrifugal machine. The baskets hanging free in the machine are whirled rapidly. This throws the honey out of the cells and it runs down into the tank of the machine, and out through a large faucet or honey gate. The honey is then heated to about 160 degrees F., thoroughly strained and then bottled or placed in pails, ready for the market.

The majority of honeys crystallize or turn to sugar upon standing. Alfalfa honey crystallizes within a few weeks while Sage and Tupelo honeys seldom crystallize. Honey in the crystallized form is used in large quantities in a number of countries. The average consumption of honey per person in the United States is about 1 1-2 pounds, while in Canada the per capita consumption is over 3 pounds and in New Zealand the average is 5 lbs. A large percentage of the honey eaten in countries with a high per capita honey consumption is in the crystallized form. It is easy to serve.

MISS SHEPHERD'S TRAVELS IN CHINA INTERESTINGLY RELATED

Now to get back to the other phase of our stay in China. The sights we saw. There were really some marvelous ones, too.

To begin with, coming down on the train through northern China we saw hundreds of walled towns and villages. Some had great stone walls and others were just a group of adobe and thatch huts surrounded by a wall of the same material. The people we saw looked very poor and practically all of the women had bound feet. We were glad for the opportunity of seeing these things because they are all (except for the poverty of course) of the really old China that is slowly passing away.

I liked Peiping better than any Oriental city we were in. Perhaps that is because it is most nearly 'Peiping,' the old Chinese name, and more like it by what you would imagine a Chinese city to be. There were even not too many cars on the streets; almost everyone used rickshaws (which, incidentally, are very comfortable here and a lot of fun.) The boulevards around the Legations and our hotel were wide, but the streets in the Chinese City were tiny and winding. They had such picturesque names as Flower Street, Jade Street, Embroidery Street, and Brass Street.

Peiping is really made up of four cities, one within the other, and the heavily walled. The Forbidden City is within the Imperial City, the Imperial in the Chinese, and the Chinese in the Mongolian.

We went first to the Forbidden City, where the Royal Family lived until China became a Republic. It has only been opened to the public since 1916. It was built in 1419 by the third Emperor of the Ming Dynasty. It is a large and impressive place; thick stone walls inside of which were formerly a moat and a series of white stone courts with highly coloured buildings. All of the roofs are of 'Imperial Yellow' porcelain tile (yellow represents the earth and blue represents heaven.) One of the buildings has been turned into a museum. Here is a marvelous collection, brought from all over China of cloisonne, porcelain, large pictures made of carved ivory and painted, teak, jade, and pictures made of blue King Fishers' feathers.

The Temple of Heaven in Peiping is really one of the two loveliest things I've ever seen. The whole group is made up of three temples, typically Chinese in architecture and vivid colouring, and a great white marble Altar. The center stone of the Altar is supposed to be the center of the universe. It is said that any wish you make while standing on this stone and facing the sun is bound to come true within a year. None of us missed the opportunity of making a wish, so we'll be able to prove or disprove the legend in a few months now. The roofs of all the temples are of Peiping, or Heavenly blue—one of the most glorious shades I've ever seen. I think that this is the one spot in China that will stand out in my mind. I do hope that it won't be destroyed by a Japanese shell in the future.

In Peiping we also saw the Sea Palaces (we were very happy to find the lotus in bloom here), the Temple of Confucius and Hall of Classics, and the palace where Marco Polo visited.

One day we made a trip to the Great Wall of China. I really didn't see where they would need much of a wall here; Nankow Pass and the country around it is as wild and mountainous as any I ever expect to see. From the train we took a half hour ride up to the Wall in sedan chairs. May I warn anyone against ever following our example; a ride in a sedan chair is like nothing so much as riding all day at a slow trot.

Shanghai is an entirely different sort of a city from Peiping. Except for the Orientals you see on the streets and a few rickshaws, you could easily take Shanghai for a European city. There are tall buildings and wide streets in the International Settlement and the French Concession. Shanghai, 'the Paris of the East' is termed a marvelous place to live, but there isn't much just for the sightseer. (It is, however probably the best place in the world to shop, particularly noted for laces and linens.)

We did pay a visit to the native Chinese quarters here and saw plenty of the very narrow, winding streets. They say that if you get lost in here without a guide, you could never find your way out and I believe it. In this native city we saw the Mandarins' Gardens and the old Willow Pattern Tea House, built out in a little lake. They were interesting, but not beautiful by any means.

In Canton we went more into the native quarters and saw more of how the people lived than any other place in China. The cramped space, the filth and the poverty were appalling. All the little children seemed to think we were a picnic. They turned out to follow us and smiled and waved continually—calling us names all the while.

The most interesting things we saw in Canton were the Flower Pagoda, the City of the Dead, and the Sun Yat Sen Memorial.

The Flower Pagoda, 1700 years old, is an octagon with nine tiers. It is very tall and slender and, strangely enough, is supposed to cast a shadow. The City of the Dead is where the wealthy Chinese bring their dead for the funeral. The coffins stay here until the priest divines the place in which they are to be buried, after a matter of months or years. In contrast to these two, the Sun Yat Sen Memorial is very modern. It is a large public hall seating over five thousand people. The Chinese are very proud of their architectural accomplishment in this building; there are no inside pillars supporting the great dome-like ceiling (the ceiling, by the way, is of Peiping blue).

From the standpoint of natural beauty, Hong Kong is the most out-standing place I've seen anywhere. In fact, many people give it the classification of one of the three most beautiful ports in the world. Its similarity to Honolulu is startling, except that it is all on a much larger scale, and therefore even lovelier. The view looking down from the Peak to the water and small islands and little Chinese sailboats is almost top-picturesque to be true. Then perched on the side of the mountain and not too close together are beautiful English and wealthy Chinese homes.

Sailing out of the harbor at Hong Kong at night and looking back at the mountain with its lights rising straight up out of the sea is really a marvelous experience. In fact I can't think of a more perfect farewell sight of a country that I liked a great deal.

You Pocket the Difference!

PROBABLY you've noticed that hens just naturally seem to "do better" on some feeds than they do on others. You've watched egg production go up, you've had a healthier flock, you've lost fewer birds. It's more than just an accident that these are the kind of results you get when you feed Purina Laying Chows.

Years of scientific research and testing have gone into the making of every bag of Purina Chows. Thousands of birds have been used in actual experiments at the Purina Experimental Farm. Every conceivable test for making a feed that gives more eggs, healthier hens and uniform laying has been tried. These are the things that make Purina different. These are the things that make your hens lay more eggs, that give you more profit from your flock. These are the "extras" that go into every bag of Checkerboard Chow, the things we mean when we say "See the Difference Purina Makes!"

as soon as they go on sale, October 1st, and others in that office expressed the same wish as they know what the last minute rush will be.

Business licenses, drivers licenses and hunting licenses will go on sale October 1st, also. Business licenses become delinquent November 1st and the present 1937 automobile drivers licenses expire the last day in this month, Judge Smith pointed out this week in his appeal to the public to aid his office in giving the best service possible. After November 14th, automobile owners who fail to purchase their tags will have to pay a penalty.

Tax Assessor Arthur Martin and Tax Collector T. L. McKee added their appeal to the people to come in at the first possible chance and attend to their taxes, and especially when it comes to assessing their automobiles. This step must be taken before an automobile tag can be purchased at the probate office, they pointed out.

Whooping cough, 35; influenza, 18; tuberculosis (all forms), 147; malaria, 34; cancer (all forms), 132; diabetes mellitus 21; pellagra, 33; cerebral hemorrhage, 152; heart disease, 417; pneumonia (all forms), 81; diarrhea and enteritis (under two years), 192; nephritis, 191; diseases associated with childbirth, 23; motor vehicle accidents, 52; other forms of violence, 203.

thousands attending the event.

The Location

Don't forget the location of Chilton County's Bigger and Better Fair. The large baseball lot, and adjoining property across the road from the CCC camp will be the scene of the huge tents and bright lights of the Fair. This is located just west of Clanton's business section, on the Maplesville highway. There will be plenty of parking space for automobile and wagons. The fair grounds can also be reached from the city by going out the West End Street which leads directly to the grounds.

The Clanton Kiwanis Club and other committees interested in making this Fair a huge success for the county, are impressing on the people that this is an agricultural Fair and a farmer's proposition throughout. The company in charge of bringing the side-shows and other concession have assured the committees that everything they have is clean, and honest and that places where they have shown in the past have been well pleased. In fact, many of these places have brought these concessions into their towns more than once.

Remember that the official opening is the night of Tuesday, September 28th, which is next week. The Fair will continue through Saturday, October 2nd, which is Saturday.

Chilton County should make this Fair such a successful event that it will be repeated next year.

Miss Jane Pitts was at home from Alabama College last week end.

Nell's Eat Shoppe Ready For Business

Nell's Eat Shoppe, one of Clanton's popular eating places is ready for business in its new location. The home of this cafe is located near its former place, on the highway, across the street from the News building.

They extend a cordial invitation to the public to visit and inspect new and modern place and enjoy Dixie Club coffee served with delicious out on opening day.

Champion Chopper Come to Clanton So

Peer McLaren, who claims the chopping Championship of America will stage a log cutting contest demonstration here on Tuesday, September 22nd, at 2:00 p. m.

This contest has been arranged by Murray-Bell Hardware Co., who are congratulated for arranging for a visit of this colorful champion. McLaren, whose wizardry with an axe carried him from a poor farm in Australia, to the peak of his profession.

In chopping tours covering a number of years he has chopped before crowds of thousands, both here and abroad. McLaren who is nearly 50 years old, claims that outdoor chopping is a great physical developer. His condition bears out this claim.

The contest is open to any local who has not previously competed against McLaren. A prize of fifty dollars will be paid to any contestant McLaren fails to chop through in two thirds of the time the contestant takes.

The handicap gives all good choppers a sporting chance to win the prize, as it is just like giving 33 in a hundred yard dash.

The only restriction made is that the contestant be permitted to use a double axe. This is the only axe which McLaren himself ever uses, and he uses to chop against a Plumb Axe also allow the handicap.

Every one is cordially invited to attend the demonstration. Those wishing to compete should bring axes with them. It costs nothing to enter the contest.

ED CARLTON BACK TO OPEN BLACKSMITH SHOP

T. E. (Ed) Carlton, well known blacksmith of Clanton, announced last week that he has re-opened his shop near the jail. Mr. Carlton has been confined to his home following an automobile accident and the loss of a leg. He stated that he has a blacksmith on the job who does all shoeing and all kinds of wagon work.

STATE FAIR WILL OPEN ON NEXT FRIDAY

Prizes To Be One Of Most Successful Held
In State

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 22.—According to the premium list just issued, approximately $15,000 in cash prizes will be awarded to exhibitors at the Alabama State Fair to be held in Birmingham during the week of September 27 to October 2.

Hundreds of cash prizes will be divided among the exhibitors. Among these will be five prizes of $200 for the five best displays of products by Future Farmers of America clubs. First prize in this class is $500. For the best all-around exhibits by individual farmers, prizes will be $300, $200, $100 and $50 for the first, second, third and fourth prizes. There are numerous prizes county agents exhibit. For individual farmers there are cash prizes for the best corn, cotton, sugar cane, sorghum, legumes, peanuts, corn meal, stock feed, millet, oats, hay, home cured meats, melons, cantaloupes, and miscellaneous farm products.

In the live stock department there are numerous prizes in the agricultural department. A trip with all expenses paid to the National Dairy Show at Columbus, Ohio, or the International Stock Show at Chicago will be given by the Fair Association for the champion dairy breed calf displayed by a member of a 4-H club or Farmers' club. A similar trip will be given for the exhibitor of the grand champion calf in the breed division.

There are approximately $400 set up for exhibitors of honey bees and honey products in the largest honey show ever to be seen in Alabama. It will be in charge of Alabama Apiarist Thomas Atchison. In connection with the Fair Honey Show, the Alabama Bee Keepers Association includes membership in Mississippi will hold a two-day convention in Birmingham September 30 and October 1.

Alabama is the largest bee shipping state in the nation," states Mr. Atchison. "The bee and honey industry in Alabama approximately $100 per year, the majority of this coming from Canada. We are

Of exceedingly wide interest in this section which was made this week. "Mrs. Clara B. Curry, of Clanton, Alabama, announces the marriage of her daughter, Roberta Curry Darnell, to Mr. Paul Ross Minthorne, in New York City on Saturday afternoon, September 18th.

"Mrs. Minthorne was reared in Clanton where she has a wide circle of friends and admirers. She is an alumna of Brenau Conservatory of Music, of Gainesville, Ga. She has pursued the study of piano and voice in New York City for several years where she attained marked success in opera and over radio as a coloratura soprano. "Mr. Minthorne, a native of Buffalo, N. Y., for sometime a resident of New York City and a graduate of Princeton University, holds a responsible position with the E. I. DuPont, De Nemours & Co., of Wilmington, Delaware, where they will make their home."

Mrs. Claud Craig, Mrs. Hugh Jones, Mrs. Paul Locklear and Mrs. Dick Hayes spent Tuesday in Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawson Nelson have returned to their home in Chattanooga after a visit here with friends and relatives.

planning the largest bee and honey exhibit ever put on at the Alabama State Fair. Already exhibits are contracted for six of the foremost shippers of honey bees in Alabama.

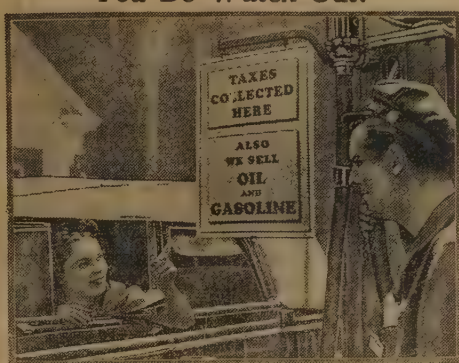

"W. A. Ruffin, of Auburn, president of the Alabama Bee Keepers' Association, and Prof. J. M. Robinson, secretary and Treasurer, have been working for some time on the convention program and also have been of invaluable aid in arranging such a large exhibit for the fair.

Morris Defant, editor of the American Bee Journal at Hamilton, Ill., and Dr. Whitcomb, of the Southern States Bee Culture Laboratory, are to be guest speakers."

The 1937 premium lists also include poultry exhibits with numerous cash prizes offered. There are cash prizes offered for exhibits by housewives, school children, garden experts, artists. In the women's department are many prizes offered for home made quilts, rugs, embroidery, tapestries and all kinds of sewing and needle work.

Entries in the live stock and agricultural departments far exceed last year, and continue to come in on every mail.

Taxes Will Get You Even If You Do Watch Out!

THE SMILE THAT WILL COME OFF!—Jean O'Neil laughs at sign indicating New York service station is tax-collecting agency. But there's no smile on the saleswoman's face. He knows more than 30¢ of every $1 Jean pays him will go to the tax collector, along with $5.49 paid by other customers in a year! He knows also that Jean won't smile when she has to pay 50¢ tax on 10 gallons of gasoline. Federal and state gasoline sales taxes will cost Jean and 28,499,000 other motorists in the U. S. close to a cool billion dollars this year!

LISTER HILL ANNOUNCES HIS CANDIDACY FOR U. S. SENATOR

Pledges Support Behind Democratic Principles; Is Now Serving As One of Alabama's Most Outstanding Congressmen

Congressman Lister Hill, of the Second Alabama District, when announcing today his candidacy to the vacancy in the United States, caused by the promotion of Hugo Black to the Supreme Court, declared his firm allegiance to the principles of the National Democratic Platform, and his "wholehearted supporting accord" towards what he termed "the great objective" of the Democratic Party under the leadership of President Roosevelt.

"In the dark days of March, 1933, I took my place at Franklin D. Roosevelt's side under the flag of Democratic Party principles and party teachings," adding that he had fought for definite laws "all to the end that human welfare shall come first and that the people may have a better and more abundant life; so that men, women, and children will have more to live on and more to live for."

"I am proud," Congressman Hill declared, "that I shall have opportunity to present the issues before the people of a State which was among the first of all the States of the Union to cooperate with and to sustain the high objectives of the National Democratic Administration."

Asserting that he "welcomes the opportunity" to state his position on the wage and hour legislation, Mr. Hill recited the plank of the Democratic platform of 1936, saying that "it was overwhelmingly endorsed by the people of the United States by a majority of 27,000,000 votes and carried in forty-six of the forty-eight States of the Union." "I am a Democrat," said Hill. "Upon that Democratic Platform I stood when elected to Congress last year. I stand on it now."

Hill declared for farm legislation and asserted, "It is obvious that only as the farmer receives fair and parity prices can he buy the products of the industrial worker; and only as the industrial worker receives fair wages can he buy the products of the farm." The Congressman in detailed explanation of the wage and hour legislation said that through clear provisions of the legislation "the interests of the South will be safeguarded."

With regard to legislation for judicial reform, Congressman Hill quotes President Roosevelt's statement of August 25, pointing out that when advocating changes in judicial procedure the President did not "renew suggestion for increase in membership" of the Court. He said that since the President made his suggestion last February, the Supreme Court has completely reversed itself, has not stricken down a single new deal measure, but on the other hand has affirmed a number of them. "The appointment of Alabama's own Mr. Justice Black to the Court," said Congressman Hill, "has greatly strengthened the Court's liberality and inevitably there must be vacancies and additional liberal appointments in the future."

In his lengthy statement defining his position on national issues, Congressman Hill claims that it could not "be legitimately denied that under the leadership of President Roosevelt the National Democratic Administration has brought our nation from the depths of depression toward the heights of prosper-

Clanton Methodist Church News

Maybe our attendance did not quite reach our goal of 50 per cent gain last Sunday, but we had an increase of which we are proud. And we have nothing of which to be ashamed when we compare our records of the last few Sundays with the records of the same Sundays of last year. Rather, the increase is really good. We appreciate the interest each of you are showing by attending and we appreciate your cooperation and work in the Sunday School. Your help encourages the rest of us and you, we are sure, receive the blessings that come only through the work of the Lord. The members of the Young People's Department enjoyed the good message Miss Margaret Davison gave them last Sunday.

May we ask you who have been attending and working recommend our Sunday School to others. And you who are not yet acquainted with our Sunday School, we shall be happy to have you come learn for yourselves, and then become our helpers and boosters also. Each Sunday morning at 9:45 is the time.

Next Sunday is Promotion Day in the Children's Department. Each Sunday at 11 o'clock one will find it amiss to enter our church auditorium to listen prayerfully to our pastor's message. Last Sunday he gave us a message, it seemed, from the Power House of Glory itself. May we not allow our souls to lack the spiritual food we may receive by attending both the 11 o'clock and the 7:30 services at our church. No one is so holy he cannot receive another blessing and be made better by another attendance at church.

Encourage and help our pastor and we will find ourselves feeling better.

that brought panic and disaster in every nook and cranny of our land five years ago," and that "the dire consequences of which were only averted by the Democratic Party coming into power so that "the rights and privileges and the prosperity of the people would be spread among all, and not reserved solely for the benefit of a privileged few."

PIG GROWING CONTESTS GET MUCH INTEREST

"Jazz" Contest To Award $600 In Prizes Over Entire State

Birmingham, Ala. Sept. 22.—The $600 Pig Growing Contest, sponsored by the Cosby-Hodges Milling Company of Birmingham, has created unusual interest throughout Alabama. Hundreds who have entered the contest have reported a remarkable improvement in both quality and size of their pigs. The state has been divided into districts with $50 in cash prizes awarded to winners in each district.

Recent sharp advances in the hog market has apparently eliminated many likely contenders. From Cairo, Ga., comes the report from one of the contenders, Ivy Elkins, who recently sold 61 hogs for the record price of $950. Several of these hogs had been officially entered in the contest. Similar reports come from other contest districts which will naturally narrow the field for possible winners.

The Jazz Pig Growing Contest closes November 11, at which time prize winners will be selected and announced by the judges. Obviously the contest has proved a real incentive to Alabama farmers to raise bigger, better hogs, as recent reports indicate that 1937 will be a banner year for Alabama in the production of pork.

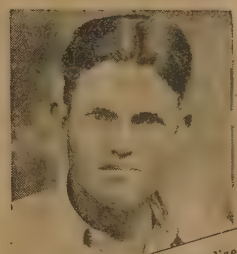

NOTICE TO ALL SPORTSMEN

All license for hunting, fishing and trapping, expires on the 30 day of September, 1937, and all who are caught violating the law after that date will be prosecuted.

YOUR HOGS NEED A BALANCED RATION

JAZZ Pig & Hog Ration is a tested, balanced feed. It contains all the necessary ingredients . . . blended in exactly the right proportions . . . to get frame, growth and strength in pigs. That's why JAZZ FEED pigs bring top prices on the market! If you raise your own corn, we recommend JAZZ Pig & Hog SUPPLEMENT. Buy a bag of either today at your Jazz Dealer.

Ivy R. Elkins Realizes
$950.00 From 61 Hogs

Attending the hog market in the fall, Ivy R. Elkins, a "top" hog raiser, sold 61 hogs for a total of $950.00. He says: "I have never before sold hogs for so much money. The Jazz Pig & Hog Ration is the best I have ever used. It has made my hogs grow faster and heavier than any other ration I have used. I have never before sold hogs for so much money. The Jazz Pig & Hog Ration is the best I have ever used. It has made my hogs grow faster and heavier than any other ration I have used."

SACRED HARP AND HARMONY CONVENTION

A large crowd enjoyed a splendid singing last Sunday at New Harmony Church, Lomax. This event was a success throughout the day.

The opening song was sung by the chairman, T. J. Miller, followed with prayer by Mr. Z. J. Jones. The chairman appointed Joe Jackson, J. J. LeRoy, and Franklin Miller as program committee for the day.

Those taking leading parts during the convention were: W. A. Yates of Montgomery, J. A. Spearman of Wilcoxville, C. P. Ratliff of Perry County, T. J. Miller, F. J. Little, W. L. Sanders, Mrs. Flora Oaks and M. C. Jackson. T. C. Jackson, of Sylacauga led the memorial lesson and little Thomas Jackson sang two songs which were very nice.

One hour was given for lunch and there was plenty for all.

The chairman sang the opening song after noon hour, after which the convention went into a business session.

Election of officers were: L. J. Miller, Chairman; A. A. Jackson vice-chairman and Myrtle Jackson secretary for next year. Cane Creek church was granted our convention for next May.

Those directing during the afternoon session were: J. R. Scott, John Hays, Mrs. Era Culver, J. J. Lecroy of Montgomery, J. H. Willinglily, T. C. Jackson of Sylacauga, W. A. Yates of Montgomery and Mrs. Ruth Henley.

There were 145 of class singers with us which were very good singers besides the fine directors we had from the several counties represented. The convention extends many thanks to our visiting singers from the different parts of the county. We wish to say to the lovers of the sacred music, we appreciate your presence also. It made us all feel good to see such a large crowd of people at New Harmony.

The Chairman sang the closing song, and the convention was closed with prayer by Rev. J. N. Scott.

Funeral Policy Act Hit In Circuit Court

Validity Attacked As It Is Claimed Violation Of State Constitution

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 18.—Hearing of quo warranto proceedings seeking to prevent Brown-Service Funeral Company, Inc., from operating under franchise privileges granted by a 1935 legislative act has been set for Oct. 4, before Judge J. Russell McElroy in Circuit Court here.

The proceedings, instituted by Thos. E. Skinner, as attorney for J. H. Highsmith, attacked validity of the act, claiming that it violates Sections 6, 22 and 45 of the state constitution and that the subject of the act is not clearly expressed in the title.

The petition charges that the act constitutes an unlawful discrimination in favor of mutual aid, benefit of industrial companies, such as the respondent concern, and against insurance companies writing policies that impose the same liability. It also was claimed the act impairs the obligation of all outstanding contract or policies issued by the concern prior to passage of the statute June 10, 1935.

A recent campaign by a well known clergyman against the use of lip-stick is merely lending publicity to a campaign that has been going on for years. All of the young men of our acquaintance have been setting their faces against it for years.

Rating Guide To Contain Over Four Thousand Names

According to the latest report the Credit Guide for Chilton County will be ready for delivery in a short time and the merchants and professional men will have something authoritative on which to base their credit decisions.

The sponsors of the Guide, The Merchants Mercantile Company, state that they will have at least 4,000 ratings for the county and that they have never published a guide that they consider more representative than the Chilton County guide will be.

Unusual cooperation has been shown by the subscribers and it was a rare case where a list of delinquents was not contributed by the business or professional man who agreed to cooperate in the undertaking.

The company feels that they have done a constructive piece of work in the county and that the smallest amount of antagonism possible has been aroused. A few mistakes have been made in the listing of names but these have been corrected as quickly as possible and the guide will be authentic and will be an impartial statement of the way some of the people in Chilton County pay or do not pay.

Fine F. F. A. Meeting Held At Jemison

The Chilsheletoga F. F. A. held the second meeting of the new year at Jemison Monday night, Sept. 20. There were four chapters present. Music by the Clanton chapter string band was a feature of the evening. The standing committees made their monthly reports and most of them are making fine progress.

The district advisor, A. L. Smith, has been removed from this district and H. D. Denson was elected new advisor. The boys feel that he will make a good advisor and instruction leader. The Marbury Chapter, a new member, was cordially invited into this district. This chapter makes a total membership of six chapters in this district. A new activity program was outlined by the district.

What's RIGHT with ALABAMA

a MONUMENT to an ENEMY

"Not more fatal are these pursuits (certain dangerous trades) to life than is the stupid folly of exclusive cotton culture to prosperity and independence."

—Editor A. H. Keller, at about 1890, as quoted in Moore's "History of Alabama."

ALTHOUGH within the memory of Alabamians it had been known that Alabama enjoyed a "growing season" ranging from almost 300 days in the northern section to 300 days in the coastal areas; that rainfall was abundant and well distributed during the growing season, cotton remained king until 1900, when scientific agriculture and the idea of widespread diversification of crops began to take root in Alabama. In November, 1908, Dr. Knapp of the United States Bureau of Plant Industry launched the farm demonstration and extension work in Alabama.

Since then, progress toward correcting the condition described by Keller in 1890 has been steady. Today we find Alabama importing less and less of farm products from other states to feed her citizens. We find great improvement in the breeds of hogs and cattle in many counties. Crops are becoming increasingly diversified, and fruits, nuts, vegetables, and forage crops are being grown in commercial quantities. Dairying has made steady progress, and Alabama is gradually approaching the day when it can be said that she is agriculturally self-sufficient and well-balanced.

Much of the credit for this progress is due the farm extension workers and home demonstration agents who have carried on their work courageously when, at times, it must have seemed that nature was conspiring against them.

But credit must be given, too, to other citizens of the State for their fortitude in the face of adversity. Their attitude is best typified by what the people of Coffee County did, when in 1915, the Mexican cotton boll weevil began his raids and depredation. They took counsel among themselves and with their agricultural agents. By 1917, cattle, hogs, peanuts, hay, corn, potatoes, sugar cane and other crops were planted. An income of more than 5 million dollars was realized from peanuts alone, and hogs and cattle were shipped in car-load lots.

The dictatorship of cotton was broken!

And then, in 1919, inspired by R. O. Fleming, a merchant and member of the city council, the citizens of Enterprise erected their famous "monument to the Boll Weevil"—the only monument to a bug in the world. Some have said that it is really a monument to the spirit of a people. We like to consider it such—one of the "right" things about Alabama.

Truly, Alabama has come a long way agriculturally since that day in 1890 when Editor Keller sounded his warning. Yes, she has yet a pace to go before the long-desired balance between agriculture and industry will come about, and before crop diversification will be in ideal proportion.

But she is making progress—and that is right!

That's What I Think

—O-O—

Saul M. Goldstein

The summer vacation is over for many of our younger friends, and before much longer it will be over for many more; the school doors have opened. The carefree days of June, July and August have passed in 1937 just as they did in many years gone by when we were younger and reluctantly gave up our days to schoolrooms as September came along.

The problem of educating the younger generation is a much more complex one than most of us realize. A mother beset by young children well comes the opening of school that she may have some relaxation from answering their questions and catering to their needs; and yet that same mother seldom appreciates the patience and effort which the instructors exert to mold those young children into useful adult citizens of the state. Superintendents, principals and teachers alike spend much of their time trying to find the best way to guide these children; one has only to inspect the modern school and compare it with that of so recent a time as twenty years ago to discover what changes have been made to make education most meaningful.

In our younger days an education consisted in absorbing as much as possible of a quantity of information on a variety of subjects from the simple rudiments of reading, writing and arithmetic to the higher forms of trigonometry, Latin and English composition. At the end of each term of school we were subjected to an examination to determine just how large a quantity of this information we had managed to retain; and if that quantity exceeded the set proportion which our teachers had determined beforehand to be suitable, we were passed on to a higher grade to get more advanced doses of information.

Today, however, while it is still necessary in many instances for pupils to prove on paper that they have absorbed and retained a certain percentage of the knowledge passed out to them by books and teachers, education looks more carefully at the individual and says: "It is not enough to cram into this person a stated amount of information; we must prepare him for a useful life and a proper participation in the community life."

A survey of the present enrollment of the Chilton County High School, consisting of more than 350 children in six grades, reveals the interesting fact that more than ninety-five per cent of them are receiving one or another type of vocational instruction.

In plain words, the vast majority of them are being trained to make a living—the first requisite in this complex civilization of ours, 1937 model.

We make a great mistake in leaving the education of our children solely up to the schools and the teachers. We are failing in our duty to those children and to our community if we are satisfied merely to pack them off to school every morning and breathe a sigh of relief in doing so. Unless we can supplement the formal instruction of the schoolhouse with other aids to better training, the best teachers in the world cannot make good citizens and good providers out of our Johns and Marys.

We hold up the example of Abraham Lincoln to our boys and girls, to show them that it is possible for a poor farm boy born in a log cabin to become President of the United States; and we tell stories of his walking many miles through the woods at night to borrow a book and then reading late into the night by firelight and candlelight to achieve the knowledge which was to make him President. "By golly, that ought to teach them young 'uns to read and get some book learnin' in 'em!"

Read what? School textbooks containing that same dry information which our school systems are rejecting as inadequate for the proper training of our youth? Dime magazines with their lurid stories of love, adventure, gangsters to set a good example to the younger generation? A would-be Lincoln of Chilton County in this year 1937 would have to walk many miles indeed to seek a book to read if they would go beyond the scope of his formal school training.

We can excite enough popular support to build a City Hall; we can raise arms for an airport; we can raise funds to present a big spectacle to delight that report we can construct a system that, when properly, can't we provide a Free Public Library full of good wholesome books for our children to read, and from which to learn that which makes for better citizens?

Can organizations, parent-teacher associations, child welfare committees, all should combine in one huge effort to provide this greatly needed project for our county.

At least, that's what I think.

The uniform accounting system for the counties of Alabama enacted by the 1935 Legislature will enable the examiners of accounts to audit County records in much less time and at much less cost to the Counties. Fewer examiners will be required. The law now requires that County and State records be checked at least once every two years. This law was also passed in 1935.

IN MEMORY

On Sept. 5th, the death angel visited the home of Mrs. Tiney Wesson and carried her away to that great beyond. She bid this farewell with a smile and went to live with Jesus in the skies. She leaves 3 sons and 4 daughters and a host of friends and relatives to mourn for her. But let us not be weeping her life on earth was over. She has gone to dwell with Jesus and love ones gone before.

To all of her dear children left in this world of sin, live right and meet mother with her a new life began.

EXPRESSION OF APPRECIATION

To the Editor of the Chilton County News:

Permit me to express through your paper my sincere appreciation for the courtesy extended to me and the church I represent and the two members who accompanied Mrs. J. B. Downs, Jr., and Mrs. Monroe Crowson, by your city and county officials and professional business people last week during our annual Harvest Ingathering Campaign.

In all my 22 years of experience in the gospel ministry and soliciting for your city and county officials and professional business people last week during our annual Harvest Ingathering Campaign.

I wish to congratulate the architecture of your public and private buildings. They seem to me to be very fitting for the size of your city, and indicates wise planning and economy in expenditure.

I wish to assure the people of Clanton that I shall do my utmost to cooperate in every way possible to make your good city better.

ALABAMA FARMERS LEAD MANY PHASES OF WORK

Alabama farmers are leading all other southern states in carrying out improved fertilizers practices, in using modern methods of controlling insects in keeping AAA account books, in improving their methods of making butter and cheese on the farm, and are leading in many phases of agricultural economics and farm management as well as in nutritional work.

Alabama also is leading in the number of farms on which debts have been adjusted; stands at the top in 4-H club enrollment; is second in the number of home demonstration club members.

is second in truck crop improvement work; stands second in the number of acres of land terraced during the past year.

These facts are given by C. L. Chamber, in charge of agricultural extension work in the South, to P. O. Davis director of Alabama Extension Service. "The extension Service is doing an excellent educational job in Alabama and we hope that you will continue to push forward with a constructive, educational program," he says.

"Records show that Alabama farmers lead in following improved fertilization practices," said Mr. Chambers in complimenting the Extension Service on, "the excellent manner in which it has carried the findings of the Alabama Experiment Station to farmers and has gotten the farmers to follow these recommendations." Estimates are that the Alabama farmers are this year producing an average crop of 245 pounds of lint cotton per acre, the largest on record in the state. Mr. Chambers attributes much of this increase to farmers carrying out recommendations of the Experiment Station and Extension Service.

You Can Bank on the WEBER Wagon for Years of Hard Work

IF YOU need a strong, light-draft wagon for use over all kinds of going, you can't get any wagon better than the Weber. And it is priced right, too.

Thoroughly seasoned "A" grade lumber is used in the wheels, axles, reach, and tongue. The finest oak and hickory are used in the wheels, and the steel tire and hub bands are put on to stay by a hydraulic press.

Weber farm gears and boxes have been giving the most satisfactory service for nearly a hundred years. Don't buy any wagon until you have examined the Weber. Various capacities and sizes available to meet practically every hauling need.

FREE TEXTBOOKS FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN

More than 400,000 children have received the benefits of the State's free textbooks since the law was put in operation in 1935.

The Legislature in 1935, enacted a law to furnish to children in the public schools free adopted textbooks for the First, Second and Third Grades.

This law provided that for the scholastic years 1935-36 all children in the First Grade should be supplied books free of charge, and for the year 1936-37, all pupils in the First and Second Grades should have these books free, and the year 1937-38 these books furnished by the State.

Appropriations were made to buy these books and the State Department of Education in 1935 purchased 520,848 books to be used by pupils in the First Grade. These books were purchased at 15 per cent less than they could have been bought at the school depository by the individual. They cost $175,000.00. These books would have cost each pupil $5.33.

During the second year (1936-37) 85,531 additional books were needed for the First Grade, and were purchased for $2,427.58. Second Grade books for this year, to the number of 340,007 were purchased for $122,572.22. These books would have cost each pupil $2.20.

During the present year books to the amount of $225,000.00 have been purchased for the three grades, and are being distributed to the counties thru the office of the County and City Superintendents of Education.

For the purpose of replacement and for additional books as needed, $200,000.00 annually is appropriated.

The County Superintendent and the City Superintendent is responsible for these books and the teacher is responsible to the Superintendent.

Under the contract the State get a donation from the depository of 15 per cent of the sales on the books bought by the State, 10 per cent of which is paid in cash to the State and 5 per cent in books. The 10 per cent is being used to take care of the books and the 5 per cent in books goes to the Counties.

In addition to this the State gets 3.4 per cent on all books sold by the State depository, through the several branch depositories.

By October 1st, 1938, the State will have spent for textbooks $725,000.00 and will have received from the depository in cash donations $72,500.00 $36,250.00 in books, besides the age on sales.

These figures are from records of the Department of Education.

Chopping Man
When we first saw that log in front of Murray-Bell Hardware store, thought perhaps Jimmy Bell was into the sawmill business. But investigation we found that log the one Peter McLaren, the champion chopper, will fall into when his on his chopping contest here on 5th. We've been doing a little investigating lately with this idea in mind to win that contest. However, just probably an idea—nothing more.

Jim Walton Here
Every now and then in the past few years, we have read in the papers of Col. Jim Walton had stopped serious duties. We read the articles of Col. Jim and never once thought could be visited by the gentleman. We remember, and Col. Jim spent several days in Clanton in the interest of proposed memorial to Samuel Dale, Jr. Col. Walton gave us some interesting historical data about our county.

Felicitations
A hearty handshake this week for our affable and accommodating Mr. H. F. Downs for a deed commendable. When Postmaster Downs sees an opportunity to do something for his city and county, he hesitates and seldom asks questions. This week he faltered not when opportunity presented itself for him to Clanton some worthwhile publication—even if he did have to write a home check to do it—and, even had the wrong impression. Any Postmaster Downs is entirely ready for the advertising space Clanton that will appear in a coming edition of The Alabama Farmer. We are looking forward to this as we believe it to be the first time this has ever been done. If Mr. Downs receives nothing for this commendable act than tribute, he is deserving of the praise of every citizen of the city.

After Things
In a conversation with our friend Lee Smith the other day, we heard carefully and when he finished he said definitely that the business about this hard-surfaced as many miles of county roads possible. We decided that with backing of any other citizen can aid, that Judge Smith and Commissioners will get what they going after in this matter. Our support is with them in this progressive effort.

Went To The Fair
I went to the county fair the other night and it was difficult to see for so much. We spent a great deal of time in the large tent housing various exhibits from over the county. They are most interesting and educational, giving us a better insight into what our communities are doing in the progress they are making. A lot of fun out there at the fair. One of the interesting exhibits is that prepared by the Dickey Co., of which O. T. Dickey is head. exhibit shows a fine outlay of funds to be found in this county.

Be Back
I won't be long until Bonnie Hand, the editor of the News will be at his post on the newspaper following a recent operation. During his absence, Ewart Corley, who has been pinching for Bonnie in excellent manner, is carrying on in as associate editor of a weekly paper.

New Senator
January 4th, this year, voters of Alabama will go to the polls to cast their votes for their choice of a new U. S. Senator. Being a special occasion we doubt there being a great deal of interest shown. However, who have already announced as candidates will make the campaign a lively one indeed. There's Congressman Lister Hill, of Montgomery, of the most able speakers and representatives we have known or heard of. Then former Senator Thomas Helms has thrown his ten-gallon hat into the ring which makes old-timers recall days of old when "Colton" Helms was tearing round the country reciting things in a big way in Washington. But now, Congressman Hill has taken the spotlight along with Alabama in the nation's capital.

planting sufficient acreage of conserving crops this fall farm- operating in the 1937 Agricultural conservation program may avoid failure otherwise to have the soil-conserving acreage.

MANER WANTS 1940 MANDATE FOR NEW DEAL

Addresses Connecticut Young Democrats At Hartford

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 25.—(Special)—A young Alabama leader in Democratic ranks told a State-wide gathering of Connecticut Democrats here tonight that the purpose behind organizational activities and membership expansion of the Young Democratic Clubs of America was to contribute toward "a third consecutive mandate in 1940 for the New Deal."

Pitt Tyson Maner of Montgomery, president of the national organization, was principal speaker at a banquet honoring John M. Bailey, of Hartford, who took office as national treasurer under Maner.

"First voters" are to be sought for Democratic affiliation as a part of the national membership drive to be directed by Maner. Figures quoted by Maner from the Census Bureau show that approximately 8,000,000 young men and women qualify as new voters every four years.

BEAN & TAYLOR AND THE TAYLOR GROC. OFFERS VALUES

A large advertisement in this issue of the News from the well known firm of Bean & Taylor Grocery Co., and the Taylor Grocery & Market, is listing many grocery bargains for the week end.

The managers of these two well-known stores are delighted to be able to offer such outstanding grocery values to their customers this week.

Clanton Sees Part Of Nation's Army

Residents of Chilton county whose homes are near the Birmingham-Montgomery highway, and others who were in town Tuesday morning, saw part of Uncle Sam's real army pass thru en route to Birmingham from Montgomery.

Over 1,000 officers and men of the 29th Infantry, reinforced, composed this huge caravan of trucks and the latest type fighting armored tanks. The battalion, passing in groups of thirty minutes apart, was escorted by Alabama Highway Patrolmen and right-of-way was given them over all other traffic.

Gypsy Ann Boyd Is Nationally Known In Riding Circles

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Boyd of Selma, will be interested in the following news of their lovely little daughter, Gypsy Ann taken from "What's Happening in Alabama."

Gypsy Ann Boyd, young equestrienne of Selma, and her new pony "Cotton Stockings," have been scoring some remarkable wins in horse shows in Kentucky, according to word received by Selma friends in a show billed as world championship event in the five-gaited pony class. In an earlier show she placed first in her class. Gypsy Ann won a large number of blue ribbons last year with her three-gaited pony, Hot Toddy, and has switched to the five-gaited class with her new pony this year. She is considered the outstanding young rider in Alabama. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Boyd, of Selma. The home folks are expecting to see Gypsy Ann in action at the Selma Horse Show, which will be held Oct. 19.

Gin Report Shows Large Shortage Under Last Year

The cotton ginning report for Chilton County as issued by the Bureau of the Census through their local special agent, V. C. McKee, shows a huge decrease in the number of bales ginned in this county as compared with the number ginned in 1936.

The report shows that there were 3,157 bales of cotton ginned in Chilton County from the 1937 crop prior to September 16th, as compared with 7,612 bales ginner to September 16th, 1936 from last year's crop.

Judge Smith Using Every Effort To Hard Surface County Roads

Seeking Federal Aid Funds To Assist County In Hard-Surfacing Roads; Commissioners Also Bending Every Effort In Work

Chilton County will no doubt see some action in the very near future in regards to hard-surfacing county roads, according to a statement made this week by Judge J. Lee Smith, who is spending considerable time and effort toward this end.

Judge Smith visited the offices of the State Highway Department last Monday to determine just what this county will have to do in order to obtain Federal funds for the paving of county roads.

He conferred with C. J. Shearlock Jr., one of the engineers of the department who looks after these matters. Judge Smith stated that he can see no reason at present why Chilton County should not be eligible to receive these funds and that he with the members of the Commissioners Court, intended doing all in their power to bring these Federal road funds into this county. The Court will go back to Montgomery next week to impress on the proper officials that this county wants to go into this work. Judge Smith stated.

Before any work is started in a County under the Two-Way Plan, it is necessary that the State Highway Commission and the governing body of the County reach a definite agreement as to the method of operation of the proposed project. The substance of these agreements is that the County and State will share equally in the cost of proposed work. The County is given the privilege of selecting the road that is to be paved and also the privilege of furnishing equipment for the work at established rates that are equitable. The type of pavement is selected by the Highway Commission and all work is performed under the direction of the Chief Engineer of the Highway Department. In many instances, the governing body of a county in order to finance its share of the cost of a project, has authorized the State Comptroller to make direct remittance to the State Highway Department from funds derived from one cent of the Gasoline Tax to which the County is entitled. The Highway Department disburses this sum for the County, together with similar sum contributed by the State. In this way the work progresses as fast as the funds contributed will permit. In other instances the County has chosen to perform the necessary grading, drainage, and base course work; the State to perform the paving operations. In this way the County controls the progress of the work.

ROBBERY AT MAPLESVILLE IS FRUSTRATED

Shots Exchanged When 2 Stores Burglarized Last Wednesday

One man is in jail in Clanton with shot wounds, and others are being sought as the result of a robbery at Maplesville Wednesday night of last week.

The Maplesville Hardware Company was the heaviest loser in the robbery as the burglars gathered up guns, shells and other merchandise, including some cash. The store of C. C. Coburn was the next victim but one of Maplesville's merchants and citizens, heard the burglars and possibly frustrated any further attempts at robbery in the town that night.

J. W. Gandy, grocery store operator, heard the noises in the night and on investigation, saw the men, three it is believed, and when they failed to halt at his command, they also fired several shots.

Chilton County Fair Gets Well Underway

Exhibits From Communities And Other Sources Attracting Much Attention; Brilliant Public Wedding Set For Tonight

With the bright lights flashing and climbing with the large ferris wheel, glistering throughout the huge exhibit tent and other attractions, Chilton County's Bigger and Better Fair, officially opened with a bang Tuesday night with thousands in attendance.

The main entrance of the fair leads right into the tent housing the many attractive and educational exhibits from all sections of the county. Many communities have exhibits there, and several private exhibits are attracting wide attention.

After going through the exhibit tent those attending the fair go into the midway where the free acts are being given by the famous Alton Family. The Alton Brothers are some of the funniest entertainers ever seen in Clanton and their comedy acrobatic act attracts both young and old. The Alton Family, composed of five persons, gives its free acts on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons and nights. They alone are worth the price of admission.

The ferris wheel, the merry-go-round, and the other rides are also attracting much attention.

War Does Not Pay

Howard Vincent O'Brien, famous newspaper columnist, recently interviewed a valet assigned to him during his European visit. The subject was the impending war, and this humble citizen offered some interesting statements for publication.

The imminent war all depends, in this gentleman's opinion, upon how much people can endure and the extent of their understanding. He referred to munition manufacture, and expressed the view that it can only bring misery. When people are not building houses, nor making clothing or the other necessities and luxuries which make life enjoyable.

High wages in the manufacture of materials of war doesn't help much, because prices rise for the good and sufficient reason that there are not enough people producing the goods of commerce.

This old gentleman concluded with some interesting remarks upon rearmament and misery. The more secure a nation becomes from dangers of foreign attack the more miserable its citizens become from want and privation.

It seems strange and unfortunate that more people cannot understand all this. If they could come to realize the enormous cost of maintaining war machines, if they could realize that in the end war cannot pay, perhaps they would place in office men who talked less about national honor and national destiny and more about the welfare of the people.

They Do Read The Ads

Many editors realize that the advertising columns of the average newspaper appeal to more readers than the news sections. They have discovered from experience that many subscribers are more interested in the messages of the merchants of the community than in the editorials and news features which are compiled at considerable effort.

"I take it for the ads," they explain, "because I find that reading the ads pays. I can save much more than the cost of the subscription by watching for the bargains that the merchants in town have to offer."

This merely emphasizes what we have said on many previous occasions. Advertising is news—news that helps the buyer get greater value for every dollar he has to spend.

More than that it is not merely price advertising which interests the average news paper reader. The news that the merchant or dealer has to impart on new models, new styles, and new services is equally important. It is not necessary to cut prices to offer something that will interest the public. Readers may be equally interested in the cut and style of a new garment and in the features of a car or a radio; or they may desire to know what local merchant is handling a merchandise they have seen advertised in some magazine of national circulation.

Thus the merchant who tells the public about his business, his policies, his service and his merchandise is not only providing a valuable feature of great reader interest but he is also building up a vast amount of public interest in his business.

Advertising gets results. You will be convinced of that when you talk to the subscribers of the Chilton County News.

Most advice, observes a friend, costs nothing and is usually worth all it costs.

—o-o-o—

It works the same with the government as it does with us. It's easier to get into debt than out.

—o-o-o—

In this matter of giving until it hurts some people seem to be extremely sensitive to pain.

A Good Example

There are a thousand and one good arguments on why you should buy at home. It is the merchants of our community who pay taxes to maintain our local government and operate our school system. It is the merchants upon whom you must depend for support for every worthy cause.

A community made up of live-wire, progressive merchants in a community that is continually forging ahead, a community where property values are stable or on the advance.

But alas, strange as it may seem, a few of our merchants who agree with these sentiments in principle do not care to apply them in practice. In our own business we find that a few will place printing orders with outsiders in spite of the fact that printing produced here in the community helps employment and contributes something to the general well being of the community. If this is true in printing it must be true in other lines as well.

To these few merchants we urge a serious consideration of the vital importance of extending support first to home business. You as business men must set the example. If you fail to set such an example can you expect other citizens to believe that buying at home is good business?

It's up to you. One good example will accomplish more than a thousand insincere sermons.

Men Wanted

There's work to be done here in Chilton County; work that calls for the enthusiasm the imagination and the energy of young men. Our community is not finished. There are almost unlimited opportunities for improvement merely through serious, conscientious, determined work in behalf of the community.

There is no good reason why this entire job should be left only to the old wheel horses. They've done their part. They can still help by contributions of judgment and advice. But the real job must now fall to the young business and professional men of the community who should go on from where the old timers left off, and make our community one of the outstanding towns of its size in our entire state.

This is no reflection upon the older citizens of the community. They deserve a tribute for what has been accomplished in the years gone by. But they cannot, and should not be expected to carry the difficult load we have before us today.

The work we have now calls for the enthusiasm and energy of those who are just beginning a career in the community. These men have their eyes toward the future. They all realize that their individual success will be measured in a large degree by the advancement made by the community as a whole.

The call for volunteers is issued. Who is ready to enter the service?

Chessie And Advertising

We have all seen "Chessie," termed America's sleephearth. She is that lifelike kitten whose sleepy head has characterized the advertising of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad for several years.

We have been argued whether that was a tail or a paw protruding from the sheets, and it has made us all feel comfortably sleepy to look at her in the pages of magazines.

Well it is interesting now to learn that "Chessie" as done a lot of good work for her employers during her sleep. Reports show that the railroad which was once primarily a freight line now enjoys a very substantial passenger business. This is because the unique advertising which featured "Chessie" has attracted a lot of attention to the subject of comfort and railroad travel.

Incidentally "Chessie" made her appearance at a time when passenger business on any railroad didn't amount to much. The company decided then that some effective and unique advertising might do some good. And now it has accomplished so much more than expected that Chessie and her whole family have been used to sustain public interest.

Of interest to many of us now is the fact that unique advertising did a job that was especially difficult. If advertising can induce people to travel by rail in a nation as motor car conscious as the United States, it might accomplish almost anything.

All that's needed in an interesting and appealing advertising idea.

The trouble is that so many people who talk about equality are thinking only of those above them.

D. W. Haskew

I saw a young man who had landed a good job. He was filled with enthusiasm for his work, for his company and for his boss. He was never idle a moment, worked overtime and was always on his best to please. He did this because his job, his future and his support were all dependent on him. He knew that he had to hustle to hold his place and loving his job he was happy to do this. Many a time have I seen men and women who found a New Master in their spiritual life. I have seen them join the church and obligate to stand by their jobs in the kingdom, in a spirit of fidelity, but how few of them are never idle, work overtime and try hard to please the Boss, or some reason only a few church members ever take their jobs in the church in a serious manner. They join and then sit down.

Let me tell you that you have got to hustle to hold your job in God's kingdom, just the same as you have to hustle to hold your job in a position of daily toil. Shame on you if you can hustle for your sake and the sake of your company, and then sit down and lounge around as a church member.

—o-o-o—

A subscriber to a newspaper entered the office of the Editor and addressed him thus, "Mr. Printer, how is it that you never call on me to pay for your paper?" "Oh," replied the editor, "We make it a rule here to never ask a gentleman for his subscription to our sheet." "Indeed," the subscriber exclaimed, "Tell me how you manage to get along when folks do not pay you?" The editor hesitated for a moment and then made this reply, "You see my friends, it is this way, if a man is a gentleman he will pay without being asked. If one of our subscribers wait too long to pay his bill we conclude that he is no gentleman and then we ask him for what he is due." This subscriber opened his purse and paid up all that was due and then paid a year in advance. When we say "A gentleman will pay his bills without being asked to do so," we are bordering on the truth. Did you ever see folks who thought themselves to be mighty nice and yet there were unpaid bills charged to them? I don't know every store in town. Any man who will beat a bill has in him a soul that is smaller than the kernel of a mustard seed.

In the long ago the Egyptians had a custom of offering up annually one of the most beautiful of all the maidens of the land. She was selected from among the people because of her beauty and purity and was drowned in the river Nile to secure the blessings that came from the overflow of the river. This girl was brought before the people by the priests and then carried out into the midst of the river and thrown into the water to perish. She was then known as the "Bride of the Nile." Poets would write of her and prose writers would tell of her wonderful sacrifice. We think that the Egyptians were brutal in sacrificing the beautiful and the pure, but America is not far ahead of the Egyptians. We are sacrificing, not one beautiful woman annually to the god of pleasure, but we are sacrificing them by the thousands. See them, beautiful women out of our homes, being tossed into the waves of corruption to perish. We do not even extol them after they die. We call them the fifth and offscouring of society. Remember they were pure and beautiful before we sacrificed them.

Two large dogs met on a bridge and it was evident that a fight was on hand. With growls and shining teeth they went together. Being wild with rage they fought until they fell over the edge into a swollen stream. They saw that they were going to have to give up the fight between themselves and enter a fight for life. The New Foundland dog was on top at home in the water and soon battled himself to the shore. On looking back he saw his pal in the fight could not swim and that he was drowning. He plunged back into the water and soon brought him safely to shore. Each dog shook the water from his hair, touched noses and were friends. The fight on the bridge was forgotten and the two dogs were friends to stay. It would be nice if folks had as much sense sometimes as dogs. We have so much of the devil in us that we rejoice when we see the fellow who was trying to injure us, getting it in the neck.

THE FEAST

WINTER LEGUMES NEED PHOSPHATE FERTILIZERS

Tests by the Alabama Experiment Station show that it is most important for Alabama farmers to fertilize their winter legumes with basic slag or superphosphate.

The importance of phosphate fertilizers under legumes is forcefully illustrated by results at Auburn, Andalusia, Hackleburg, Sylacauga, Belle Mina, Headland, Crossville, Alexandria, Aliceville, Brewton, Monroeville and Prattville.

Legumes fertilized with 240 pounds superphosphate and 50 pounds muriate of potash at Auburn increased cotton yields by 705 pounds, corn yields by 29.5 bushels per acre. On the plots without fertilizer the legumes made very poor growth and had very little effect on the yields of cotton and corn.

At Andalusia, Hackleburg and Sylacauga vetch yields were approximately four times as great when 400 pounds superphosphate was applied as when no phosphate was used.

Other experiments during the past six years at five experiment fields and three substations in Alabama that an average of 4,288 pounds vetch per acre was produced with phosphate. This was sufficient to produce 25.8 bushels of corn and enough residue to produce 751 pounds of seed cotton the following year. Where 600 pounds superphosphate per acre was used in the cotton (400 pounds for vetch, 200 pounds for cotton) 9,221 pounds of vetch were grown. This produced 31.2 bushels of corn per acre and the residue of vetch plus 200 pounds superphosphate per acre gave 946 pounds of seed cotton.

Singapore Is Delightful Surprise To Miss Shepherd During Stay There

Hands House Full Of Live Snakes In The Famed Hindu Snake Temple

(By Ruth Shepherd)

I have never been as surprised in a place as I was in Singapore. I suppose more or less expecting the Singapore of den-of-iniquity look about instead, it is a charming and well-ordered town. So well ordered, in fact, that everything in the city is closed by midnight; even the clerks in the hotels stop running their streets, too, are mostly very broad and there are great sections of very homes.

Probably one of the most famous winding drive through white alabaster boulders (supposed to represent the tiger's lair.) There are no natural grounds of grass and trees; everything is glaring white stone with occasional colour in inlaid walks and pergolas. There are very unusual potted flowers all around, completely red and yellow and looking exactly like so many plumes. The house itself is built with no corners at all; in the center is a round living room and all the other circular rooms open off this. Even the ceilings are dome-like. Everything is done in very brilliant colours. There are many really exquisite pieces in the house: oriental rugs, lamps in the forms of little trees made of jade, Cloisonne, and the like, but they are all so crowded in that the effect is garish. And the combination of the very modernistic and the very oriental is not too good, either. It's an interesting place to see, but not just what you would call home-like.

Singapore has very well known and really lovely Botanical Gardens, which we thoroughly enjoyed. I particularly liked the orchid green-houses; all different species of orchids, in the shade, and such a great variety in colour and shape and size existed. I couldn't get used to seeing practically fields of them at one time either. (Wearing corsages of a number of them was great fun, too.)

We went back to our circus days one afternoon and paid a visit to the zoo. We got more fun out of one of the boys in the party than out of the animals, however. One of the largest orangutans in the world is in the zoo here, and this young man decided that he wanted a really good snap-shot. So he got the Keeper's permission and went inside the enormous cage. He walked around for minutes and minutes trying to get a good angle--and then suddenly realized that the beast wasn't chained up on his shelf at all. Just about then the orangutan let out a snarl and that boy never did take his picture. Someone else in the crowd though, snapped a picture of the boy just before he jumped out of the cage and the expression on his face was priceless.

Another afternoon we drove over to the native state of Jahare, on the mainland. I think that the people on the streets interested me more than anything else. Probably the strangest looking persons that I've seen anywhere were some of the men here. They were dressed in loose skirts wrapped around them and had long hair done up in big knots on the back of their heads, believe it or not.

Back in Singapore, I saw my first snake-charmer. The Cobra was an ugly looking creature and not a very graceful dancer, either, but it was fun to watch him and listen to the eerie little flute. The snake-charmer was a real artist at slight-of-hand tricks, too. We ran across many more of these in our next stop, Penang. Penang is a great deal like Singapore as far as the people go, but the countryside is very mountainous and the city is not nearly so modern. The whole place is more native looking and tropical. The beaches are the typical ones that you see in the pictures; white sand and palm trees and villages of grass skachs.

We didn't stay in Penang very long, but we saw a number of interesting things. To me the most exciting was the Hindu Snake Temple. There are actually dozens of live snakes loose all over the place. It gave me a bit of a queer feeling down my backbone to see them draped all over the altar and candelabras and sleeping peacefully about the temple. I was very glad that they were apparently lazy snakes; they never moved far unless they were disturbed, and I would be the last one to disturb a sacred snake.

We passed a great many rubber plantations and stopped and saw them making rubber at one place. It finally came out white and full of holes, not at all the sort of rubber I'm accustomed to seeing. The room in which it was hung to dry looked almost like a decorated ball-room with its long strips of rubber curling down from the ceiling like so much crepe paper.

Before I leave this part of the trip, I must mention one of our fellow passengers on the way to India; the Crown Prince of Barada. Barada is one of the richest native states in India; it is said, in fact, that this man is the sixth wealthiest in the world. We were flattered to death to be invited by him to the Royal Palace. I wish we could have the time to go because the Palace in Barada is supposed to be one of the most interesting anywhere as it retained much of the old pomp and ceremony and splendor.

I still find it hard to believe that I'm in these queer places and being associated with people like this.

BLACK FEATHER

The story of Rodney Shaw and his fight for independence from powerful John Jacob Astor ... a saga of Mackinac Island and Northern Wisconsin when the fur trade was at its height! Here's a new serial by Harold Titus, brilliant author of backwoods stories. Refreshing as a forest stream, yet steeped in early legend, 'Black Feather' will offer you a new action thrill. There's adventure in Shaw's battle with the "company" and there's romance in his love for beautiful Annette Leclerc, orphaned queen of Mackinac. You'll be delighted by a spectacular race to new hunting grounds ... by the bitter strife that rocks a primitive forest when white men battle for the Indian's trade. Watch for 'Black Feather' as it unfolds serially ... YOU'LL ENJOY IT!

We don't like to admit our "failings", but this time we must admit that some of our members failed to attend Sunday School last Sunday; but even then, and in spite of that, we had a good Sunday School. We trust all of us will be present next Sunday, bringing with us new members or visitors—or both. Remember, next Sunday is Rally Day and let's be at Sunday School at 9:45. We should like again to urge all new arrivals to our town, to come worship with us in our Sunday School and in our church services. Choir, you were good last Sunday. We are expecting you next time. We appreciate you.

The hearing of the good sermon preached by our pastor last Sunday was a real blessing. Come hear our pastor. Your presence will help him, and his sermon will help you.

Champion Chopper Come to Clanton

Peter McLaren, who claims the chopping Championship of Alabama, will stage a log cutting contest demonstration here on Tuesday 2:00 p. m.

This contest has been arranged by Murray-Bell Hardware Co., who he congratulated for arranging a visit of this colorful champion. McLaren, whose wizardry with an axe carried him from a poor farm in Australia, to the peak of his profession.

In chopping tours covering a few years, he has chopped before crowds of thousands, both here and abroad. McLaren, who is nearly 50 years old, claims that outdoor chopping is a great physical developer. His condition bears out this claim.

The contest is open to any one who has not previously competed against McLaren. A prize of $100 will be paid to any contestant McLaren fails to chop through in two thirds of the time the contestant takes.

The handicap gives all good choppers a sporting chance to win the prize, as it is just like giving in a hundred yard dash.

The only restriction made is that contestants be permitted to use axes. This is the only axe wielded by McLaren himself ever uses, and he is to chop against a Plumb also allow the handicap.

Every one is cordially invited to attend the demonstration. Choppers wishing to compete should bring axes with them. It costs nothing to enter the contest.

BAILEY TRIAL RESULTS IN MISTRIAL HERE LAST WEEK

With the jury remaining out almost all night, the Bailey rape trial resulted in a mistrial last Friday. This trial has attracted wide attention throughout this section.

Bailey, whose home is in Birmingham, is represented by Hon. Percy M. Pitts, with the prosecution being handled by Hon. Winston Huddleston. Hon. G. C. Walker, and Reynolds & Reynolds.

APPRECIATION

I again wish to thank my patrons for their loyalty and support. While new customers are very highly appreciated, and I want to serve all, it is the loyalty of old customers that shows the real service given.

My ginnings are ahead of a year ago, notwithstanding the lateness of the season, with unusual wet weather, and green cotton to begin with.

I want to be of real service to cotton growers, and can serve you best when you bring me your ginning.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

Progress either comes with a bang! It slides up softly but slowly without being realized. You don't breathe progress, no more than you watch a seed grow. Seeds are planted, stalks are up, branch out, flower and bear fruit, and we can observe these various steps; but except under unusual conditions such as have been maintained by research laboratories with slow motion pictures, we do not see the gradual growth of the plant. So it is with progress in a community. For instance in the matter of population Clanton in 1920 numbered 178,000, some extra people; in 1930 the census reported a total in excess of 200,000. In ten years there was an increase of 22,000—3,100 a year or a little more than 22 a day. Yet on no day anyone stops to think that the Chiltons had twins, adding two to the nation; the Zilches moved away their two children, but Uncle Zilch's brother brought his wife and children to town, making a net gain of two; and so on.

When it comes to progress in ideas, progress is even less noticeable in the although steps can be observed. Step from education of boys only to education of all people was not a period of time, until, by making each first in one wall and then another, the citadel was overthrown. It is very phenomenon of human nature, must of its very nature conflict with human impatience. Citizen Hacha leaves town on a visit to another town, let us say, slightly larger than his own. He is impressed. His wife is very hospitable; they take to see the new waterworks with the latest improvements, and the night arises in him, "Ah, this is what we need at home—a new waterworks." He views the fine assortment of the interest shown by the readers of the fine imposing structure, and thinks, "If we only had a library home—that's what makes a city." He takes him to a ball game, and he hears his own city boasting of a baseball team.

He comes home all fired up with enthusiasm. Neighbor Brown hasn't been on a visit this year, and having lived in the old home town so long he has come used to its arrangements, he was quite as enthusiastic about the new improvements that Citizen Hacha urges so strongly on the home.

The failure to arouse enthusiasm in his neighbors cools Hacha off; he makes a feeble attempt to get the new ideas at his civic club, but he receives a round of applause no action. Because the matter taken up immediately and acted on, he becomes disgusted with his

COUNTY PARLEY ON FARM LAWS STARTING OCT. 4

Goode Suggests Topics And Approach To Problem

Auburn, Ala.—Arrangements have been made for county-wide meetings to be held in every Alabama county during the week of October 4-9 to decide the kind of national farm legislation which should be passed by Congress.

In addition to discussing various questions, it is expected that each county meeting will select one person to represent the county at the state meeting to be held in Auburn on October 14. Those attending the state meetings will endeavor to consolidate the county recommendations for the entire state. Such consolidated recommendations will then be presented to the United States Senate on Agriculture when it meets in Montgomery on October 21.

"We believe that farm legislation proposed to be passed at the next session of Congress holds more importance to Alabama and the Southern cotton grower than any other question confronting us at present. Consequently, we feel that we cannot impress upon you too forcibly the necessity for your consideration of this question," say P. O. Davis, director, Alabama Extension Service, and R. J. Goode, State Commissioner of Agriculture, in urging farmers to attend their county meetings.

"Do you favor a compulsory program for cotton to be administered by the Federal Government?" is one of the questions to be discussed.

"Do you favor a program which will permit cotton growers to use the diverted acreage in the expansion of livestock production and the growth of food and feed crops necessary thereto?" is another.

ALABAMA FORESTS

RIGHT with Alabama are her forest resources, and vast has been their contribution to state development.

Despite the fact that timber has been cut in enormous quantities over a period of many years, Alabama forest growth still remains at about 22 million acres, of which about 4 million is virgin timber, the rest second growth. So favorable are Alabama's soil and climate that our timber lands can be re-forested at an incredibly rapid rate.

Within the past quarter century, chemical discoveries have added vast new values to our forest resources. After experimenting many years with Southern pine, a method was evolved for using it in paper manufacture.

But the Kraft paper industry which pioneered the field was only the beginning. Experiments of Dr. Chas. H. Herty, of Savannah, Ga., demonstrated that newsprint paper and many other paper products could be made from Southern pine. In the opinion of nationally-known paper engineers, the same favorable factors which brought about the tremendous expansion of Kraft paper production in the South will bring to this section a major share of the nation's newsprint industry.

But even this does not fulfill the final promise of the lowly Southern pine, which grows in such profusion in the soil of Alabama. The same Dr. Herty, who proved that newsprint paper could be made from pine, has solved the problem of producing from pine bleached sulphite pulp for the manufacture of high-grade book and magazine papers, household tissues, box board, etc.

And so the future of our forests, which have done so much to promote our progress, should yield still richer fruits for Alabama in the good years just ahead.

Wm. H. Martin
President,
ALABAMA POWER COMPANY

An Interesting Comment

John Temple Graves, II, Columnist for The Birmingham Age-Herald, reading an advertisement by Alabama Power Company, was inspired to write in the March 2, 1937, edition of his paper:

"A tree that looks at God all day,
And lifts its leafy arms to pray . . ."

"Three cheers for the Alabama Power Company! Eager, as are all the electric power people, for the custom a great paper industry promises, this company is advertising its conviction that a tree must be planted for each tree cut to carry on the industry. And it has practiced what it is preaching to the extent of planting 310,000 pine seedlings near its Martin Dam. It is making of itself a propagandist for forest conservation, for establishing pine as a 'farm crop' in the poorer soil areas of the South. Here is enlightened self-interest at its most enlightened, and we, for one, are glad to give honor where it is due."

*Alabama Power Company has since established a nursery with a capacity of 1 1/2 million tree seedlings annually.

MALARIA CONTROL

"Drainage projects planned in the interest of malaria control should not be started until it is reasonably certain that they can be carried through to completion," said Dr. J. N. Baker, State Health Officer, today in discussing the malaria situation in Alabama. "Many projects of this kind make a brilliant start and are launched with great fervor by health enthusiasts and community leaders, only to die from lack of support, mainly financial, at or near the halfway point. Such projects, of course, are worse than failures in that they not only involve expenditures of public or private funds without realizing anything like a proper return on the investment, but also do definite harm to the cause of better sanitation. In no instance, therefore, should a drainage project be undertaken until the amount required to see it through is in hand."

Dr. Baker also pointed out the importance of proper maintenance of a drainage ditch over a period of years after being dug.

"The cost of maintenance is comparatively small," he said, "but unless that is attended to and all ditches kept open, the good effects of the investment in the original project will progressively decrease as time goes on."

Chilton Students At State Teachers College

Livingston, Ala.—(Special to Chilton County News)—Chilton County is represented at Livingston State Teachers College this fall by: Murlene DeLoach, Willie Nell Owen.

Miss Mildred Durbin is among those on the Livingston State Teachers College honor roll for this past summer.

Livingston State Teachers College opened its fifty-fifth annual session Sept. 13. Registration was held on Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 13 and 14. An orientation program for freshmen was held on Tuesday to help the first year students get acquainted with the college. The YWCA cabinet took an active part by meeting buses and trains and helping freshmen with their baggage, rooms and school programs. Classes were begun Wednesday.

On Tuesday night the woman's athletic association had charge of the YWCA program. Saturday afternoon the annual Big Sister-Little Sister party was given in the YWCA hall. On Sunday night Sept. 19, the YWCA recognition service was held on the lawn in front of Webb Hall.

FORMER LOCAL STUDENT NOW IN DUNN N C

Oliver Manning Becomes Agriculture Instructor Recently

The following article was taken from The Dunn Dispatch, a newspaper of Dunn, North Carolina. Mr. Manning is a native of Chilton County and attended school at the Isabella high school:

Oliver O. Manning, for the past two years agricultural instructor at Plain View, has accepted a position as head of the Dunn High School agricultural department, it was announced today by Superintendent E. G. Bourne.

His appointment came after the County Board of Commissioners appropriated $1,300 for the new department, to be supplemented by the State. Mr. Manning, a native of Clanton, Alabama, has been in this State for three years. He taught in Union County for one year, and for the past two years has been at Plainview.

Last year, he won the third highest rating in this district, based upon his outstanding accomplishments as an agricultural teacher.

Mr. Manning graduated from the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, Ala. There he won the Danforth Fellowship degree for being the best all-around student.

For one year, he served as State secretary of the Alabama Future Farmers of America. In 1932, he was presented the American Farming Degree by the Future Farmers organization at its national convention in Kansas City. This degree is the highest obtainable.

At Plainview, he has entirely rebuilt the agricultural department, in addition to adding about $300 worth of equipment.

The accomplishments of his department there have spread far and wide. Last week Hartwell Dawson, one of his students, won first prize in the 10th annual State cooperative essay contest. This is only one of many outstanding honors which has come to his department.

To Organize F. F. A.

One of the first things he plans to do after the department is set-up is to organize a Future Farmers of America club. He plans to enter exhibits at State F. F. A. meetings, the State Fair, and local fairs.

Although he has not made out the complete program yet, he said this would be announced in the near future.

Commenting on the department here this morning, he said, "I see the need and great possibilities for an agricultural department in the Dunn school. This is strictly an agricultural department, and I am pleased that students will have an opportunity to study scientific methods of farming."

"Due to the fact that this is the first year, it is likely to be a difficult task at first, but with the cooperation of both students and the public, I predict great things for the department."

"I pledge my best to it, and solicit the cooperation of everybody else."

Manning is known as a live-wire instructor, and always keeps up to the minute in farming. This week he left for a trip to Washington and New York. While in Washington, he will visit the National Farm Bureau, and will visit several agricultural centers in New York and Virginia.

Farmers planning to market sawlogs this winter are advised to make arrangements for disposing of the logs after they are cut. By making arrangements for the sale of the logs before cutting down the trees, farmers can market their logs in the best condition.

Farmers Warned to Watch Hog Cholera

Auburn, Ala. — Hog cholera breaks of even greater severity than last fall are striking in almost all leading hog-producing states and probably not yet reached their peak, according to a warning to farmers issued here today by the Alabama Serum plant.

The outbreaks are in widely scattered areas, sometimes leaping several counties before new ones occur, according to results of a survey of a number of states recently made by the American Foundation for animal health.

"Farmers should inspect their herds daily, as a safeguard," the bulletin warns. "Some of the worst have been suffered in communities where cholera has existed on one or two farms for several weeks with neighbors knowing about it."

"Any farmer who discovers cholera in his herd should notify his agent and all his neighbors immediately, so they can have their hogs vaccinated before the disease spreads. Outbreaks can be easily controlled, all other hogs in a locality can be immunized before they contract the disease. At the first suspicion of cholera in a herd, a veterinarian should be called immediately."

Music Appreciation Club Meets

The first meeting of the Music Appreciation Club was held at the home of Mrs. Luther Little on Sept. 21st. The house was decorated with lovely fall flowers. A program of music by Schubert was given by Mrs. Kendrick of Talladega, Miss Foss of Thorsby, and Miss Mae Annice Polk of Clanton. Mrs. Kendrick after giving a brief talk on Schubert's contributions to the musical world, played several of his compositions on the Marimba. The soft liquid tones of this instrument are especially suited to drawing room entertainment.

Mrs. Kendrick's rendering of Schubert's "Serenade" with Miss Polk's able accompaniment was a rare pleasure to hear. Miss Foss' singing of Schubert's "Hark, hark, the Lark" was a joy to everyone present.

Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Little. The club members are indebted to Mrs. Little, Mrs. W. M. Polk, and Mrs. John Powers, Jr. for a delightful afternoon.

Sally Gowan Has Party

Miss Sally Gowan was hostess to a number of her little friends on her birthday Thursday afternoon. She was seven years old.

Games were planned and directed by her mother, Mrs. J. E. Gowan assisted by Mrs. W. W. Fox, Mrs. L. C. Ross and Miss Minnie Duncan.

Contest prizes were won by Iva Saxson McCraney and Frances Ellis.

The children gathered around the dining room table where the pretty birthday cake in colors of pink and green holding tiny candles was the center of attraction. Ice cream was served with the cake and refreshments. Balls and balloons were presented each guest as a favor.

Those present were Frances Ellis, Alfred McCutcheon, Gwendolyn Atkinson, Donna Blacketter, Charles Bradford, Ann Maddox, Billy and Trace Lawrence, Tommy Sue Littlejohn, Grady Hefflin, Jr., Jack Elmore, Johnnie Fant, Benjamin Roberts, Iva Saxson McCraney, Mary Elizabeth Mullins, Dewey Foshee, Milton Mims, Connie Mac Connell, Crutcher Ross, Jeanette Ross, Joe Mullins, Jr., Dorothy Downs, Evelyn Lowe, Frances McSwain, and Julia Nell Parrish.

FACTS FROM THE RECORD

Written by F.G. Stephens, Publisher of The Southern Democrat, Oneonta

In 1932 there were three places to be filled on the Supreme Court of Alabama. These places were held by Wm. H. Thomas, Joel B. Brown and Thomas E. Knight. Knight had been appointed and was a candidate to fill out the unexpired term. He was unopposed in the primary. Brown also had no opposition. Thomas was opposed by Paul Speake of Huntsville. Thomas was nominated, receiving 109,272 votes while Speake received 54,888. Brown having no opposition, received 142,123, and Knight, unopposed, received 138,664. Knight was elected for a full term of six years in 1936.

The two associate members of the Public Service Commission were elected in 1934 and their terms will expire in January, 1939. In the May 1934 primary Fitzhugh Lee defeated Cecil Brown, the vote being 125,656 for Lee and 124,187 for Brown. Frank Morgan the other member of the Commission, was opposed by Jimmy Bowman and Harry T. Hartwell. Bowman was the low man and dropped out in the first primary, and Morgan defeated Hartwell in the second, the vote being 144,954 for Morgan and 110,687 for Hartwell. Morgan later resigned to accept a federal position and Clint Harrison was appointed to fill the vacancy. The term of both Lee and Harrison will expire in January, 1939, and nominations to fill these places will be made in the primaries to be held next year.

There were three men in the race for Governor in 1934. In the first primary Frank Dixon received 97,508 votes, Bibb Graves 132,462 and Leon McCord 75,208. In the second primary Graves received 157,140 and Dixon received 135,309. The term of Governor Graves will expire in January, 1939, and his successor will be nominated in the May or June primary next year.

Other State officials elected in 1934, whose term will expire in January, 1939, are Lieutenant Governor Thomas E. Knight, Jr., who died a few months ago, Secretary of State Howell Turner State Auditor Charles E. McCall, State Treasurer John Brandon, Attorney General A. A. Carmichael, Commissioner of Agriculture, R. J. Goode and State Superintendent of Education J. A. Keller who recently resigned to become President of the State Teachers College at Florence.

Under the constitution none of these men, except members of the Public Service Commission and the judiciary can succeed themselves and others will have to be nominated in the primaries next year to fill their places.

In these same primaries to be held in May and June, a United States Senator will be nominated to serve for six years beginning in January, 1939. Congressmen for each of the nine districts will be nominated at the same time to serve for a term of two years.

garet Golson, Missionary Committee, Ruth Prim, Prayer Committee, Fred Blankenship, Whatsoever Committee, Carl Foss, Press Committee, Ruth Clark, Good Literature Committee, Mary Christ.

Afterwards the program was turned over to the leader, Margaret Golson, who with the help of Miss Davison presented a beautiful candle-lighting service. The "Light of God's Love" was the theme and it was shown as being carried into the school, church, young peoples' society, missionary society and the home by six different persons.

A Christian Endeavor social will be held at the home of Rev. and Mrs. L. L. Stanley at seven o'clock Saturday night, October 2.

Brief Farm News

Most Alabama ginners are holding special gin days for farmers to give them proved varieties of cotton and to show planting seed for next year, and county agents are encouraging this work. The United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics is now issuing Saturday a report indicating the grain and staple length of the present cotton crop as it is ginned.

Higher prices for chickens but prices probably not as high as last year are foreseen by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

This is a good year for saving from pine cones, says D. J. Weddell, the Alabama Experiment Station, giving instructions to farmers on how to save the seed.

We are very proud of the interest shown in our B. Y. P. U. lately. We have been more attending, better prepared lessons, more daily bible studies, and bigger collection. Out of 70 are now enrolled, and only 10 were absent last Sunday night. We were very much delighted to have Bro. Lockhart and family with us and we appreciate the words of encouragement that he gave.

Sunday School is showing some improvement. Last Sunday three classes had a perfect attendance. Also 3 were with the church. They were led by Mrs. Lawrence Eiland for us, and Mr. Newt Foshee by letter.

Plans have been made to control erosion along stretches of highways in Alabama and 19 other states in the country. This work is being done by the Soil Conservation Service and state highway departments.

HEFLIN OPENS WITH ATTACK ON WAGE BILL

Asserts He Will Support Roosevelt If He Feels President Is In Right

Lafayette, Ala., Sept. 25.—Former Senator J. Thomas Hefflin opened his come-back campaign here today with an unequivocal declaration against wages and hours legislation, a more temperate statement that he saw "no necessity" of increasing the Supreme Court, and Hefflineque utterances about money trusts and Communism, both of which he pledged himself to fight.

Passages in his opening speech indicated his feeling that the race for the unexpired term of Senator Hugo Black rested between him and Lister Hill, Second District Representative in Congress. If matters turn out so, Alabama is about to become a battleground on wages and hours legislation but with other new deal issues blurred, for the former Senator had many kind things to say about the Roosevelt administration.

"I am a friend of Roosevelt," Hefflin said. "If I am elected to the Senate I will support him and cooperate with him in those things where I believe he is right and give opposition to him where I believe he is wrong."

Wages and Hours Stand
As to wages and hours, Hefflin, after reviewing his record with respect to labor declared:
"I procured a copy of that bill as it passed the Senate and as it is today. When I commenced to study that bill I did so with the hope that I would find it good and wholesome for labor and industry in Alabama and in the South, so that I could support it."
"But after reading it very carefully for the fourth time I was convinced that it would not be helpful to labor and industry in Alabama but would be distinctly harmful to both. The bill, if enacted into law, will put the congress of the United States into the dangerous business of fixing wages of private individuals working in private industries."

"We have no child labor and sweat shop problems in Alabama, so these manufactured campaign 'boogers' will not deceive anybody. . . There are 48 different situations and conditions in labor and industry in the 48 states and they cannot be regulated and run on one uniform plan for all the States without working great injury to many of them."

Concerning the court packing issue, Hefflin said:
"In view of Senator Black's recent appointment to membership on the Supreme Court and in view of certain recent decisions of the Supreme Court it is claimed that the court, as it stands today, has six liberal justices on it and three conservative justices, making nine in all the present membership of the court and I see no necessity for increasing the membership of the Supreme Court and I shall, if elected to the Senate, oppose such a course . . ."

"The president is not trying to destroy the Supreme Court . . . Some good results have come out of the agitation of the court question."

President Roosevelt is entitled to much praise for the many good things he has done.

New Game Fish Is Protected By The Law

The white lake bass (Roccus Chrysops) found in great numbers in the Tennessee Valley area of north Alabama, is the newest species of fresh water fish to come under the protection of this State's laws. By unanimous vote of the seven-member conservation board Commissioner I. T. Quinn recently was authorized to draw up regulations declaring the white lake bass a game fish and as such entitled to protection. The creel limit and legal size of the fish will be announced later.

Thousands of white lake bass have been caught in Lake Wilson, Lake Wheeler and other streams in that section this summer. Sportsmen became alarmed over the rapid depletion of the stock and asked that regulatory measures be passed. The fish is commonly called the striped bass in that section.

An interesting bit of history is connected with this fish which has provided so much sport for anglers this year. About 10 years ago Commissioner Quinn obtained a consignment of this species from the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries in the overflow district of the upper Mississippi River. They were planted in Lake Wilson and the growth in that short span of time has been phenomenal. The fish reaches a length of from one foot to eighteen inches, and weights from one to two pounds. It ranks high both as a food fish and a game fish.

Although commonly called the striped bass by anglers in the Tennessee Valley, it is not to be confused with the striped bass or rock bass which comes up from the Gulf into our fresh water streams every year to spawn.

The other game fish protected in Alabama waters, are: Large and black bass, commonly called trout or green trout, broom, crappie or perch and all members of the sunfish family, including rock bass or goggleeye, calico bass, red belly, blue gill, copper-nosed, walleyed pike, jack salmon or pickerel and white perch, and brook trout, and all members of the fresh water trout, pickerel and perch families.

Under provisions of the law setting up the cotton price adjustment plan, no payments can be made before 1938, announces I. W. Duggan, acting director of the Southern Division, AAA. Proof of compliance with the 1938 program cannot be given before late next spring, says Mr. Duggan in explaining reasons why the payments cannot be made before next spring.

Experiment Station

round and the loop-a-wheel, furnish thrills and enjoyment to the youngsters and the elders. Then there are the chance machines, side shows, etc. Then too, one can find drinks, ice cream and other food on the grounds.

Yesterday was school children's day and all local school children were admitted to the grounds for only ten cents.

Wedding Night

Another feature of the Fair will take place tonight, when a local couple will be joined in a brilliant wedding ceremony. The wedding ring, the license, and the bride's ensemble and other wearing apparel gifts, were furnished by the Fair management and merchants of Clanton. Then other gifts have been presented to the couple and the entire ceremony is expected to be one of the most outstanding weddings ever held in the county. It will take place on the Fair's midway.

Friday Farmers' Day

Tomorrow, Friday, is designated as Farmers' Day and it is hoped that every farmer in this section will visit the Fair during the day.

Livestock Show

The livestock show is attracting wide attention, with valuable prizes to be offered totalling $50.00 in cash. The prize list was arranged by Dr. W. L. Parrish, well known veterinarian of this county. Second prizes in the livestock show will consist of merchandise such as bridles, pieces of harness, etc. All these prizes were donated by dealers in the county.

al shots at him. Gandy opened fire with a shot gun, placing several shots in one of the bandits and it is believed another was struck in the head. His hat was found later with several shot holes in it.

The man being held here in jail gives his name as Milton Harley, alias James Wood, and his home as Mississippi. His wounds are not serious. He was captured the following day near Stanton by Deputy Sheriff S. D. McCary, of Maplesville. Harley is alleged to have admitted his part in the robbery and shooting, but refuses to name his partners. He will be given preliminary trial Friday before Justice of the Peace, M. D. Foshee. Officers are continuing their search for the other participants, according to Sheriff Hardy.

"Of the 2,200,000 who become eligible every 12 months to vote, I place as a most conservative estimate 65 per cent or 1,430,000 a year, as the number who will wing their way straight into Democratic ranks," President Maner said.

"The party has something definite to offer them. The Republicans do not. At absolute best, all the G. O. P. can muster for an offering is a feeble echo of the broken promise that perhaps some day there would be a chicken in every pot, instead of two more for the privileged, none for the ranks of the denied.

"The Democratic party has not only promised, but delivered. It attracts the new voter because it has given him, out of the chaotic aftermath of the depression, a fighting chance for a private and public life of security and substantiality. The right to this opportunity in all that courageous young man or woman today asks of any political party. But that much they demand; and that much has the new order definitely placed in their hands."

Hayes Has Novel Display At Fair

Among private exhibits at the county fair is one from the Hayes Chevrolet Co., of Clanton. One section of this display shows a used car with half the car thoroughly reconditioned in the most minute detail, while the other half is as the car was traded in. Used cars at the Hayes Chevrolet Co., undergo several steps before they are placed on sale. The corps of men engaged in this used car reconditioning are H. M. Newell, R. C. Dawson, C. C. Smoke, J. O. Williams, M. Langston and J. C. Langston.

The Hayes Chevrolet Co., also has an attractive display of Maytag washing machines and Electrolux refrigerators.

28,000 HOMEMAKERS NEIGHBOR

TO UNDERSTAND the heart of a railroad like the L. & N.—to understand why the L. & N. is your "Home Sweet Home on Rails," you have to look beyond thundering locomotives, steel rails, moving freight cars, and know something of its people.

We've been successful in creating a genuine southern "home" atmosphere on our road because, like yours, the lives of our 28,000 employees are bound up in homes and home-making.

Spread over 13 states, these men and women of the L. & N. live much the same as you do. They're useful citizens who send children to school, pay taxes, trade at the corner grocery, go to the movies, contribute to the development and prosperity of the towns and cities in which they live.

Their love of home and community makes it natural for them to think of the railroad they serve as your Home on Rails—helps them to take pride and pleasure in making you feel "at home on the L. & N."

That is why our employees strive—man to man—with one purpose, one creed, to make your journey as their quest so safe and pleasant—to make your shipment of freight in their care move so promptly—that you will want to patronize the L. & N. again.

Try the safe, friendly, dependable L. & N. way then. won't you, when you have a shipment to move or a trip to make?

BLACK TAKES COURT SEAT LAST MONDAY

Klan Case Closed, He Says, Following Speech On Radio Last Friday

Washington—Amid an uproar such as has seldom preceded the seating of a Supreme Court member, Hugo L. Black waited Saturday night to take his place as the ninth man on the nation's highest tribunal.

As far as he, personally, was concerned the case made out by critics who attacked his appointment because of his connection with the Ku Klux Klan was closed.

Having denied present Klan membership and denounced religious bigotry and race prejudice in his nationwide radio address Friday night, he maintained Saturday the aloof silence of an associate justice. By his own statement he will not break that silence to discuss the Klan issue.

Both his friends and foes, however, carried on the wordy dispute which originated in the Senate before his nomination to the court by President Roosevelt was confirmed.

MILT TOLBERT SHOW TO STAR LASSES WHITE

Memories of another day when the Al G. Fields minstrel troupe roamed the nation will live again on Saturday, Oct. 9th, when the Milt Tolbert Tent Show plays in Clanton. Headlining a cast of 75 performers will be Lasses White and his partner in comedy, Honey Boy Wilds.

The team wrote a new definition of black-face comedy when they toured the circuits with Al G. Fields and later with Neil O'Brien. In more recent years they have entered every American home via the radio in Lasses White's own minstrel, "Lasses and Whites."

With them will be other nationally known radio artists in persons of Uncle Ezra "Slim" Williams and his Barn Dance Revue, featuring such stars as the Cannon Sisters, Red Jenks and his magic trumpet, Stan Stanley and Wyley Kilpatrick the dancer.

The show also includes a ten piece orchestra, a chorus sparkling with beautiful girls, 15 vaudeville acts, "Lamora" and his troupe of tropical dancers whose act has been hailed throughout the nation as the true interpretation of native Hawaiian dances and songs.

With seating capacity of 3,500, the Milt Tolbert Show is the largest in the nation under canvas, travels in a fleet of specially built trucks and carries its own light plants. It will show next to the Thomason Hotel. Doors open at 7 P.M. and the show starts at 8 P.M.

CHILTON'S FAIR CLOSES WITH FINE SUCCESS

County Exhibits, Livestock Show Attract Interest At County Fair

Chilton County's latest Bigger and Better County Fair was acclaimed a success by those who played important parts in making it possible and by those who attended the fair during its week's duration from September 28th through Saturday, October 2nd.

This being the first county fair held here in many years, it attracted wide attention and the crowds gathered in large groups on opening night. The large exhibit tent, furnished through the courtesy of the Thomas P. Littlejohn Concession Co., housed some of the most attractive and educational exhibits ever shown in the county.

Although the weather took a turn toward the disagreeable side last Friday and Saturday, it bothered little the hundreds who attended the event during the last two days.

The fair was brought to the county through efforts of the Clanton Kiwanis Club, with the Public Affairs Committee, of which Dr. V. J. Gragg is chairman, in charge of arrangements. The Clanton Pilot Club, County Agent J. W. Fant, J. M. Martin as secretary, and many others aided greatly in making the fair a success and these persons and organizations are interested in receiving the reaction of the people of the county on the fair.

Prizes Awarded

The exhibits brought to the fair by various communities and organizations attracted much attention at the fair entrance. Prizes, totaling $260 in cash and many items of valuable merchandise were awarded during the fair. The merchandise prizes were donated by merchants of the county.

Commissioners Go To Push Road Interests

Members of the Commissioners Court of the county spent considerable time in Montgomery yesterday in the interest of securing Federal funds for the hard surfacing of county roads.

The news went to press before they returned so it was impossible to secure any information as to the outcome of the conferences they were to hold with officials in the capital city. However, Judge Smith stated that they were certainly not going to tarry at the job and that the state officials will understand that Chilton County was ready to proceed in this matter.

Debts---Public And Private

We have been told on many occasions that the public debt of the United States is nothing to worry about. England has a much heavier per capita government debt, and so do other countries of the old world. The American public debt could be doubled without serious consequences, we have been told.

But what we wonder about is this. Do these figures on public indebtedness, these comparisons between our own country and European nations, present an accurate view of the situation? Doesn't the indebtedness of the central government in most European nations represent the sum total of all public debts? Isn't the indebtedness of the Federal government in our country only a part, perhaps less than half, of our total public indebtedness?

Almost every municipality, almost every county, most states, many school districts and many towns throughout the length and breadth of this vast country have some indebtedness. It is not unusual for small municipalities to have outstanding bonds of several hundred thousand dollars. In our big cities many branches of government have their own debts. Park boards, sanitary districts, municipal utilities are often heavily bonded. The total of all these debts would make a substantial item.

Undoubtedly there are figures on this. We assume that some economist or some statistician has given the matter careful and thorough study. Unfortunately such facts have never been made available to this writer.

One commentator of considerable note recently declared that the per capita public indebtedness in America is about equal to that of England when the financial status of all the various small units of government is taken into consideration. If what this speaker has to say is true, and no one to our knowledge has challenged his statements, then the time is approaching when Americans must consider this disagreeable problem.

It is always easy and pleasant to run into debt. It is never easy nor enjoyable to pay debts. But they must be paid if we are not to create serious economic disturbances.

Many economists attribute the depression to the mountain of private indebtedness which preceded the general crash. With industry, business and agriculture all overloaded with debts the entire economic system of the nation was finally thrown onto a dead center. Private debts have been liquidated or retired to an amazing extent in recent years but public indebtedness shows a continuous tendency to seek higher levels.

This is not a desirable trend. The time is approaching when government must adopt a "pay as you go" policy and a program of retiring existing obligations. Failure to follow this common sense policy will lead to inflation and serious economic dislocation in the future. Our experience with the depression should convince us all that it is dangerous to stretch credit, either private or public, to a breaking point.

Value Of Publicity

"The wages of sin is publicity" is the often quoted statement of a once famous editor. Violators of the law are frequently more fearful of newspaper notoriety than of the punishment the court may mete out.

The wages of faithfulness to a public trust is also publicity. It has been our observation that most public officials are fearful of having their questionable acts exposed in print.

Full, fearless and honest publication of the facts about the public's business is essential to the successful operation of democratic government.

Good Manners

Suppose on some occasion your home was crowded with guests. Suppose some individual who arrived early persisted in occupying your entire davenport. Such a display of insolence and selfishness would contribute but little to his popularity, we know.

Such things don't happen in homes, but for some strange reason certain individuals exhibit equally bad manners when they park their cars. They will occupy a busy location for hours when they might just as well store their cars on some sidestreet. They will ignore the parking lines and still occupy an area where two cars might be parked. They will crowd other cars, set their brakes, lock their doors and go away without a thought for the difficulty that the adjacent motorist will experience when he tries to drive back into the stream of traffic.

Because of this apparent tendency to exhibit bad manners on the part of a substantial number of the motorists, parking restrictions have been adopted in some cities. Experiments are also being conducted with parking meters which compel the motorist to pay for the luxury of storing his car at some busy location. But in a community like Clanton, where parking restrictions cannot easily be enforced and where the installation of parking meters is quite out of the question, such a solution would be practical.

What we must depend upon is the development of a sense of courtesy and good manners. If you plan to spend a considerable amount of time in the business district, or if you are employed there, try to find some parking space for your car other than the busiest corner. Many shoppers frequent the business section. Their visits are of brief duration. Frequently they are compelled to carry heavy packages from the stores to their cars. They should have an opportunity to park for short periods in the busy section.

It is only a matter of common courtesy to consider the convenience of someone else.

This Barbaric Age

One cannot read the news of the day without contemplating the strange anomalies of the greatest civilization in recorded history. Of all the wonders of the day among the first is the aeroplane. It annihilates space. It brings nations, once remote, within a few hours of each other. Mechanically it includes the results of many of the greatest inventions of our time.

But observe how it is now most spectacularly employed. Japan serves notice that her air armada plans to blow the Chinese capitol off the face of the earth, and for hours women, children, old people must cower into cellars and dugouts in terror of the horror that is to come.

After hours or days of nervous tension, the hum of aeroplane motors announces the arrival of the engines of death. A rain of bombs falls upon a city where people, humble people who have no voice in the affairs of nation, struggled to erect their tiny homes. Fire follows the bombardment, and days later rescue workers comb the ruins for the charred bodies of victims and the battered bodies of the wounded.

Man in his genius can invent almost anything. But he seems determined to employ his cunning for destruction which at times approaches self destruction. It is only man, of all beings in the world, who fights and destroys those against whom he has no grievance—whom he has no cause to fear.

One thing that this war in China should accomplish. It should impress intelligent people the world over with the senseless brutality of modern war. How can we exalt as heroes men who drop high explosives to blow out the lives of defenseless women and children?

How civilized nations find it impossible to control this barbaric outburst will be one of the questions which will perplex historians and scholars of a more intelligent and enlightened age than ours.

It's an unusual person who can say: "That's none of my business and I'm going to keep my nose out of it."

It's always been our observation that living the simple or rustic life is great for those who don't have to.

The woman pays and pays—provided she is a taxpayer.

Latest reports from all portions of the globe indicate that civilization isn't doing so well.

D. W. Haskew

The story goes that one day a man went to his spiritual adviser and made this confession: "Father, I have circulated an evil report on my neighbor and I have repented of it and want you to tell me what to do that I may right my wrong. The old priest replied: "Friend, take a sack of duck feathers and go around to all of your neighbors' homes and leave a handful on each step and return to me for instructions." He did this and went back to the priest for further instructions. He was then told to take his sack and go back to every house and pick up his feathers and bring them back to him. The man replied, "Wh, father, I cannot do this because there has been an awful blow out of the cat and the feathers are scattered everywhere." Then the Man of God replied, "Friend there is no way to right the wrong that you do your neighbor when you circulate a bad report. It is never good to tell bad things on your neighbor. An evil wind will blow and scatter a bad report everywhere and this report cannot be recalled."

A truck loaded with pears was left parked at the side walk. Along came three little boys clad in the garments of the very poor. One of the boys said, "Look, pears and lets fill our pockets." A second boy said, "Good, pears and we will take as many as we want." The third boy was a Sunday School student and he spoke up, "Not on your life. The Bible says 'Thou Shalt not Steal' and for us to take those pears will be stealing, and we can not afford to steal." On hearing that the other boys placed the pears taken back into the truck and they passed on down the street. Let me say to the parents who read this, if your child does not go to Sunday School, that child stands a great chance to become a thief. A prominent Judge said, "In all of my practice on the bench I have rarely ever been called upon to pass sentence on any minor who attended Sunday School." If you have less than 20 children in your home, you should carry every one of them to Sunday school, every Sunday. If you have more than 20 children in your home, you should have a school in your home.

A prosperous Scotchman was often urged by his pastor to give of his substance to the poor and to help meet the budget of the church to which he belonged, but the old right was refused. One night the old Scotchman dreamed that he went up to the gate of heaven and tried to get in. While he was there trying to squeeze in at the gate his pastor walked up and said, "Friend why do you not enter?" He replied, "I would enter your reverence willingly, but every time I try this old purse of mine swells up and makes such a knot on me that I can not enter." On making that statement to his pastor the old Scotchman awoke from his sleep. He slept no more that night and by the breaking of day he had decided that he was going to be more liberal to the poor and to his church. The swelling of the purse will not only keep Scotchmen out of the kingdom of God, but it will keep Jew and Gentile. Better empty your purse in God's kingdom if you want to be able to slip through God's gate.

When I was younger in the ministry I well remember how I would agonize in prayer for dying grace. I felt that everything depended on me being ready and willing to die. I wanted God to grant me assurance that it would be well with my soul when I came to the hour of death. As I older grow I rarely ever pray for dying grace. With my death has ceased to be the time of concern and fear. My prayers now are that God will give me grace and power to live every day so that I will not be afraid to die. Stern life stalks out every day and places burdens upon my shoulder that must be carried. Stern life brings before me temptations every day that must be met. My prayer today is "Lord Jesus, help me to live a full life, a consecrated life, a helpful life—just for today." If you have living grace you need not worry about dying grace. God will give it when needed.

A Christian man from America was employed to teach in one of the State schools of Japan. He was strictly charged to never refer to his religious faith while on duty for the school. This man of God was careful to keep faith with the government and to observe his contract to the very letter. Not a word did he say about his Christ, but he so completely lived his faith and practiced his Christianity that he won forty students. They met unknown to the Christian professor and organized a Christian group in the college. They had been won to Christ, not by word of the mouth, but by the power of silent living. Our example in Christian living will ever carry more weight and power than the words that we speak. Every one of us can be a great preacher for the Christ by living the truth. The best preacher in your community is that one who lives like Jesus.

Pol Taxes In Other States.

There are ten of the 48 states that make the payment of poll tax a prerequisite to the right to vote. All of these except Rhode Island are in the South. The Rhode Island law differs from the poll tax laws of the other states, as it contains a provision that b taking the "pauper oath" a person can vote without paying his poll tax. The states that make the payment of poll tax prerequisite to voting in addition to Rhode Island are Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia.

In Alabama there are 1,348,401 people in the voting age, that is over 21 years of age, of this number 401,140 of these are negroes, and 947,261 are whites and could vote if all poll taxes were paid. From this number, of course, would be deducted inmates of insane hospitals, and persons who have been convicted of felonies. This State cast only 275,743 votes in the presidential election in 1936. This was only 20.4 per cent of all persons including negroes in the voting age, or less than 30 per cent of the white population over 21 years of age.

Arkansas voted only 18.45 per cent of her people of voting age, and Florida reached 37.8 per cent. Tennessee got theirs up to 33.5, while South Carolina dropped to 14.1 per cent. Georgia voted 19.6 per cent of her people in voting age and Mississippi managed to vote 16.2 per cent. Texas reached 26.2 per cent and Virginia 25.7. The average for these nine states was 24.1 per cent.

It will be remembered that there is a heavy negro population in each of these States.

In West Virginia where no poll tax is required 90 per cent of those in the voting age went to the polls and voted last year. Kentucky got 65 per cent of her voting population to the polls, and North Carolina had 54.5 per cent.

GREATEST CIRCUS

IS COMING SOON

Dazzling Introductory Spectacle. One Of Host Of New World Acclaimed Features Of Ringling Bros. And Barnum & Bailey Organization

The world's mightiest amusement enterprise on tour—the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey combined circus—with its 1937 seven-ring-and-stage program, star studded and liberally interspersed with new thrillers from Europe and Asia, featuring among its array of new wonders the most gorgeous introductory spectacle in its brilliant history, India, is definitely scheduled to exhibit in Montgomery, Thursday, October 14.

India is not just another circus spectacle. It is not merely a glittering parade to open the Big Show performances. It is the result of a year's planning, a really staggering expenditure and much research on the part of Sam W. Gumpertz, general manager of The Greatest Show on Earth.

Color schemes blend in lovely perspectives. Every one of the two thousand people and animals, or its back. All have towering heading part wears a small fortune on its dresses of exquisite beauty. One group of 170 horses, with girl riders, is like nothing ever before offered, for the horses, wearing medieval bejeweled blankets of velvet, carry gorgeous canopies over the girls' heads. India is a torrent of color and flashing jewels flowing over the hippodrome track and the seven rings and stages. It is the last word in pageantry.

Heading the scores of new features are The Great Aloys, aerial thriller; the Magyars, Europe's mightiest troupe of somersaulting stars; the Famed William Heyer, Holland's greatest horse trainer, and his wonder horses; the Mavsy-Brach troupe of aerial unicycle marvels; the Naitro family of wire wizards; the Lu 1, a troupe of upside-down aerialists; the Qualitrios, airplane acrobats; the Cleveres, whirlwind acrobats; the Wen Hais, novelty stars and many other equally renowned in Europe, Asia and South America. There are 800 performers.

In aerial and equestrian displays The Greatest Show on Earth has outdone its—this year, when the ground acrobatic numbers are the largest and finest ever presented in any land or sea.

The Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey combined circus will arrive on four long trains of 100 double length steel railroad cars, carrying 1600 people 1009 menagerie animals, 7 herds of elephants and 700 horses.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. LAURA HATHCOCK

The death angel came and took my precious mother on September 27, 1937. Only God knows my heart. She was kind and affectionate. She was a real mother and I idolized her.

Oh, those lonely sad hours that are mine. I have been homesick for this earthly home; I am homesick now for heaven—for that sweet face I know I will see there some day.

I sometimes feel life is not worth the price I have to pay. When at home we work together, shared our pleasure and sorrow, and now, oh! how her companionship and love are missed for we worshipped each other.

She was full of life and met the world with a smile. Just to do the little things I knew she liked, or to see her the things she needed, made for her pleasure. I could do so much for her. She made a home for her children—loved and found pleasure but the chain is broken now and it isn't home any more, only a place to stay. Some may tell you they care but there is not a care that can equal that precious mother's love and care, and you will never miss her until she is gone.

The greatest consolation I have is that I was as good to my mother as I knew how to be, but oh! the lonely sad hours and the tears I shed when no one else knew, when my little mother is finished there will be a sweet rest for her in heaven looking for me and that will be glory for me. Oh! the sadness she gave to me when she threw her precious hand around my knees and looked me in the face and said, "yes, my darling, I will have to go to you."

RISEING MAINTENANCE COSTS

Where these lines meet is "THE END OF THE ROAD"

INFERIOR, temporary highway surfaces clamor for more and more maintenance and reconstruction year after year. Eventually, any new roads are out of the question. All the annual road money goes for upkeep! Then, "the end of the road" has been reached, both literally and figuratively.

But Here's Big News!

Taxpayers save from $88 to $465 per mile per year in the cost of surface maintenance on concrete highways compared with other types of pavement.

This statement is based on the actual reports of surface maintenance costs on 135,000 miles of pavement in 21 states — every state that publishes these records.

Concrete is the standard by which all roads are judged... insuring maximum safety, comfort and economy for motorists. High visibility at night... easy on tires, gas and repairs. Demand concrete for your roads.

Y.W.A. Elects Officers At Meeting Mon. Night

A business meeting of the Y.W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. J. L. Teel Monday night. The meeting was opened with devotional being read by Gertrude Fiquette, after which she gave an interesting talk on China. Miss Fiquette presided over the election of officers. The following new officers were elected:

President, Willie Maude Kelley; 1st vice pres, Dorothy Manning; 2nd vice pres, Mary Charles Larrimore; 3rd vice pres, Mary Frances Duke; Secretary, Euna Powell; Treasurer, Gertrude Fiquette; Reporter, Mary Charles Larrimore; Associate teacher, Sarah Mullins; Chairman of Telephone Com., Lucille Taylor.

After the business meeting a short social meeting was held. Mrs. Agnes Powell Lowe was given a kitchen shower. She received many useful gifts.

Refreshments were served to the following members: Euna Powell, Frances Moore, Gertrude Fiquette, Mary Frances Duke, Mary Charles Larrimore, Dot Manning, Agnes Powell Lowe, Mrs. J. R. Mullins and Evelyn Teel.

Mr. Jack McKinstry spent the week end in Birmingham as guest of his parents.

Mr. Garland Foshee was a visitor at the State Fair Tuesday.

FOR FREE FERRY

Mountain Creek, Ala.
Oct. 2nd, 1937.
Chilton County News,
Gentlemen

In as much as the people of Chilton and Coosa County are paying a very heavy tax on gasoline, and since we have a good road from Clanton to Rockford, the writer believes that we should have a free ferry across Coosa River, instead of having to pay a toll of forty cents each time we cross the river.

As it now stands if we go to Coosa County, or if someone in Coosa County comes to Chilton County it costs them eighty cents to cross the river, this eighty cents just about ruins a dollar bill.

During the month of August the tax on gasoline amounted to more than eleven thousand dollars for each county of the state.

If Coosa County and Chilton County will join in the expense of operating a free ferry it will not cost the counties but very little.

A financial report of road operations in Chilton County for the months of May and June of this year, showed an expense of about nine hundred dollars for labor and twenty-two hundred dollars for supervision and office expense, as a citizen of Chilton county, the writer feels like he received of twenty-two hundred dollars for road very little benefit from this expense supervision and office help.

The writer has conferred with Judge Winston Stewart of Coosa County, and Judge Lee Smith of Chilton and we are glad to state that each judge is in favor of having a free ferry.

The writer is taking this method of asking the citizens of each county to talk with their commissioners about a free ferry.

Most people know that Chilton County now has several thousand people who at one time lived in Coosa County, and in as much as most of the people in each county have cars or trucks, it is perfectly natural that people would like to visit their friends and relatives pretty often, but they do not like to ruin a dollar crossing the river, in addition to paying such a high gasoline tax.

Most of us had rather have a bridge across Coosa River, but since we cannot get a bridge right at this time, a free ferry is the next thing to a bridge.

Permit me to again request you Coosa County people to talk with your commissioners about this matter. Judge Smith of Chilton County tells me that Chilton County is now ready to get busy.

Yours very truly,
CHAS. COOPER.

MRS. OTTO JONES ENTERTAINED FOR VISITOR

Mrs. Otto Jones entertained with two tables of bridge at her home Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, honoring her house guest, Mrs. Dean Ashley, of Akron, Ohio.

The home was attractively decorated with pink dahlias and greenery of various kinds.

The games were played on the porch and at the conclusion of a series prizes were awarded.

Mrs. Dick Hayes received high score prize, a beautiful piece of pottery. Mrs. W. E. Huddleston won cut prize, also a piece of pottery. The honoree was presented a lovely gift.

The hostess served a delicious salad plate with iced tea for refreshments.

Those enjoying the hospitality of Mrs. Jones were:

Mrs. James Wade, Mrs. Claud Craig, Mrs. John Mullins, Mrs. Dick Hayes, Mrs. Omar Reynolds, Mrs. George McCain, Mrs. W. E. Huddleston, Mrs. Billy Smith and the honoree.

Mrs. J. H. Hefflin of Moulton, Ala., was the guest of her son, Mr. Grady Hefflin and Mrs. Hefflin, the past week end. She was on her way to Greensboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Horsley White and daughters, Misses Thelma and Essie White, were in Selma Sunday. Mr. White attended a sales meeting.

Dr. and Mrs. Sam Johnson of Pensacola were here Sunday. Mrs. Johnson remained in Clanton on account of the illness of her mother, Mrs. Harper.

Mrs. Spurgeon Calloway and Mrs. Odie Miller attended the State Fair in Birmingham Tuesday.

Miss Helen Newell was a visitor in Birmingham during the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Easterling and daughter, Dean, were in Birmingham Tuesday and were visitors to the State Fair.

Guests of Mrs. J. R. Mullins and Mrs. Hugh Foshee several days last week were Mrs. Thornhill and Miss Marguerite Hill of Monroe, La.

Miss Mildred Gore and Mrs. Julius Smith were visitors at the State Fair in Birmingham Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Ashley of Akron, Ohio, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Jones.

Mr. Lawrence Gerald, Jr., of the University spent the week end here with his parents.

Miss Mary Newell and Miss Ruth Cowan of Alabama College spent the week end in Clanton in their respective homes.

Dr. and Mrs. John Kimmy and sons left Friday for Pinkard where they were guests of Mrs. Kimmy's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gore returned home Wednesday afternoon from a visit in Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Reese Mullins and Mr. Ed Mullins were visitors in Troy Sunday.

Mr. Dolphin and Mr. Dolphin Popwell and Mr. Alex Arnold were in Birmingham Tuesday for the State Fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Osmond Middleton of Montgomery were here for the week end.

BILLINGSLEY

Miss Eloise Clark was the guest of her parents at McShann during the week end.

Mrs. Ada Wimberly, Mrs. Euell Woodard, Misses Mabel King and Sallye Mahan attended the State Fair in Birmingham over the week end.

Prof. J. D. Griffin left Sunday for Thorby as we reluctantly yield them the year. The family of Mr. Griffin will remain here for a few weeks. We regret losing Mr. and Mrs. Griffin and fine family, which are indeed an asset to any community. We congratulate Thorby as we reluctantly yield them.

Mrs. Estelle King of Plantersville is visiting her daughter, Mrs. N. H. Harrell and Mr. Harrell.

Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Willis of Trenton, Ga., visited Mrs. A. J. Marlar last Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard, James Marlar and Miss Maggie Hubbard attended the Chilton County fair at Clanton Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Deason and children were visitors in Prattville Sunday afternoon.

H. S. FACULTY ENTERTAINED BY MR. AND MRS. J. L. HOLLIS

Miss Geraldine Hollis, Mr. and Mrs. John Hollis of Mitchell Dam were hosts last Wednesday evening when they entertained the High School Faculty with a Mexican buffet supper.

The long table in the dining room was artistically appointed with red cloth and large colorful sombreros filled with fruits and red peppers. Miniature sombreros held burning tapers that gave an effective glow to the gayly colored Mexican dishes.

The double sun rooms were decorated to represent a Spanish patio. Large softly lighted urns filled with tall grasses and baskets of flowers overhung small tables with place cards, carrying out the Spanish atmosphere. Games were played and prizes were Mexican hats.

The invited guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Hicks, Mr. and Mrs. Searcy, Mr. and Mrs. Mullins, Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, Mr. and Mrs. Varnell, Mr. and Mrs. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Alred, Mr. and Mrs. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Spicer, Mrs. Kimmey, Miss Simpson, Miss Ward, Miss McRee, Miss Cook, Miss Morton, Miss Blackshear.

Jemison F.F.A. News

The Jemison Chapter of F.F.A. has been very active during the past month. The Chapter was host to the Chisholm District on the night of September 21. They served chicken stew, cake and lemonade.

The Chapter initiated seventeengreenhands. They held a C. H. H. rate of Soda guessing contest boys who have the demonstration.

Gaston Williams and Holston C. They are sponsoring a Fiddlers test on the night of October 8, at 8 o'clock. The admission will be fifteen cents.

The chapter won first prize at the Chilton County Fair. They have a very nice booth of Agricultural exhibits.

The Chapter is cooperating with Chisholm District in sponsoring radio broadcast.

They have one candidate for American Farmer Degree.

You Can Bank on the WEBER Wagon for Years of Hard Work

IF YOU need a strong, light-draft wagon for use over all kinds of going, you can't get any wagon better than the Weber. And it is priced right, too.

Thoroughly seasoned "A" grade lumber is used in the wheels, axles, reach, and tongue. The finest oak and hickory are used in the wheels, and the steel tire and hub bands are put on to stay by a hydraulic press.

Weber farm gears and boxes have been giving the most satisfactory service for nearly a hundred years. Don't buy any wagon until you have examined the Weber. Various capacities and sizes available to meet practically every hauling need.

The WEATHER DOESN'T COUNT

Cotton Rusts BECAUSE IT IS HUNGRY FOR POTASH

COTTON rust is not influenced by weather conditions as much as was generally believed, Southern experiment stations and growers are finding. Even with excessive rainfall, in many sections this year rust damage has been as severe as it was during the dry weather last year. There is only one known way to control cotton rust—USE MORE POTASH. In addition to controlling rust, potash produces larger yields, heavier seed and heavier bolls. It makes more lint per seed, better grade, longer staple, stronger fibers, and a higher percentage of normal fibers. RUSTED COTTON IS HARD TO PICK, and its poor quality causes Southern farmers an annual loss amounting to millions of dollars. Plan now to produce a crop next year that will grow normally to maturity. It can be done by using a fertilizer containing 4 to 10 per cent potash and a nitrogen-potash top-dresser if necessary. Consult your county agent or experiment station about the fertility of your soil. See your fertilizer dealer about the right amounts of potash in your cotton fertilizer. Write us for further information and literature.

Christian Endeavor News

The Christian Endeavor met Sunday night, October 3, at six-thirty P.M. in the auditorium of the Congregational Church. The president, Richard Petersen, took charge and a program for the installation of officers and the receiving of new members followed. Those that joined the society are: Anita Fretwell, Martha Green, Elaine Burdette, Elizabeth Battles, Louise Clarke, Ethel Root, Hazel Pate, Mildred Littlejohn, Catherine Coley, Ruby Lee Wilks, Frances Wood, Leonard Bosworth and Jack McCann. Rev. L. L. Stanley gave a talk congratulating the new members and was followed by Miss Townsend, the sponsor, who expressed her appreciation for the consideration which the Christian Endeavor has shown her. Certificates were presented to Inez Duke, Margaret Golson, Ruth Primm, Addie Primm, Jack Petersen and Fred Blankenship for having taken and passed the Christian Endeavor Expert Course.

At four o'clock on Sunday afternoon a business meeting was held by the new officers. They selected their co-workers and planned their work for the coming months.

A delightful and informal social was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Stanley on Saturday night, October 2. Everyone participated in plenty of wholesome fun as well as in the delicious refreshments which Mrs. Stanley served.

Next Sunday, Oct. 10, there will be regular services at the Thorsby Baptist church. Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

Friday night Oct. 8 at 7:30 the P. T. A. will give a social for the teachers and parents at the Thorsby Public School. All patrons and friends of the school are invited to come and meet the new teachers.

The Thorsby Public School opened Tuesday Oct. 5 at 8:30. There was a large attendance of pupils and also a good many fathers and mothers present. The devotion was conducted by Mrs. A. M. Jackson, and the opening address was made by Mr. Little. The faculty this year consists of Prof. J. D. Griffin, Mr. R. B. Johnson, Mrs. Nan Taylor, Mrs. Claudia Mims, Mrs. Herbert Williams, and Miss Ara B. Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Ellison, Miss Mabel Johnson and Mr. Harrison Hayes attended the State Fair in Birmingham last Wednesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Taylor and Mr. Leon Taylor of Birmingham spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Littlejohn in Thorsby.

Mr. Raybon of Birmingham spent the week end here with his family.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Collins of Fairfield have been visiting friends and relatives here and Collins Chapel.

Mrs. L. E. Moody and children of Birmingham are visiting her sister Mrs. V. H. Sims here.

Mrs. J. F. Thornton, Mrs. Smith and her mother of Montgomery visited Mrs. Elizabeth Law last Tuesday.

Mr. Floyd Hill who is with Patrick Funeral Home, Andalusia, Ala., spent several days visiting Miss Estelle Benson last week.

Mr. Arnold Soberg of Birmingham, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Soberg.

Mr. Ernest Porter and Thomas Childress spent Friday in Selma.

Mr. and Mrs. Akin Rush and daughter, Elizabeth, of Birmingham spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Hayes.

Mrs. J. W. Henley of Montgomery visited Mr. and Mrs. Earl Henley last week, and attended the fair in Birmingham on Tuesday.

Mr. F. E. Dunn of Birmingham is spending a few days with his sister, Mrs. David Vines.

The Congregational Ladies Aid Social will be held at the home of Mrs. J. C. Johnson Thursday afternoon, instead of meeting with Mrs. C. M. Williams. Everybody invited.

Mrs. N. Laurell returned home Saturday after spending several weeks in Birmingham with her daughter.

Mrs. Herbert Lowery spent a few days in Clanton last week with relatives.

Mrs. Herbert Williams, Mrs. Claudia Mims and Mr. J. D. Griffin went to Birmingham to the A. E. A.-P.-T. A.

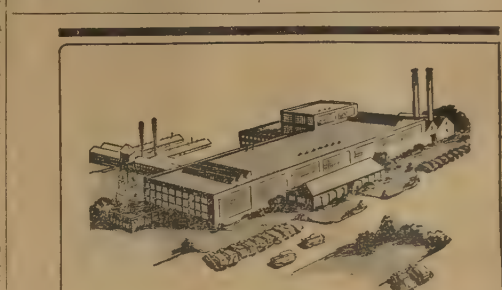

Mrs. Burt Higgins spent Sunday in Clanton.

Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Harper and Mr.

Jenkins Hall. There will be special music and a play, "Thanks Awfully!" Following is the cast of characters for the play:

Richard Montague, Carl Foss; Dorothy Montague, Lillian Smith; Marion Gatewood, Elaine Burdette; Ann Marsh, Kathleen Petty; Carol, Gladys Hicks; Edith, Inez Duke; Mrs. Dodd, Ella Mae Dixon; Mrs. Smythe, Sara Nell Collins; Enid, Ruby Leigh Wilkes; Nanette, Nell Williams; Mrs. Henningway, Oleita Nowell; Mrs. James Gower, Merle Martin; Caroline, Betty Rowell; Jane, Ruby Rayhon.

October 22, at 7:30 P.M. in the Thorsby Institute auditorium Mrs. Henry Stanley of Clanton and Miss Kathryn Foss will give a song recital to which everyone is invited.

Alabama's cotton mills are its largest industry. They give employment to over 39,000 mill operatives. In addition, they employ thousands of others—mechanics, engineers, executives, clerical help.

Alabama's cotton mills annually consume an average of 667,777 bales of cotton... In addition, they are large purchasers of power, fuel, lubricants, hardware and mill supplies. Through their payrolls, they supply the purchasing power for millions of dollars worth of Alabama-grown foodstuffs.

Alabama's textile industry has made rapid strides in recent years. By the understanding cooperation of operatives, management, merchants, doctors and legislators—it will continue to go forward, to the greater prosperity of Alabama and its citizens.

We are very thankful for the present health of this community. Everybody seems to be feeling pretty good lately, especially since we have had a chance to straighten up our backs from picking cotton since the rain last week.Most everybody still has a lot of cotton in the field yet.Not many attended the baptizing last Sunday morning on account of rain. However, most everybody attended Sunday school and preaching.
Two united with the church by letter, and there were several visitors present. The Lord's Supper was observed at the morning service.Most every one went to the Fair during last week, and all admit it was good. We hope all who went enjoyed it as much as we did. And we're hoping to have another fair next year and that our community will have some exhibits. We say "Hurrah" to those who had a part in making the fair a success and especially our local newspapers that enlightened some who other-

PARENTS-TEACHERS ASSO- CIATION TO STUDY SAFETY

The October meeting of the high school Parent-Teachers Association will be devoted to a study of safety.
Mr. J. T. Searcy has prepared a program including a moving picture showing many phases of Safety Education.
Mr. Earl Hearne of Montgomery is bringing some material belonging to the American Legion that carries the lesson of being safe. This material will be shown on this program.In this day of congested highways, fast motor cars, and many other factors that make life and human welfare uncertain, a study of safety and devices that promote safety is very timely. Every patron and friend of the high school, in fact every one interested in the education of our people, are cordially invited to attend this meeting.If you have not visited the high school this year then make it a point to attend this meeting Tuesday afternoon, October 12, at 3:15 o'clock. The officers and members of the Parent-Teachers Association will be delighted to have you present at this meeting.MRS. S. J. EZELL,

Our Rally Day plans were such a success we hardly know how to begin to tell you about it. Maybe you were there and saw and heard for yourself.
If you were not there maybe someone who was there has told you about it.
Anyway, we had a good crowd in spite of the weather and if you missed any part of the program, we feel that you missed something fine. The Church appreciates the efforts made by each person contributing to the success of the day.If you were prevented from rally-

EMPLOYMENT IN ALABAMA SHOWS GAINS

Government Agency Shows Many Former Idle Are At Work

Montgomery, Ala., September 29 — Four states of the South comprising the east south central region of the United States Employment Service—Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky—showed the second largest percentage of gain in private employment in August over July, according to statistics received by the Alabama State Employment Service from the United States Department of Labor.

The gain for this region was 26.2 per cent over the preceding month, while the west south central area—Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas—made the largest gain in the nation, its increase being 44.7 per cent in August over July.

The monthly report of the United States Employment Service showed that 227,999 persons were placed in private employment in the United States in August as a result of activities of the State Employment Service. This was a decline of 1.8 per cent from July and is 29 per cent fewer than applicants for jobs at the end of August, 1936, when 6,833,680 active applications were on file. This does not mean that all applicants were without jobs as the list of applications contained persons seeking better jobs, relief workers on WPA projects and persons totally unemployed.

In the four states comprising the east south central area 22,177 were placed in private and public jobs in August. Alabama's State Employment Service placed 4,245, Mississippi 6,903, Kentucky 4,788 and Tennessee 6,241. This does not include security wage placements.

Jobs were found for 1,217 persons by the Alabama State Employment Service during the week ending September 18, according to statistics released by J. G. Duncan, Jr., Director of the Service. This number compares with 986 the preceding week, an increase of 231. In the past week 946 were placed in private employment while 271 were sent to Public Works projects.

The number of persons seeking jobs in Alabama decreased 2,136 during the week, the active applications at the close of the week being 71,518 compared with 73,654 the preceding week. Now applications were received from 1,368 compared with 918 the preceding week, an increase of 450.

Dallas County led the list in total placements with 237, of which 219 were in private employment. Mobile was second with 138, private jobs going to 70. Jefferson was third with 135, of which 76 were in private jobs. Placements in the remaining seven of the ten highest were in the following order: Calhoun, 91 with 94 private; Montgomery, 65 with 60 private; Lauderdale, 46 with all private; Colbert and Walker tied with 34 each, Colbert's placements being all private and 33 in Walker being private; Talladega, 41 with 22 private.

18 LOST LIVES IN FIRES IN ALABAMA LAST YEAR

Eight white persons and 10 negroes lost their lives in Alabama last year as a result of being in burning buildings. Dr. J.N. Baker, State health officer, pointed out yesterday in urging widespread observance of the period Oct. 3-9 as "fire prevention week." Such observance has been requested in proclamation by President Roosevelt and Gov. Graves.

"In addition to these deaths," Dr. Baker said, "there were 99 recorded deaths in the State attributed to burns received from open fireplaces, and 246 attributed to accidental burns. These deaths constitute a tragic toll in the light of the fact that practically all of them could have been prevented by the exercise of caution. Particularly tragic is the fact that many of the victims of the fire demon are young children. With the approaching cold weather and the resulting need for more fires, parents should be especially careful about leaving their children alone in the house and should also be careful to keep them away from open fires."

Joseph Kranz, of Duluth had his 3 foot beard burned off when it caught fire from his upset pipe

"I want to see what kind of a house-keeper she is," explained John Hahn, 80, of Plaines, Ill., when he secured a license to marry Lillian Snyder, 72.

PREACHING AT CORINTH CHURCH SATURDAY NIGHT

Preaching services for Corinth Church have been announced for Saturday night, October 9th, at seven o'clock. The Rev. F.O. Robinson, well known over the county, will deliver the message. Everyone is cordially invited.

When two men attempted to hold up W. R. Carpon of Duluth, he pointed a banana at them and they fled, thinking it was a revolver.

At a Jewish home for old people in New York is an exclusive Jolly Young Men's Club to which only men over 90 are eligible for membership. The oldest member is 107.

What's RIGHT with ALABAMA

NAVIGABLE STREAMS MODERN PORTS

FROM Alabama's earliest days, her waterways have played a part in her development. Practically all "cities" of the early history of the so-called "Gulf Country" were visioned on the streams.

Later, the thoughts of men turned toward the canalization of the rivers by means of locks, as in the case of the Warrior River, which now offers an all-water route from the rich coal and iron fields to the ports of the Gulf of Mexico. Others, notably William P. Lay, Coosa River steamboat captain and founder of Alabama Power Company, turned their thoughts to power development, seeing the vision of the gradual transformation of Alabama from a backwoods frontier into the hub of southern industry as the result. Still others, observing the cargoes being moved from shore to ship at Mobile, imagined the Port of Mobile as becoming one of the great gateways of commerce to points on the Seven Seas.

So, today, few states are blessed with a more serviceable system of waterways than Alabama—1,488 miles of navigable streams, three of which have been developed for power production—flowing from the very heart of Alabama's rich mineral regions, through fertile farming lands.

Thus products of Alabama mines, farms and factories may move by an all-water route from deep in the interior, to Alabama's splendid port at Mobile, where facilities constructed by the State Docks Commission constitute one of the most modern and complete port terminal systems in the United States.

Accessibility to consuming markets is today of increasing importance to industrial enterprises. Hence it seems certain that our rivers, ports and railroads which have done so much toward Alabama's development, will play an ever larger role in Alabama's future progress.

Enterprise STILL LIVES

Power available to the Mobile area and a large part of Southern Alabama will be doubled by the projected new high tension line of the Alabama Power Company, involving an investment of about $1,700,000.

The announcement is heartening and significant in several particulars.

It shows that despite all the assaults upon it, the power industry in America still lives—and in Alabama, where few, if any, of the broad assaults, were justified—may be said to be thriving, alert and enterprising.

This great program, we read, is to be financed out of cash resources, although there is a warning that unless the "unfair competitive condition" declared produced by the TVA, "is soon changed, the company will be unable to finance the extension of its system to supply power requirements which will be demanded by new industries in many parts of the state."

The announcement further calls emphatic attention to the great possibilities of Alabama's great port territory in the southwestern part of the state. The Aluminum Company's recent announcement of a great plant at Mobile and the developments in the paper industry are only forerunners of what is to be.

Incidentally, this power line construction will itself be a strong stimulant to employment and the Alabama market for many materials.

The enterprise principle still is living, in America, however dormant it may have seemed to some to be.

Citizens Urged To Prepare Themselves For Next Elections

Following is a letter from Tax Collector T. L. McKee, in which he points out some interesting and worthwhile facts for the consideration of the citizens of Chilton County:

"To The People of Chilton County:

"The Constitution of the State of Alabama of 1901 and the amendment of Women Suffrage of 1920 provided that a person, to be a legal voter, must register and pay a poll tax of $1.50 each year from twenty-one years to forty-five years of age. The law sets out a specific time in which the poll tax must be paid, and that time is from October 1 to and including February 1.

"If you become of age before October 1 you are due a poll tax for that year. If you become of age after October 1 you are not due a poll tax for that year.

"The Board of Registrars will be in session this month for the purpose of registering those who have become twenty-one since the last registration, as well as those who did not register and who have moved into the county and have not registered, so let me advise that you meet the board and register and then let me insist that you pay your poll tax and prepare yourself to be a qualified voter so that you can have an equal say in the government and the officers who enforce same.

"I know of no greater duty that you can perform for yourself than to prepare to cast a ballot, especially I would like to appeal to the young voters of this county to register and pay your poll tax this year and keep paying it each year and it will never be a heavy burden, and you will never be deprived of casting a vote of your choice in whatever presents itself.

"We will have several important elections next year, one will be held in January, and for you to vote in this election it will be necessary for you to pay your poll tax this year, since as I understand it, the election will be called January 4, 1938. I am sure that most of you would like to cast your vote in that election since it is our United States Senator to be elected.

"We have in the way of election, several of our county officers and most of the state officers, to vote for in the primary in the November election. I feel sure that all of you will be very much interested in electing the best qualified men or women for the offices to be filled.

"Thanking you for your indulgence in reading this and trusting it to be worth your while, I am,

Yours very truly,

"T. L. McKee."

Things We Think Things Others Think and What We Think of Things Others Think
—BILLY SMITH

Chopping Champion
The missed seeing the log chopping last the other day at the Murray Hardware, but we heard plenty about it. In the presence of a crowd of about two hundred spectators,
Mr. McLaren, national chopping champion, almost made a new record when several who attempted to reach him in chopping through a given log.

Congratulations
To our good friends, Mr. and Mrs.
Lande, we extend a hearty greeting of congratulations on their eighteenth anniversary as residents of Clanton, and operators of The Leader.
Feelings of contentment, happiness and pleasant business relations.
Lande tells us (and it's no secret) that the big birthday party at his home is truly just that, with everyone and guests. We'll be there opening, too.

Time Horse
Some time ago we predicted a third candidate in the special election on Friday 4th at which time a United States Senator will be elected. This time we note the News carries a story to this effect, coming from Tussaloosa. Just who the "dark horse" will be isn't been announced, but we'll say it will be William White, of Druid City. Our friend Lister Hill is a supporter of the Democratic party, the President and the "New Deal" will continue to carry on his aid work in Washington, started when he became a congressman. The leading candidate in the election in Alabama, he will give his worthy opinion many to think about before the elections are counted.

Great Ill
The spent a few hours last week at the state's capitol pretending hobbling with the "ups" and the "lows."
Found Congressman Pete Jarman telling his rounds greeting old friends and a stay in Washington. In the warm greetings we found our friend, Senator J. F. Parrish, to his friends. And he says his name is Jim Parrish, too.
When he becomes the successful candidate next year in the race for governor of Alabama, newspapers will refer to him as James S.
Parrish, well known attorney of Montgomery. We are of the opinion that he underestimates his ability by seeking merely the chair of the lieutenant-governor.

New Wrinkle
The old question, "Which came first, the chicken or the egg?" never entered our cranium with any serious thoughts, doubts, or understandings.
When J. L. Ruffin, chicken, feed, man and grocery man of Clanton, told the other day that the well known chicken he handles will cause the yolk to be green, we sat back on our heels.
And still having some difficulty in attempting to imagine an egg with a green yolk. Yet, when Mr. Ruffin explained this to us, we see the advantage of feeding laying hens with a new kind of feed that can be purchased at the Ruffin store.

To Register
The Board of Registrars of Chilton County is now in session at the courthouse. To those young people who are just rounded out their twenty-first birthday we hand this bit of advice. Register with the Board of Registrars and become a qualified voter of your county. Your vote will mean a great deal to you many times, and the best time to start is at the beginning—at twenty-one years. Missionary Unit Quarterly meeting will be held at Cane Creek Church on Thursday, October 21, at 10 o'clock. All members of each W.M.U. also officers and nominating committee are urged to be present as this is the time to elect officers for another year. Just a few cannot handle this great work. God has given each one a talent to do some thing or more for His Kingdom
work here on earth, and let's not hide
it but get busy about our Master's work. For the day is far spent and the laborers are indeed few. Make an effort to be there and receive a blessing.—Mrs. W. H. Raybon, Sec. Chilton
County W.M.U.

Locks And Locks
When a farmer brings in a boll of cotton with seven locks to it, we ought we had something. C. C.
Lowles, well known farmer of the county, brought us just such a boll the other day. But, when a fellow brings a boll bearing sixteen locks, then we know miracles were not yet to be. Bill Inzer, of Clanton, brought a sixteen lock boll. No, we are not true, we saw it with our own

PROSPECTS OF WORK IN THIS COUNTY GOOD

Indications Are That Six Miles Of Hard Surface Road To Be Laid

Chilton County may soon get its first hard surfaced county road, according to a statement made this week by Judge J. Lee Smith, who has been doing considerable work on securing federal funds to aid the county in this.
Judge Smith, with Commissioners
Oden, Bean, Parrish and Ousley, spent Wednesday of last week in Montgomery conferring with officials there on the matter and found that Chilton County was the fifth to make application for these funds, which are to be matched by the county.
The road to be hard-surfaced in this county in this "Farm to Market" road program will be one approved by a government engineer. It is understood that an engineer has already been in the county looking over some of the main traveled roads.
Judge Smith stated that he believed they would be able to secure sufficient funds for the hard surfacing of approximately six miles of roads in the county. "We see no reason why this county will not get this work done," Judge Smith stated. "And indications are that we will receive the government's assistance, too."

BERTHS IN CCC OPENS TO 4,270 ALABAMA BOYS

Camp Enrollment Began Oct. 4; Some Go To Camps On West Coast

Commissioner A. H. Collins, of the State Department of Public Welfare who by virtue of his office is State director of the selection of CCC enrollments in Alabama, was advised from Washington that this State's allotment for enrollments in the CCC to be held throughout the country next month, was 3,270, or more than twice the highest previous total ever allotted to Alabama since the CCC was established, which was the 2,063 allocation last April.

The increase is accounted for mainly, it was stated by the change in age limits for enrollment from the former latitude of 17 to 23 years, to from 17 to 23 years. No applicant over 23 years of age will be accepted in the enrollments to be held next month. A further provision that no person who has served 18 months in the corps would be accepted for re-enrollment, was

W.M.U. Quarterly Meet To Be Held October 21

The Chilton County Women's Missionary Unit Quarterly meeting will be held at Cane Creek Church on Thursday, October 21, at 10 o'clock. All members of each W.M.U. also officers and nominating committee are urged to be present as this is the time to elect officers for another year. Just a few cannot handle this great work. God has given each one a talent to do some thing or more for His Kingdom
work here on earth, and let's not hide
it but get busy about our Master's work. For the day is far spent and the laborers are indeed few. Make an effort to be there and receive a blessing.—Mrs. W. H. Raybon, Sec. Chilton
County W.M.U.

UNITY W.M.U. WILL MEET AT STANTON OCTOBER 20TH

The Quarterly meeting of the W.M.
U. of Unity Association will be held in the Stanton Baptist Church Wednesday, October 20, at 10 A.M. Rev.
Joseph Avery of Prattville will deliver the Missionary address. All are urged to attend this meeting.—Mrs. W. E.
Coburn, Supt., Unity Association.

ROOSEVELT BACKER WINS IN ELECTION

Connery Named To Fill Va- cant Seat In House; New Deal Is Tested

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 28.—Massachusetts' heavily industrialized seventh congressional district tonight voted a Democrat into the House for the ninth consecutive time, selecting Lawrence J.
Connery of Lynn, in a special election to fill the seat of his brother, the late Chairman William P. Connery of the House labor committee.

The final tabulations gave Connery
40,456 votes against 27,205 for Edwin Devin Sirois, Lawrence Republican, and 933 for Dr. Fred G. Bushold of Lawrence, Union Party candidate.
State Republican leaders invaded this

The Leader Will Observe Eighteenth Birthday Here

A Real Eighteen-Day Birthday Party Awaits Visitors To The Leader When They Start Observing Anniversary

Friday of this week will be a history-making day in Chilton County, according to a statement made this week by M. Lande, proprietor of The Leader, one of Clanton's largest and oldest dry goods stores. Mr. Lande announced the opening of the Leader's Huge Eighteenth Anniversary Sale on Friday of this week, and is sparing nothing when it comes to making this anniversary of this

This sale event, commemorating the completion of eighteen years in business in Chilton County, will without a doubt be one of the greatest events of its kind that was ever held in this section, judging from preparations being made at The Leader. The store is literally jammed with new Fall and Winter wearing apparel of every size, style and description. It has been a long time since any place of business in Clanton has offered the public such an array of merchandise in a sale event.

"Eighteen years is not a very long time," Mr. Lande stated. "It is just long enough for the running of a few grains of sand through the hour glass of time. Yet, that small span—eighteen years—has seen this store go gloriously forward from the beginning making achievements in merchandising by which any merchant would be proud."

"The past eighteen years have found us to be permanent citizens of Chilton County, of which we are truly proud and glad," Mr. Lande continued.
"We realize that the friendship we have accumulated during the past eighteen years in Chilton County could not be bought with money. The friendship of the people of this section has given us such a successful business that we are eager to make our Eighteenth Anniversary Sale one of the greatest value-giving events of them all, and we have been planning for the past twelve months to make it

SUPREME BENCH DENIES MOTIONS ASKING REMOVL

Petitions Brought By Albert Levitt And Patrick Henry Kelly Denied

Washington.—The Supreme Court refused Monday to permit Albert Levitt, former federal judge in the Virgin Island, and Patrick Henry Kelly, Boston attorney, to contest Justice Hugo L.
Black's right to a seat on the bench.
This action gave Black a clear title to his judicial post so far as present challenges are concerned.
Levitt has indicated, however, that he might start other proceedings.
"This fight will not be over if my petition is denied," he asserted.
The court refused to permit Levitt to file his petition, which contended Black was constitutionally ineligible for the position.
Levitt claimed Black was barred be-

Maner Gets Large Painting Of President

Washington, D.C., Oct. 13.—A life-sized oil painting of President Roosevelt has been presented to Pitt Tyson Maner of Alabama, President of the Young Democratic Clubs of America.
The portrait, enclosed in a gold-leaf frame with special lighting fixtures for display, has been hung in Maner's Washington office. It was the gift of a Democratic group in the District of Columbia.

COTTON REPORT

Census report shows that there were 11,499 bales of cotton ginned in Chilton County from the crop of 1937 prior to October 1, as compared with 12,163 bales ginned to October 1, crop of 1936.

Will Celebrate With Big Birthday Party

M. LANDE

When The Leader opens Friday morning, M. Lande, the genial proprietor, will be on hand to welcome the people on the eighteenth anniversary of this store.

BIGGEST VALUE OFFERED IN SEVERAL YEARS BY THE NEWS

Many Outstanding Features As Well As Com- plete News Coverage Makes The News Necessity In Every Home in County

Beginning today, the Chilton County News is making its annual special subscription offer to residents of Chilton County, and offering to them one of the biggest bargains in a newspaper subscription they have ever received. The Chilton County News is one of the most complete weekly county newspapers in Alabama. Complete in that it brings to its readers each week that coverage of news from all sections of the county and many other features.

Dr. Toy Williams At Baptist Church

In the absence of Dr. Ezell, who is in Attalla holding a revival, Dr.
Toy Williams of Shanghai, China, will fill the pulpit at the Baptist Church at both hours next Sunday. Dr. Williams is a native of Chilton County, and a man of wide experiences. The general public and his many friends over the county are urged to hear him, both at the eleven o'clock hour and at seven-thirty at night. Dr. Ezell will be in Attalla until October 21st, assisting Rev. E. B. Eddington in a series of meetings at the Baptist Church.

CLANTON BAND PLANNING TO GIVE CONCERT SOON

To show that much progress is being made in their studies here, members of the newly organized Clanton Band are eagerly awaiting a coming concert to be presented in Clanton.

The band meets twice weekly for practice and the date of the concert will be announced later, it was stated.

KIWANIS CLUB HEARS ADDRESS ON STATE WORK

Secretary Of State Chamber Of Commerce Spoke To Clanton Kiwanians

Members of the Clanton Kiwanis Club learned a great deal more about the State of Alabama last Thursday night than they knew before, is the opinion of those who were fortunate enough to hear the address by John M. Ward, secretary of the State Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Ward came to Clanton from Montgomery as the guest of John C.
Page, Chilton County director in the Chamber of Commerce, and who had charge of the club program last week.
The secretary delved into facts of just what Alabama and Alabamians were not doing to make this state a greater state in finances and production of materials used by other parts of the nation. He cited figures to show that Alabama has some of the greatest possibilities ever possessed by any state, and that Alabamians should take advantage of these.

Mr. Ward told the members of the Clanton Kiwanis Club that each year Alabama was importing millions of dollars of commodities that could be produced in the state instead of being shipped in, and that Alabama could ship out just as much if its citizens would awake to the many opportunities now knocking at the door of the state.

HOWARD ROPER APPOINTED INSPECTOR IN 3 COUNTIES

News was received in Clanton last week to the effect that Howard Roper, of Jemison, had been appointed state license inspector in the counties of Chilton, Shelby and Coosa.

Mr. Roper, who is one of the county's well known and prominent citizens, has been serving as state license inspector in Chilton County. His recent appointment was effective as of October 5th and was made by Hon. Henry S.
Long, head of the State Tax Commission. The News joins the many friends of Roper in extending congratulations.

VERBENA WILL MEET TEAM FROM ISABELLA ON FRIDAY

The new, yet strong and growing football team of Verbena will meet the Isabella school team on Friday afternoon of this week. The game will be played on the Verbena field.

This special offer is one year, fifty-two issues for only one dollar. This offer applies to renewal subscriptions or to new ones, but only in Chilton County. The regular price will prevail.

A Real Bargain
In years past, the News has made this special subscription offer, but now, the News brings to its readers more in news, more in entertainment features, and more in important legal notices, etc., than ever before. Nowhere else can one purchase these same features for only one dollar per year.

No Contest
This is no contest of any kind. There are no prizes being offered. It is simply a straightforward offer to old subscribers and to those not already reading the News, and the over seven thousand readers of the Chilton County News are enjoying the weekly messages of news and features each week.
You can mail or bring your subscription in. Or, just drop the News a postal card telling them to place your name on the list under this special offer.
You can come in at your convenience and pay for the subscription.
But take advantage of this offer now.
It remains open for only a short time.

DEMOCRATIC EXECUTIVES MET IN CLANTON FRIDAY

Members of the Chilton County Democratic Executive Committee met at the city hall last Friday afternoon following a call made by Hon. W. M.
Polk, chairman.

Mr. Polk was unable to attend and the meeting was opened by Billy Smith, secretary, who asked the members to select a temporary chairman.
Hon. W. A. Gullidge, of Verbena, was chosen, and a discussion on registering of voters was entered into. The committee went on record urging all young people of age to register and become qualified voters. Other business matters were also attended to.

Fiddlers Convention At Collins Chapel

The News has been requested to announce a real old time fiddlers convention which will be held at the Collins Chapel School on Friday night of this week, October 15. The program begins at seven-thirty o'clock.

All fiddlers and others are invited and a special invitation is extended to the musicians to come and take part in the contests in which several worthwhile prizes are to be awarded. No admission will be charged those taking part. Other admission will be ten and fifteen cents. Join in and make this a real event.

PIECE OF ANTIQUE FURNITURE GETS ATTENTION AT BRADBRY'S

Considerable attention is being attracted at the Bradberry Furniture Co., here by a dresser, mirror and all, which was recently acquired by Mr. Bradber-ry.

The dresser is of unusual design and is said to be almost two hundred years old. Mr. Bradberry says he has made attempts to get the entire history of the item.

The Sorrell family, some of whom are now in Dallas county, seemed to have owned the dresser first. Then it was handed down to one generation to the next. H. S. Sewell, of this county, purchased the furniture from Dr. Sorrell of Burnsville, about thirty years ago, Mr. Bradberry stated.

SPECIAL FLOUR SALE ON AT YELLOW FRONT STORE

An advertisement from the popular and attractive Yellow Front Store of Clanton, appearing in this issue of the News, is listing many grocery and other bargains.

Of special interest in the advertisement is the attention created by a big flour sale on at that store now. D. L.
Blacketter, manager of the Yellow Front Store stated that they have some most attractive prices on flour there now. See the ad for further information.

In The Cause Of Peace

It is less than a century since Commodore Perry opened Japan to the Western world. For centuries it was an isolated island kingdom, medieval in its social and economic structure, quaint, picturesque, and backward.

But during the latter part of the nineteenth century Japan began to emulate the development of the rest of the world. It was always said of the Japanese that they are great imitators. This ability to adopt the discoveries and industrial methods of advanced nations quickly placed Japan among the world's great powers. It is all an amazing national accomplishment. Today Japanese goods are sold on almost every counter in the entire world. Her industrial machinery is efficient, her business policies are effective.

But astute as the Japanese are, they have failed to realize the importance of public opinion and world-wide good will. The barbarous practices pursued by the Japanese military dictators in China are already producing an effect. In England a nationwide movement is under way to boycott Japanese goods as a protest against the indiscriminate slaughter of women and children in the war against China. In other nations a feeling of resentment is arising. Many Americans will now refuse to use an article stamped, "Made in Japan." All that is needed to create an effective boycott in this country is an organized propaganda.

Here is a weapon which, we believe, might be effectively used in the cause of peace. American peace societies that concern themselves over ROTC training in colleges and disarmament in our nation in the face of a warlike world might serve the cause of peace much more effectively if they would direct some attention to the job of mustering public opinion against the practices of aggressor nations which cause war. An organized propaganda in America against everything made in Japan as a protest against the barbarous and inhuman tactics employed by Nipponese fighters might quickly bring that aggressive and dangerous little nation to its senses.

Japan needs export markets in order to take care of its enormous population of industrial workers. A serious depression in Japanese industry would quickly create such unrest in Japan that the military classes would lose prestige and following among their own people.

Let the peace societies of our country and of the entire world use the weapon they have at hand, an aroused public opinion directed in protest against barbarism more savage than anything known since the time of Genghis Kahn. This might prove to be dangerous and aggressive nations that unprovoked and savage warfare does not pay.

A Literary Hoax

A literary hoax was once perpetrated when some writer made a statement and attributed it to Emerson. This statement, frequently quoted to this day, implies that if a man creates anything of exceptional value, even a better mouse trap, "though he live in the wilderness the world beats a path to his door."

The statement was never uttered by Emerson. Its presentation was a deliberate hoax, and the idea it conveys is a gross fallacy.

Regardless of the merit of any commodity, any program, or any service the world will not beat a path to the maker's door until the world learns all about it through some form of advertising.

It is the maker of the commodity who must beat the path, and that path must lead out of the wilderness to the world.

A Difficult Business

"It takes a lot of study and plenty of head work as well as brawn to make a success of farming," was a statement made by an acquaintance who was brought up on a farm but spent a number of years in another line of occupation before he went back to the job of making his living from the soil.

"It's more of a job than it used to be," he continued. "It's not only a matter of producing economically on the farm but a man ought to know something about present day marketing problems and take an active part in the co-operative movement."

We also recall a statement we once heard in an address by a man of considerable property who owned several business establishments, including a large farm. Said he: "I can get a good man to run the store and feed business. It isn't so hard to find a good man to handle some of the properties. But to get a good man who can make a success on the farm, well that's something difficult."

Those of our readers who may imagine that anybody can farm, would receive a great surprise if they could just get a glimpse of what the modern farmer must do and learn. The fruit grower must study soils, know how to fertilize his orchard, must be familiar with the difficult problem of marketing his crop at a profit. The dairyman must study breeding of livestock, feeding for production, care of animals that contract disease, and in addition to that he must know a lot about getting good field crops. He, too, today is called upon to have a knowledge of the marketing of his product.

Go down the list in farming, and you will find that present conditions combined with the great wealth of scientific knowledge and the many complicated problems that now arise make the job of operating a farm one that keeps both mind and body busy throughout the year.

To those men who have made a success of the business here in our community we extend a word of congratulations. You are engaged in a difficult business, but one that should always be interesting provided you keep abreast of the times.

Of Practical Value

It is told that when Michael Faraday discovered that an electric current could be induced by revolving a wire loop between the poles of a magnet, a statesman asked: "Very interesting, but what good can it be?"

"Some day you may be able to tax it," replied the great forefather of the science of electrical experiment. Probably he did not foresee the gigantic development of electric power in those comparatively early times, but he exhibited the true spirit of the scientist who becomes impatient with the stupidity of the rank and file of mankind who cannot see that abstract science leads quickly and surely to practical invention.

The astronomers who measure the almost measureless distances of space, who weigh stars located so far out into the universe that our ordinary finite minds merely gasp at the enormity of the subject, can point with pride to many practical inventions that were possibly only because of what astronomers have learned about matter, force and light. Helium was first discovered in the sun by spectrum analysis. Many years later its existence in the earth was learned. Now its value becomes a matter of international political discussion.

The list of discoveries of abstract science that have been turned to practical account in the world is almost endless. The chemist, the mathematician, the astronomer, the physicist and the geologist are daily discovering things that appear to have no immediate practical value. But some engineer in a laboratory, confronted with a problem he cannot solve, will often find the answer to his most perplexing problems in the theories and discoveries of those who search the world of science for the mere pleasure of discovering something new and something interesting.

When you read of some amazing new discovery in atomic energy, in light deflection, or in induced radio activity in minerals, don't say: "What good can ever come of it?" Our visible world is being changed from day to day by men who cannot give you an immediate answer to such a question.

When it comes to mutual admiration we believe that Hitler and Mussolini have just about got a monopoly now.

It seems that crime does pay now—at so much per broadcast.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

While sitting in my study I looked out in the back yard and saw a little mocking bird sitting on the ground being fed by its mother. The bird had jumped from its nest before it had grown wing feathers with which to fly. It was being watched by its parents, but they were powerless to protect it when the keen eye of the tom cat located the bird. While I watched it my heart went out in sympathy for I knew that it was in eminent danger. It should have remained in its nice warm nest until its wing feathers were large enough to support it when it tried to fly. At any moment a cat could come along and then there would be no bird. Many a time have I seen boys and girls leaving home before they were sufficiently matured to combat with the temptations of life. Nothing is more pathetic than to see a young life in places of danger. Mothers even push their children into society, into the whirl of the ball room, before they have grown strength and the maturity to combat with the dangers of their surroundings. The danger is too great to risk yourself anywhere, when there is danger of losing your manhood and life. It is probable that the little Mocking bird that I saw will never fly. The dangers on the ground were too many.

The whiskey advertisements in a prominent Alabama Daily were cut out in column size and length and pasted together. Believe it or not, the length of the advertisement in one issue measured about thirty-five feet in column width. That multiplied into inches carried a total of four hundred and twenty inches of whiskey advertisement in one daily in one issue. And yet, they tell us that the repeal of our prohibition laws was intended to reduce drinking. In the name of God, in the name of justice and in the name of right, how are we going to reduce drinking when such advertisements as that are being sent into our homes? It is not hard to understand why our dairies are for whiskey. They can mop up with three hundred dollars a day in advertisement. No wonder they lift their voices for Saloons and an open world. The papers that use whiskey advertisement remind me of a Jack that I saw in Texas. The ranchman kept this Jack, not to breed from, but he fed to bray. The whiskey business has the dairies paid to bray for them. Believe me, they are braying too.

It is required in the establishing of State Whiskey stores in Alabama that the man who operates it shall be a man of good character. We are wondering who is going to pass on the character of the one who applies for the job. Will the preachers, the deacons or the elders be consulted? Will they go to the Sunday school and attend our church services in order to locate the man with the best character? To be sure if they must have a man of good character they will go to people who have a high ideal of character and they will go where character is produced. We are reasonably sure that if the whiskey board will comply with the law that no whiskey stores will be introduced in any county. An Irishman journeyed to the circus to see a Giraffe. He was carried around to the cage where the Giraffe was and Pat stood there for several minutes in silence looking at the strange animal. After looking him over he whirled upon his heels saying, "Faith and be dadd, there just ain't no such animal." When we are told that they must have a man with a good character to run the State whiskey stores, we are inclined to say with Pat, "There ain't no such animal." No man can sell whiskey without breaking down the Christian ideals that produce character.

A member of the whiskey Board visited the county seat where the people had voted wet with a view to establish a State whiskey store. He nosed around and looked about and finally left for his home saying, "I do not think that the people of that little city wants a whiskey store." Who ever heard of a devoted mother wanting a cage of rattlesnakes in the room with her children? Who ever heard of a thinking people clamoring for mad dogs to be released upon their streets? Just to inform the gentleman correctly we would like to say, "No, we do not want a whiskey store." Why should we want a thing in our midst that will induce folks to buy and drink? I have just been in a store in a certain city where they have a whiskey store. It is next door to where the stuff is being sold and the manager said that he had to stand in the back door with a club to keep folks from coming out of the back door of the whiskey and entering his back door for the purpose of drinking. Want a whiskey store in your town? If you say that you want it to reduce drinking, then you want the impossible. It is not going to reduce drinking. How can it when newspapers and dairies are advertising as they are? If you say that you want a whiskey store because you want to promote all that whiskey will produce, then you will bear watching as a citizen of a God fearing country. He who thinks right, he who loves his fellowman and loves him right can never want a whiskey store.

Lady: "I suppose it is very difficult to write well."

Young Author: "Oh, no it isn't. The difficulty comes in making people realize that you write well."

WORLD-WIDE MARKETS

TRAVEL into almost any country of the world today and you will find the products of the mines, factories and farms of Alabama.

Cotton goods from Alabama clothe Polynesian belles of the South Seas. Gins from Alabama gin the cotton of South Africa, India, Mexico, Brazil and China. Alabama-built bridges span mountain streams in Central and South America. Alabama coke melts pig iron in the foundries of Mexico and Canada. Alabama sugar mill machinery grinds the sugar cane of Cuba, Haiti and Brazil. Chips of Alabama marble make terrazzo flooring in the fine buildings in Porto Rico and Canada. Tire repair kits from Alabama are used in Palestine. Over steel rails, made in Alabama, flows the commerce of many foreign nations. Alabama furnaces heat homes in the Canadian Northwest and Alabama ranges cook meals for Chilean and Argentine families. And in almost every state in the entire United States, Alabama products find a market.

Right with Alabama are her splendid transportation agencies—her railroads and rivers. Both have contributed immeasurably to Alabama progress.

Today Alabama has a network of trunk line railroads—5,399 miles of track—over which even local freight trains travel at far greater frequency and speeds than the "flyers" of earlier days—over which roll air-conditioned steel caravans in which the passenger rides, quietly, comfortably, at modest cost, and what is more important, safely.

Not only have the railroads opened many markets for the products of Alabama farms and factories, but they have helped develop and sustain the industries they serve by consuming vast quantities of Alabama coal, lumber, steel and other commodities.

BUILDING AN INDUSTRIAL STATE
With the Alabama Power Company there are several other large corporations that are spending their money to make Alabama a bigger and better State and with the awakening of the people of this State to the possibilities and vast stores of raw material then and only then will the mission of the Alabama Power Company terminate in "well done thou faithful servant."
Nature gave this land of rest to the world and the Alabama Power Company was quick to see that latent possibilities should be brought out in the open to work for the development that will not end until time is no more.—The Huntsville Press.

CLANTON ASKED FOR OPINION ON LOCAL PHONES

Mayor Asks Opinions On Cards Mailed Recently To Subscribers

Considerable interest in Clanton has been aroused in the proposed improvement and change in the telephone system, since Mayor C. Fenn Jones mailed letters to all telephone subscribers seeking their opinions on the matter. A stamped postal card was enclosed in the letters and bore two questions relative to the present telephone system and the proposed changes. It is understood the Southern Bell Telephone Company is willing to make this change if the sufficient number of the subscribers wish it made. Mayor Jones' letter stated in part: "To Each Person Who Has A Telephone In Clanton: "The Southern Bell Telephone Company has been requested to change the telephone system we are now using, which is known as the "Magnetophone System," to a "Battery System." To make this change the company shows the cost to them will be about $14,000.00. All telephones now in use will be removed and new ones installed, and new and different Central Office equipment will have to be set up, and another location for the Central Office will be required. "For this improved system, and the outlay of money which greatly increases their investment in Clanton, the company will increase our present monthly charge for residence phones 25c per month, and business phones 50c per month in addition to the amount we are now paying. I have investigated the matter thoroughly and am convinced we cannot get the improved service without the additional cost per month. Therefore, it is up to you to determine and say whether you want the new system and keep pace with the progress made in phone service, or are you willing to continue using the out-of-date system we now have? "The advantage in the Battery System over the Magnetophone System we now have, and what you get for the increased monthly charge, is simply this: You do not have to ring central; you pick up the receiver and a light appears in central office, and the operator calls for the number you want, connection is made and you continue the conversation as long as you wish. The operator will not interrupt you by asking "Are you through?" The light that appeared in central office when you took up the receiver, burns until you end the conversation and return the receiver to its resting place. When you release the receiver a light tells the operator you have concluded the conversation, then the connection is immediately broken. You do not have to "ring off" as you should do with our present system. Should you have reason to use your phone again in a moment or so, you will not find it still connected with the party you had just finished talking to, causing you to explain you are "ringing central." At present you impatiently wait on the operator to inquire "Have you finished?" You answer angrily, "Yes, a half-hour ago; give me 56-W." Possibly a half-minute had passed, but the slow system we have disturbed your sweet disposition. All that delay and the annoyance to both you and the operator is avoided and eliminated with the new and improved "Battery System." "The Battery System is much faster and a more pleasant service. Many towns and cities over the state are changing to the Battery System. I want Clanton to keep step with all progress and to get everything that is best and beneficial to us. It is my opinion we will appreciate the Battery System, and soon forget the extra charge. However, the City Council and myself, neither does the telephone company, want to order this change made unless you desire it, or at least a ma-majority of the subscribers are in favor of the change.

India Welcomes Alabama Visitor When Miss Shepherd Views Attractive City Story Exclusive To News Comes Direct From India
From Popular Clanton Miss

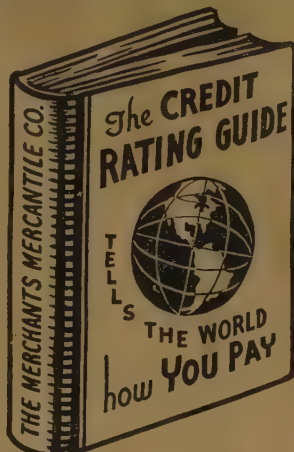

By Miss Ruth Shepherd
I found India perfectly fascinating from the people in their saris and turbans to the buildings that were like so many illustrations from a book of fairy stories.
Even the most modern of Bombay is like being in another world, so strange are its sights and customs. One of these customs in particular I should like to mention; the rites connected with the Towers of Silence. It is to these towers that the Parsis, a very high type of Indian, bring their dead. The bodies are placed inside the towers, which have no roof and are built after the fashion of an arena. Then twice a day the high priest calls about three hundred vultures, who devour a body in fifteen or twenty minutes. After that is over, the bones are thrown down into the pit and allowed to dry and decompose under the sun. These final remains are let out by special drains through sacred water to finish purifying them before they go to Mother Earth. This is one of the principal ideas behind the ceremony; not to allow the body to defile Earth. Another idea behind it is not to spend money on funerals for the dead bodies, but to give it to the living poor instead. I couldn't help but admire these ideals, even in a ceremony that seemed so horrible to my American mind. We saw Burning Photo, too, but I shan't dwell on things like that too long.

To go from the morbid to the beautiful, our next stop was Agra, the sight of the world-famous Taj Mahal. The building is exquisite in its perfect symmetry of arches and great dome and bordered by four slender minarets. It is of white marble, inlaid with semi-precious stones and carved around the doors with passages from the Koran in Arabic. The most perfect time to see it, of course, is by moonlight with all its whiteness against the sky, but it is almost equally beautiful at sunset. Then the marble seems to take on a very faint pinkish cast. The name Taj Mahal, is translated to mean "light of the palace," which is very apt for the tomb of the wife of the builder, Shah Jahan. Shah Jahan had intended building an exact replica of the building, except in black marble, just across the river as a tomb for himself. His kingdom was taken over however, and he was imprisoned by his son before he could accomplish this. So he was buried beside his wife in the Taj Mahal.

Out from Agra is Fatehpur Sikri, the Deserted City. It is an enormous city built by the great Moghul Emperor, Akbar, in the sixteenth century and inhabited by the Court for only seventeen years. Lack of a sufficient water supply is given as the chief reason for its desertion. It's queer to think of building up a great place like this and then just going off and leaving it.

To me, the most interesting spot in Fatehpur Sikri was the Hall of Private Audience. It was suspended from the side walls, is a round dias where Akbar sat to discuss religion with the learned men of many lands. (Akbar, although brought up as a soldier, was a great philosopher. He tried to get at the ultimate truth by taking the best from all religions and combining it.) It felt strange to be standing in the spot where Akbar the Great had spent so many hours.

Out from Jaipur, in Rajputana, is another most interesting deserted city; Amber. Amber had been the site of an

ANNOUNCEMENT
The Merchants Mercantile Company wishes to notify the people of Chilton County that the Credit Guide is ready for publication and that those who wish to improve their credit rating will have to do so by October 16th if they wish to receive credit in the first guide. This applies to those who have made satisfactory arrangements as well as to those who have paid little or none.

Many have taken care of their obligations and will be proud of the credit they will receive. Others have not been so interested and will have no cause to be proud of their rating.

The business and professional men have asked that the guide be delayed as long as possible in printing to give an opportunity to those who have been hindered, but the time expires October 16th.

SPECIAL NOTICE

Those business and professional men who desire special reports on new-comers into the trade territory will call Mrs. Wyatt at the Union Banner and give the person's name, together with her proper references and the information will be furnished at the earliest possible moment.

dred rupees (a rupee is worth about fifty cents) and at least six months in prison.

Jaipur is more native than almost any place we were in. We were extremely fortunate here, too, in seeing a great native spectacle; the parade marking the last day of the marriage season. The parade itself was exciting, the Maharajah's horses and elephants all in silver and gold trappings, but watching the crowds and crowds of people was even more fascinating. I wish I could have had a colour camera with me to record the picture of the natives in their red and yellow saris and bright coloured turbans, nched all over the sides of the pink Hindu buildings. It was really marvelous.

Our longest stay was in Delhi, the capital. Delhi has been called the world's greatest Imperial City; it has continued being the capital of many succeeding empires (eight in all) while other cities throughout the world have crumbled. During the centuries, it has accumulated relics much too numerous to write about, so I shall only mention a few of these.

First there is the Kuth Minar, a great shaft of red sandstone that is the third highest column in the world. It was built in the thirteenth century by Kuth-ud-Din Aibak, founder of the Slave Dynasty of Mohammedan Kings. The whole height of it is richly carved with scrolls containing Arabic verses from the Koran.

Then there is the Friday Mosque, the largest in India. It's hard to try to talk about a mosque of this sort because there's nothing to describe except the open court, the tall minarets for the call to prayer, and the great domes. It is impressive, but not beautiful at all except for the lines of the domes. We saw Mohammedan women all swathed in white with their faces covered. (I'm sure, however, that they didn't look a bit stranger than we did, what with huge sack arrangements on our feet to cover our shoes.)

Lastly, here in Delhi is a palace that is supposed to have been in its time the most beautiful in India. It was built by Shah Jahan when he moved his capital from Agra to Delhi after his wife's death. He particularly loved white marble, water and precious stones, and these were in evidence all throughout the buildings. The living quarters and the grounds are all beautiful but the Audience Hall must have been the loveliest thing in the world—it still is beautiful. It is a great white marble hall, out in the open. It has sunken channels all through it for running water to form little streams. The bottom of these was formerly inlaid with gold and silver zigzags to look like fish swimming around. The ceiling had gold and silver stripes, and the marble arches and columns were inlaid with precious and semi-precious stones. It was here, too, that the famous Peacock Throne sat on a great marble slab. Shah Jahan had engraved in the Audience Hall: "If there be a paradise on earth, it is this, it is this, it is this"; and I can well believe that it was no great exaggeration.

With a toy pistol he purchased at a five and ten cent store, Elmer Ford held up an Oklahoma bank and robbed it of $500.

Strength During MIDDLE LIFE

Strength is extra-important for women going through the change of life. Then the body needs the very best nourishment to fortify it against the changes that are taking place.

In such cases, Cardul has proved helpful to man, women. It increases the appetite and aids digestion, favoring more complete transformation of food into living tissue, resulting in improved nutrition and building up and strengthening of the whole system.

Miss Moody Gives Luncheon For Miss Ellis

(From the Montgomery Advertiser)

Miss Mary Ellis, whose marriage to Mr. Raymond Calloway Smith, will take place early in November, was honoree of a pre-nuptial party at which Miss Marion Moody entertained yesterday when she gave a buffet luncheon at the home of Mrs. Owen Brewer on Felder Avenue.

The rooms were in adornment of rich-hued flowers.

The buffet table was in lovely setting and adornment. The central ornament was a miniature silver chandelier filled with pink and purple grapes and other tropical fruits. On the table was effective arrangement of fruits in colors of yellow, red and purple.

Presiding at the coffee service were Miss Jane Terrell and Mrs. Gresham.

Mr. Cohen Stapp of Selma spent last Thursday in Clanton.

Mrs. J.R. Mullins spent last Thursday in Birmingham where she was one of the Art Judges at the State Fair.

Mrs. W.E. Huddleston, Jr., and Mrs. James Wade were visitors in Montgomery Friday.

Mr. Arthur Littlejohn is here spending some time with his parents.

Miss Margaret Floyd spent last week end in Clayton, Ala. with her mother, Mrs. W.E. Floyd.

Mrs. James Wade left Friday for Ft. Meyers, Fla., where she was called on account of the illness of Mr. J.Q. Wade. The latest report of Mr. Wade was that he was better, although still confined to a Ft. Meyers Hospital.

PEANUT DIVERSION PROGRAM FOR 1937 ANNOUNCED BY AAA

A program to maintain prices to peanut growers for their 1937 crop by diverting a portion of the crop to oil and by-products was announced today by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

The diversion program authorizes regional associations of producers, recently organized to carry out the program, to pay the following prices for farmers' stock peanuts grown in 1937: Southeastern Spanish No. 1, $65 per ton; No. 2, $61 per ton.

Runners No. 1, $57 per ton; No. 2, $53 per ton.

The associations will buy 1937 farmers' stock peanuts directly from producers at these prices. All prices are for peanuts delivered to the association warehouses.

Growers in Georgia, Florida, Alabama, and Mississippi may sell to the Georgia-Florida-Alabama Peanut Association, Camilla, Ga.

The associations will divert the peanuts from markets for out-of-hand eating and manufacture of peanut butter and confections, and sell them under contract to crushing mills for production of oil and by-products.

If demand for edible consumption develops, the associations may sell part of their supplies back into the edible trade. Under the terms of the program the AAA offers to reimburse the associations for losses from diversion purchases.

Farmers Advised To Select Laying Hens

Auburn, Ala.—Alabama poultry producers are advised by John E. Ivey, poultry specialist of the Alabama Extension Service, to make final selection of hens for their laying flocks.

The selection of breeding stock, Mr. Ivey says, should be based on (1) maturity, (2) rate of laying, (3) non-broodiness, and (4) persistence of laying.

The many friends of Mr. J. Q. Wade will be glad to know that he has been released from the hospital at Fort Meyers, Fla. Mr. Wade, who has been in ill health for some time, is spending the winter with Mrs. Wade at Fort Meyers, Fla.

Little Miss Susan Powers of Lay Dam was a visitor in Montgomery during the week end as guest of her dancing teacher, Dorothy Claire Cook.

Those from out of town who attended funeral of J. A. Duncan Wednesday were Rev. J. H. Thomas of Chattanooga, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Cost of Hartselle, Mrs. Chas. Shaffer, Birmingham, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Nelson, Wetumpka, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cost, Atmore.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Tyus and daughter, Tommie Tyus, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Tyus all of Birmingham came down Sunday and spent the day with their parents. Mr. and Mrs. Ben Tyus.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Tyus and family, spent the week end with their father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Tyus.

Who's Who at Alabama College

These five student presidents at Alabama College, the State College for Women, reveal that Montevallo honors for the 1937-38 college year have been widely distributed over Alabama. The leaders shown here are Elizabeth Pearson, Sweet Water, of the Student Senate; Julia Coley, Alexander City, of the Presidents' Council; Hazel McLendon, Birmingham, of the Student Government Association; Martha Nicolson, Selma, of the Athletic Board, and Frances Cumbee, Five Points, of the Senior Class.

A very interesting program on Safety which was arranged by Mr. J. T. Searcy was given at the P-T-A. Tuesday afternoon.

The devotional was conducted by Mr. Hicks. Mr. E. M. Hearne of Montgomery, who is the Safety Director of the American Legion for Alabama, was introduced, and he showed a film with safety on the highways emphasized.

Mr. J. O. Speed of Birmingham, Safety Director of the Alabama Power Company, reviewed the number and gave of accidents in the home, and gave very timely suggestions on how to prevent home accidents. Mr. J. T. Alley of Montgomery was also present at the meeting.

Mrs. Percy M. Pitts is President of the P-T-A. and Mrs. Patterson Hicks, secretary.

A special assembly was called Wednesday morning in order to show the students the problem of Safety driving. The program was carried off nicely after giving about 3 minutes of time for Mr. Searcy and Mr. Evans to learn the art of operating the machine. The program was thoroughly enjoyed and ended with the spanking of hands.

Chilton vs. Wetumpka

C. C. H. S. took an interesting game from Wetumpka High School last Friday by the score of 6-0. It seemed at first that Chilton's continuous fumbling would be detrimental to their progress, but they overcame this handicap by some real nice running, blocking, kicking and passing. The two lines were about evenly matched and both backfields had plenty of speed but Wetumpka never threatened until the game was too old. Wetumpka received 5 penalties that were pretty costly to them, while Chilton only received 2.

The first downs were numerous for both sides but each seemed to play too recklessly with the ball. Kelly, Leonard and Thornton were starred for Wetumpka while Williamson led for the Tigers. Better luck next time. Wetumpka!

WOMEN PLAN HOME IMPROVEMENT PROJECTS

Clanton, Ala.—Many Alabama farm women are planning a 3-to-5-year home improvement program to be financed by contributions from their husbands by sales of miscellaneous farm products on curb markets.

Pickens, economist and home improvement specialist of the Alabama Home Service, is working with the women in formulating their plans. The program has already started in 16 counties, including Clarke, Escambia, Butter, Kalb, Lamar, Pickens, Geneva, Montgomery, Crenshaw, Perry, Tuscaloosa, Blount, Lauderdale, Limestone, Bibb, and Conecuh, and will include others soon, says Miss Pickens.
In addition to the women repairing their own homes and home grounds, many of them are joining in community projects of improving storage of clothing and foods, improving their homes, and improving road conditions.

Alabama's New Highway Building Is Magnificent Structure Near The Capitol

The top view shows Alabama's handsome state capital building. The lower
which houses the Highway Department, the Alabama Highway Patrol headquarters and other state departments. It is termed one of the most beautiful structures in the state and is one of the first steps taken to enhance the beauty of the section of Montgom-

IN MEMORY

In memory of my father, Dr. Alonza James Marlar, who was born in Montgomery, Ala., December 29, 1851 and died at Billingsley, October 10, 1937.

He was married to Miss Mary Susan Lowe, Wetumpka, December 25, 1872.
She still survives him. To this union three boys and four girls were born, all of whom still survive.

He joined the Clanton Baptist Church in early manhood under the ministry of Dr. John R. Sampey, later transferring to Billingsley Baptist Church.

Received his degree in medicine and surgery from the Memphis Medical College, Memphis, Tenn., in 1889, practicing his profession in Clanton, Stanton, Eoline and Billingsley until within one week of his death. He ministered to all alike—rich or poor—indeed and in truth it can be said of him:
"His life was lived for others."

He affiliated himself with the Masonic Fraternity in 1897 at Stanton. In recent years transferring to Clanton Lodge in which he held membership at his death.

I can not say and I will not say he is dead. He is just away. He left us here—and fair it must be, since he is there how beautiful heaven must be.
Think of him still, as the same. I say he is not dead, he is just away.
How we have missed you in this year you have been away—His Daughter, Mrs. J. C. Hughes.

SHORT WAVE RADIOS ARE BRINGING RESULTS IN STATE

The short wave radio sets recently installed on the cars of the highway patrolmen have produced results as to their usefulness.

Officer Waites with deputies Crow and Leary of the Sheriff's office was in Thorsby Monday afternoon of last week when a report was flashed over the Highway patrol broadcasting system, notifying the officers to watch for a certain car the occupants of which were wanted in Conecuh county for grand larceny.

A few minutes later the officers spotted this car on the highway and placed the occupants under arrest on a charge of grand larceny. The person arrested gave their names as Jim Griffith, Marlett Brown, Hazel Griffith, Pearl
Brown, Velma Stanford and John Favors. All were released to the sheriff of Conecuh County.

New Miracles Of The Photoelectric Cell

By James D. Purdy
Director, Schools of Electrical Engineering, International Correspondence Schools

TRANSCERENCE of light impulses into electrical impulses through the medium of a photoelectric cell is the basis of a newly invented method for the transmission of color photographs over long distance telephone circuits. In a recent demonstration of the method, a three-color photograph was transmitted by telephone from Chicago to New York.

The United States Bureau of Standards has developed a balloon device to determine the safe flying ceiling during foggy weather. As the balloon ascends a photoelectric cell measures the light at different levels. Varying brightness of the light causes a change in the pitch of a radio signal which the device transmits to the recorder on the ground.

A new photoelectric device is now available for measuring light reflected from a wall or other flat surface. A hollow metal sphere is brought into position with its opening against the surface to be tested.
Light is directed into the sphere through a tubular arm. An electric eye accurately measures the amount of light reflected from the surface.

"Thermene" Refrigeration, Simple, Non-Electric, Is Announced

A new era in food preservation is foreshadowed by the introduction of a line of automatic refrigerators functioning on a new principle, using a electric current for operation. Though the system is applicable to the entire field of refrigeration, including industrial installations, the manufacturers are demonstrating its efficiency first through a series of household units.

Tradenamed "thermene," the new refrigerators resemble conventional electrically-powered types in appearance and food storage arrangement, but differ in the similarity of the fact that they are without motors and other mechanical elements not only makes these "thermene" models ideal for apartment and home use, where silence is an important consideration, but brings the advantage of domestic refrigeration to unelectricified locations such as farms, summer cottages, country stores, camps, roadside restaurants, water craft, etc.

The action of the "thermene" system is derived from the fact that "ther-mene," a non-inflammable, non-explosive liquid, evaporates easily at low temperatures when a partial vacuum is created around it. In this respect it differs from the usual methods which rely upon high pressures for operation.
Hence, "thermene" refrigerators require no machinery at all, but merely a simple combination of evaporator, condenser and automatic valves which,
in order to produce cold, needs only the heating effect of a small gas, bottled-gas or kerosene flame.

All of which certainly puts household refrigeration on a new footing and brings its advantages to virgin fields. The circumstance that the "thermene" principle is sponsored by a manufacturer well and long-established in the field of refrigeration—General Household Utilities Company, Chicago, makers of Grunow electric models—adds additional interest to the news.

Legislation Beneficial To The Traveling Public

The present legislature enacted a number of laws that have added to the convenience and safety of the traveling public.

It passed laws that have enabled the State to pave approximately 1200 miles of road during the past two years. During this same period 2300 miles of gravel and sand clay roads were built and more than 100 additional miles were graded and drained.

All bridges in Alabama have been made free of tolls. There were fifteen toll bridges owned by the State, and one privately owned bridge that was acquired by the State, that were made free.

A law was passed creating the highway patrol which has made travel on the highways safer. Drunken drivers are being arrested as well as others who violate the traffic laws.

Laws were enacted making it unlawful to use gasoline taxes for any other purpose than construction and maintenance of roads, streets and bridges.

Laws were passed permitting County authorities to participate in two way and three way paving projects.

It passed laws providing for closing grade crossings, and pledged one twelfth of the gasoline tax for the next five years to be used in matching federal funds for paving.

It passed a law reducing the license fee on automobile tags.

A law was passed giving voters the right to vote on a constitutional amendment limiting the use of gasoline tax to building and maintaining roads, bridges and streets.

COUNTY COUNCIL CLUBS SUCCESSFUL AT STATE FAIR

The County Council of Home Demonstration Clubs decided several weeks ago that they would represent Chilton County with a booth at the State Fair. This meant much work and completely at it for the club women. They were spent among the clubs getting special canned goods ready for the exhibit. The Council furnished standard jars for the occasion and soon an assorted variety of vegetables, fruits and meats had been collected. Various farmers contributed farm products from over the county and when the entire materials were assorted, prepared and placed Chilton County had a most attractive exhibit and when the day for the judging came they were all smiles because the judges saw fit to place in their hands for the Council $215.00.

These ladies deserves much credit for their cooperation, the time and effort spent in putting up the exhibit. The people who assisted in putting up the exhibit itself were: Mrs. J. M. Roper, Mrs. Horace Popwell, Mrs. Joe Mims, Mrs. Frank Jones, Mrs. Lillian Driver, Mrs. J. D. Arledge, Mrs. J. D. Williams, Mrs. Ruth Jones, Mrs. Harry Anderson, Mrs. Spencer, Mrs. Jewell Sutley, Mr. Clifford Manning, Mr. began to hustle. Several canning days

HISTORY IN THE MAKING

C. C. Williams, Mr. Howard Oden and Miss Meta Grace.

At the local Fair the Council President, Mrs. Karl Christensen, and a committee of women put the local exhibits up. These exhibits included exhibits of miscellaneous articles, a booth of canned goods and a booth of sack articles.

At the stand the various clubs sold eats and drinks and each day different clubs did their bit.

W want to thank each and every one who took part and for the people who so graciously helped us in this first undertaking.

MT. PLEASANT CLUB

The Mt. Pleasant Club met Tuesday, October 5, at the home of the president, Mrs. Emmett Smith. The meeting was called to order and we all joined in singing the "Smile" song. The Bible reading, Psalms 130, was given by Martha Kennedy, and followed by the roll call and reading of the minutes of the last meeting, by the secretary, Mrs. Roy Wilson.

Immediately after a discussion of the success of both county and State fairs, the president presented to Miss Grace a lovely table lamp as a birthday gift from the club.

After a few games Miss Grace read the constitution of the club, and explained a few of the most outstanding points.

Each one reported that she had an excellent time at the club party of a few weeks ago. We are looking forward to the next social, which we hope will be in the near future.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Emmett Reid on November 2.

MINERAL SPRINGS CLUB

The Mineral Springs Demonstration Club met at 2:00 o'clock Monday, September 13 at the Mineral Springs church.

The meeting was called to order by the president.

After the old business had been disposed of the officers for the new year were elected which are as follows:

President, Mrs. F. E. Pascal; Vice-president, Mrs. D. D. Ashcraft; Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. T. R. Gore; Leaders, Mrs. H. C. Burgess, Miss Maude Retherford, Miss Gladys Dobbs, and Miss Gertrude Gore.

There being no other business the meeting adjourned until next month.

Calves Need Only Dry Feed After First Four Weeks

Milk Fed in Limited Quantities the First Month.

Dairymen have always been troubled by the problem of how to get calves on dry feed. They realize that most of their worries are over when the calf is completely off milk and entirely on dry feed, yet few practical solutions for accomplishing this feeding change have been offered. Recent advances in milk prices have made their problem more acute. Research has shown calves are entirely capable of digesting solid food when only three or four days old.

Calves with Mother 3 Days

A simple plan for getting calves on dry feed has been worked out at the Purina Experimental Farm where hundreds of calves are raised. Calves are left with the cow only three days. During that time they get mother's milk because of its colostrum content, an important and necessary lubricant to the new born calf's digestive system.

Soon Learn to Eat Dry Feed

After the calves are three days old they are taken from the cow and fed all the dry starting feed they will clean up. At first this is not much, but every day the amount is increased. At first they get only two quarts of milk per day with calf startena, hay and water. At the beginning of the second week they are fed four quarts of milk daily and all the calf startena, hay and water they will eat. During the third week they get five quarts of milk daily with dry feed kept before them all the time. At the beginning of the fourth week the milk is cut to three quarts daily, causing calves to eat more dry food. After four weeks no milk is fed at all. Calf startena, hay, a little salt, and water is their entire ration. These amounts of milk are for Holstein and the larger breeds of calves. Guernsey and Jersey calves are fed a little less milk.

TO MEET THE NEED FOR MORE AND BETTER SERVICE

Southern Bell spent eighteen million, eight hundred and twenty-seven thousand dollars during 1936 for improvements and replacements in telephone "plant" in order to meet the public's service needs in nine Southern states.

This money was required for such items as land and buildings, switchboard and other equipment, subscriber telephone equipment, local and long distance lines. The estimate for 1937 is that nearly twenty-three million dollars will be needed.

The increased demand for service in 1936 resulted in a net gain of 83,000 telephones. Local calls increased 9.8 per cent over 1935 and toll and long distance messages gained 15.9 per cent, the greatest number of telephone calls in the Company's history.

Better business was reflected also by the addition of 1800 employees, bringing this total to almost 19,000 by the end of the year. The payroll was over twenty-one million dollars.

Taxes, too, increased to the highest sum in the Company's history, when seven million, three hundred and twenty-six thousand dollars was paid to federal, state, county and municipal agencies. This was an average of 63.8 cents per telephone per month, or $7.66 per telephone for the year.

Calls were handled efficiently—service criticisms decreased eight per cent and voluntary commendations of the service increased 32 per cent despite a new high average of 8.62 originating calls per telephone per day.

Such facts as these show how well telephone folks are accomplishing their determination to give the most service and the best, at the least possible cost.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Sewell went to Camp Hill Wednesday of last week to visit their son David. They returned last Friday and report a nice trip.

Rev. and Mrs. Mims have moved to Verbena where he is teaching school. We will look forward to the time when they shall move back as they will be greatly missed here.

About forty-seven of our B. Y. P. U. went to the B. T. U. convention last Sunday at Maple Springs. So the banner is ours for one quarter at least. (We hope to win it again in January) although we do not have an A-1 union we have a real live one. And efforts are being made to bring it up to standard within the near future.

We thank those who put the stove up and had the church nice and warm last Sunday night, as it was surely needed.

Relatives and friends were saddened over the death of Mr. Childress of Sylacauga who was buried at Mt. Carmel last Thursday afternoon.

DARK HORSE IS EXPECTED IN SENATE RACE

Third Candidate Promises To File Qualification Papers By November 1

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Oct. 7.—There will be a third candidate in the race for the United States Senate seat vacated by Hugo L. Black, and he will run on a platform pledging determined opposition to federal wage-hour fixing and court packing.

This was disclosed this week by William L. White, Tuscaloosa safety engineer, who was a candidate for lieutenant governor in 1930, and is widely known in political circles. Mr. White announced that the dark horse candidate, whose name was not immediately revealed, would file his qualification papers before entry lists close Nov. 1.

"I have definite information," said Mr. White, "that this dark horse will enter the race against ex-Senator J. Thomas Heflin and Congressman Lister Hill and wage a vigorous state-wide campaign. This candidate will be an aggressive young business and professional man who has been quietly surveying the situation for some weeks. In this survey he has found, according to his statement, that there is a widespread demand for another candidate. Many thousands of Alabama Democrats, he declares, are determined not to be forced into a choice between Heflin and Hill. Strong assurances of support from every section of the state have been given the dark horse, who already has visited 38 counties and who gives assurance that he will make his formal announcement as soon as he completes his swing through the other 19 counties."

While Mr. White did not intimate that he was the "dark horse" candidate in question, it is a well known fact that he is being urged and solicited by many friends throughout the state to make the race.

Mr. White's statement that a third candidate will enter the field before November 1 stirred new interest in the senatorial campaign and caused widespread speculation as to the identity of the "young dark horse."

General Fund Tax Is Cut Half A Mill

A reduction of approximately $300,000 in State ad valorem taxes was announced yesterday by Governor Bibb Graves, to be effective on levies payable Oct. 1.

The reduction, to be proclaimed formally next month, will be brought about by elimination of one-half mill of the 2 1-2 mill property levy for the State's general fund, to place the levy for the next fiscal year at two mills.

Altogether 6 1-2 mills of ad valorem taxes are levied in the name of the State. But only the 2 1-2 mills goes to the general fund. Three mills goes directly to schools and one to the Confederate pension and public welfare funds.

Last year's total assessment was $924,000,000 and the 1-2 mill reduction on that basis would amount to $462,000,000.

I DARE YOU—

A Challenging Book By a Practical Business Man.

Not often does a two-fisted, hard-hitting business man have the time or the inclination to write from his experiences such an inspirational book as "I Dare You." William H. Danforth, author of this challenging volume, has drawn from the wealth of his own experiences in writing this daring message.

Nationally Known

As founder of a large feed and cereal business, lecturer, church worker, author and world traveler, William H. Danforth, chairman of the board of Winston Purina Company, has dared to do many big jobs. As an employer he challenges the physical and mental best of every one of his thousands of employees. But his influence extends outside his business organization, in the field of education, and in church circles. William H. Danforth is known as the challenger who dares young people to bring out the best that is within them.

William H. Danforth, founder of the Winston Purina Company, and author of "I Dare You."

Ranks Among Best Sellers

"I Dare You," at first printed privately for circulation among associates and friends, has today found its way into schools, churches, camps, and libraries all over the nation. So rapidly has the popularity of this little book grown that today it is ranked among the best sellers of the nation.

William H. Danforth in explaining why he wrote "I Dare You" says that as a business man he agrees that he should stand to business, but that he had the urge to share his philosophy with the few who are headed somewhere. "I Dare You" will be passed up by those who are afraid," says the author. "It will only lure the soulless, flattered, and amuse the sceptic. It will antagonize some. Many will not even know what it is about. It is written only for those who believe they can be bigger and more important than they are."

(Editor's Note: A folder on "I Dare You" can be had for the asking by writing the "I Dare You" committee, St. Louis, Missouri, 835 S. Eighth St.)

IN MEMORY OF MOTHER

We realize how true the song is, "You will never miss your mother until she is gone," since our precious mother is gone, but as the "Angels tell mother I'll be there," we are all preparing to meet her on that golden shore.

The death angel came on Monday Sept. 27 and took our mother, Laura Middlebrooks Hathcock to her heavenly home. She loved to stay with us but when she knew she must soon go she was ready and glad to go to a more beautiful home to meet her Father.

Mother and her little son who had long gone on before. Our hearts are sad and we are lonely for those sweet smiles and loving words that we cannot have any more, but we are thankful to our Lord that she was spared for us as long as she was.

She was 44 years old, had been a member of the church about 18 years. She leaves about to, her husband, Claude Hathcock, 4 sons, Marilyn, Fozna, Eugene and R. C. Hathcock, two girls Laura Ella Hathcock and Wretha Ingram; two grandchildren, Hamric and Artie aHthcock; 6 brothers and 5 sisters.

Our loss is heaven's gain and we know the Lord doeth all things well. Funeral services were held at Beth Salem church, Tuesday Sept. 28. Rev. Joe Moore preached the funeral. Brown Funeral service in charge of the body. Pall bearers were nephews of the deceased.

We wish to thank our many friends for being so kind and thoughtful of our darling mother and for the many funeral offerings.

Husband and Children.

Seeing his automobile being driven down the street, Roy Scott of Arkansas City, Kan., begged a ride from the driver and forced him to go to the police station.

Four kittens born in a church at Bloomington, Ill., were bought by members and the money placed in the missionary fund.

What's New in Radio?

By J. F. Witkowski

Principal, School of Radio, International Correspondence Schools;
Associate Member,
Institute of Radio Engineers

A CALIFORNIA inventor has invented a new radio device to enable the dispatcher at an airport to keep track of transport planes in flight. Signals sent at pre-determined intervals from a radio transmitter on the plane are picked up at the airport where they automatically control the movement of a spot of light across an air line map. The light accurately records the position of the plane, showing whether it is on or off its proper course.

A radio "tap detector" has been developed to uncover theft from oil pipe lines by tapping. If there is reason to suspect that an underground section of the line has been tapped, electrical oscillations are set up throughout the suspected section. A distinctive humming in the earphones of an inspector following the route of the line signals the presence of the most skillfully buried tap.

Telephone service from plane to earth has been installed by a western air line to enable passengers to talk to telephone subscribers in any part of the United States. The plane's phones connect by short-wave radio with the air line station. From the station the call is relayed to a nearby telephone exchange which puts the call through to its destination.

Just Wondering:

Wondering, friends, if we honor our church with the esteem, respect, reverence and holy pride we should. Wondering, fellow workers, if we, as separate individuals, are putting forth our very best efforts for our church. Wondering, fellow members, if we, as individual members, are working for our church as we might work—working as we should if there were a tangible, earthly, coveted reward for our work. Wondering if we are talking for our church in a boasting way like we shall be glad in the future to remember we did. Wondering, friend, fellow worker, fellow member, if we are praying enough.

Sunday school attendance last Sunday was good. Every department is going along good now and just needs your continuous cooperation to grow uninterrupted.

The sermon of last Sunday morning was truly inspiring, although the attendance was not what it has been or what it might—and should—have been. The sermon of Sunday night was too good to miss. In the words of one of our good people: "I wouldn't have missed it for anything."

May we look for you and see you next Sunday at Sunday school at 9:45 A.M., at the preaching services at 11:00 A.M., and at 7:00 P.M.? Don't miss any of these services for anything.

The members of the Junior Department of the Sunday school are wanted and requested to sing in the choir each Sunday night. We are looking for you and depending on you, Juniors.

WATCH SURVIVES DEATH IN 1822 AND RUNS AGAIN

(From Montgomery Advertiser)

T. W. Bryan, of Clanton, visited The Advertiser office yesterday and exhibited a watch worn by Lieut. John Crosby, gallant Alabama soldier, when he was killed in the battle of Richmond, July 13, 1862, the second year of the War Between the States. The bullet or shell that took the life of the Lowndes County cavalry officer also broke his watch, but the cherished timepiece, made by M. J. Tobias, of Liverpool, England, was returned along with other personal effects to the family.

For 75 years the solid gold watch was nothing more than a war relic. After coming into possession of Mr. Bryan, whose wife is a niece of Lieut. Crosby, the watch was kept last August by Earnest Arant, of Clanton. Now it keeps perfect time, according to the owner. Two keys accompany the antique, one for winding and the other for setting.

The watch, larger than the average now in use, is believed to be about 100 years old. Mr. Bryan said he did not know how long Lieut. Crosby owned it before his death, but thought it had been in the family a good many years.

IN MEMORY MARY ANN TYUS

She is gone but not forgotten,
A friend we all loved to dwell.
We loved her like a mother.
For we had known her long;
And only kindness did we know,
For her was a Christian soul.
All who knew her loved her.
For her kind and gentle words;
Soothed many a frown and Heartache, in this sinful world.
She is gone but not forgotten,
And till we are called beyond,
To meet her gentle spirit,
Her loved one will guide us on.

FARMERS ADVISED CORRECT DISCOLORATION OF TURNIPS

It often happens, especially with the fall-sown crop that turnips develop a distinct internal discoloration. When cut lengthwise, general areas of brown tissues appear, and while the root is edible they have lost that clear, white color characteristic of a high-quality product.

This internal discoloration is due to a deficiency of boron, says Prof. L. M. Ware, head, horticultural department of the Alabama Experiment Station. The trouble may be corrected by the application of a very small quantity of this element, he advises. Approximately 10-15 pounds of borax to the acre is adequate. This material may be mixed with the fertilizer and applied at the same time the regular application is made or used as a very light side application.

Mr. and Mrs. Dean Ashley of Akron, Ohio, left Friday after spending several days here with Mr. and Mrs. Otto Jones. Mr. and Mrs. Ashley will visit friends in Atlanta and Montgomery and then spend some time in Mobile, Gulfport and New Orleans before returning to Akron.

Farmers Union

Of County Adopts Crop Resolutions

Following is a resolution adopted at a recent meeting of the Farmers Union:

Farmers Educational And Cooperative Union in general convention, this the 9th day of October, 1937, at Center Hill, Chilton County, Ala., do pass the following resolutions:

RESOLUTION NO. 1:

Whereas, the farmers of Chilton County, Ala., are in a destitute condition, caused from being forced to sell their products far below cost of production, and

Whereas, the high cost of production is partly due to excess profits charged by the distributing class, and

Whereas, many farmers, if forced to pay in full, will be dispossessed through foreclosures of their homes, bread, meat, syrup, milk cows, meat hogs and all that is necessary to sustain life, and

Whereas, we feel that Human Rights exceed Property Rights; Therefore Be It Resolved: That this Convention ask all members of the Union who are dispossessed through foreclosures, to the extent that human suffering among women and children will prevail to turn over to the Convention the name of said party or parties making such foreclosure.

Be It Further Resolved: That after due consideration, the party or parties making such foreclosure, are guilty of increasing human suffering, that the name of said party or parties be placed on the "Unfair List" in every Local Union in the County.

RESOLUTION NO. 2:

Whereas, the proposed 1937 AAA is filled with discriminations against and among the farmers by,

First, the allotment plan which gives to one group of farmers a sufficient income to maintain a luxurious standard of living and at the same time give to another group of farmers such allotment as will place them down to the poverty level and on the relief roll.

Second, that the allotment plan limits the income of those in the farming industry while those of the commercial interests have no limits to the profits they can charge for the handling of the farmers' product and,

Whereas, all taxes collected on production above a stipulated amount is an Income Tax because it is a tax on the farmers' income and,

Whereas, to control production without controlling speculation will be detrimental to both producer and consumer. Therefore Be It Resolved, That we declare our opposition to any program that violates our Constitutional right of having equal oppor-

Second, that we declare our opposition to any law that limits the income and at the same time the Corporations and Commercial to go unmolested.

Third, that we oppose a program until the American people well fed and well clothed.

Fourth, that we oppose a program until the American people well fed and well clothed.

Fifth, that nothing less than the preservation for that part within the United States, our farm problem.

RESOLUTION NO. 4:

Whereas, the State Constitution of the F.E. & C.U. of A. is to Birmingham, Ala., October 10, and whereas the policies of the Union will be set up for the and,

Whereas, it is necessary to the Locals send delegates to the convention.

Therefore Be It Resolved, Convention ask all locals to delegates, giving proper credentials to attend the convention.

Be It Further Resolved, that all members, whether delegate, to attend this important convention.

Things We Think

Things Others Think and What We Think of Things Others Think
—BILLY SMITH

Be Economical

As the News was going to press last week, our friend Mayor Jones, who is in no uncertain terms regarding the serious shortage of water in the city of Clanton, Mayor Jones stated that he is urgently requesting users of city water to be as economical as possible in the use of it. In fact, he stated, it is for the benefit of the city that they do, since the water has reached the serious stage. Mayor Jones also stated that steps are immediately being taken to secure a larger supply, and that it would entail considerable expense to the city. The danger to the city of Clanton is that there is a serious fire anywhere in the city limits. It is not believed that there is sufficient water in the city tank and reservoir to battle a fire of any size. So, take care and be careful with water from the city tank.

Hath Charming

On Friday night of this week we are going to have a ring side seat to the concert to be presented by the Clanton Band. We love band music. The sound of the trumpets, the roll of the drums, the sound of the bass horn, seem to stir something within us. It is not that the only reason we respect to be at the concert. Another reason is that whatever we can do to support our support and appreciation of the Clanton Band for Clanton, we are going to do it. This newspaper has advocated a band for Clanton for some time, and this idea is a reality. Every resident of Clanton, and even in the county should attend this, the first public appearance, of Clanton's newly formed band of music-makers.

Master Out

We received a post card from our friend and Clanton's postmaster, H.E. Jones. He, with Mrs. Downs, was attending a postmaster's convention and all the card told us was that he was having a good time but missed my copy of the Clanton News this week. The card was postmarked Salt Lake City, Utah. Thanks a lot, Mr. Postmaster. We say that because you sent a copy of the News out to us, you, with all you have to see, then it makes us feel mighty good.

Reaches Home

Many of a tragic nature from parts of the country, other than at home, we come but not much. The terrible explosion in Birmingham only shocked us, and when we read that a Clanton County man among the thirty-four victims, then realized the tragedy more keenly. Deep sympathy goes out to the report family this week.

Having Them

When we woke up this morning from our sound night of slumber, we entered into another year of age. After 21st seems to come around rapidly during recent years and it has slipped upon us again. Today, the News is also observing its official birthday. While some are younger than the writer, the News is much wiser. We have noted several years now that when the News has a birthday, the writer also has a milestone of a year. Last year we observed this event by moving the News into its present modern building. That job occupied the writer's time to such an extent that he had time in which to observe his own anniversary in this world. Well, the News is young yet and we have nothing to do—we hope.

That's Needed

Our friend, W.H. Sartor, had a bit of misfortune to overtake him the day in a matter of finances—church finances at that. Being a poor citizen that he is, Mr. Sartor spent a few hours making some arrangements for the Baptist Church, and he found ten dollars of his money, and ten dollars is ten dollars. Mr. Sartor found that ten dollars, or know he found it, please get it back to Sartor because he needs it to give the fund for the church which he is collecting. If you can't find him, kindly, just leave it at the News. We'll see he gets it.

Some And Salutations

Our week brings to Clanton County her live, wide-awake newspaper. It is edited, arranged and full of interesting and timely news. The Clanton County Journal, the idea of our superintendent of education, Luther E. Bates, and his staff, with the aid of the County Board of Education. We wish to be first in extending a cordial salutation and congratulations on the publication of this worthy and needed organ for the school of our county.

NEW CHEVROLET TO BE SHOWN HERE SATURDAY

1938 Models To Be Ready For Public Showing At Hayes Chev. Co.

The new 1938 Chevrolet automobiles will be on display in Clanton at the Hayes Chevrolet Company Saturday of this week, according to J. W. Hayes, who is enthusiastic about the new models.

"They are really beautiful cars," Mr. Hayes stated. "And they have so many new features about them this time that we know the people of this section will find the time well spent by coming to see these new Chevrolets Saturday at our showrooms."

An advertisement in this issue of the News, announcing the showing of these cars says this about them: "The car of low price that brings you the newest, most up-to-date motoring advantages." A cordial invitation is extended by the Hayes Chevrolet Company to the general public to visit their show rooms Saturday of this week to see this new car.

CLANTON YOUNG LADY WEDS PROMINENT TEXAS CITIZEN

The following announcement was given the News this week, and appeared in several Texas newspapers recently: "Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Polk, of Clanton, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Sunset Polk Bradford, to Mr. Woodrow Stephenson, of Kyle, Texas, on April 19th, 1937."

The announcements in the Texas newspapers also stated that Mr. Stephenson was one of the city's prominent business men. Mrs. Stephenson has been connected with the Wayne P. Sewell Production Co., for some time doing coaching work in various sections of the country.

Proceeds are to go to the high school athletic fund.

ANNUAL ROLL CALL FOR RED CROSS COMING

Most Extensive Drive To Be Launched Will Open November 11

The annual Red Cross Roll Call for Clanton County will soon get underway, according to plans announced here this week by Dr. C. O. Lawrence, county chairman and J. M. Martin, who is to serve as Roll Call chairman this year and who is also serving as disaster chairman of the county.

The drive for memberships in this county for this year is to be more extensive than ever before, Mr. Martin stated, when commenting on the amount of work done in this county and the huge sums of money spent here by the National Red Cross during recent years.

"It will take Clanton County a long time to even half way pay the National Red Cross the debt we owe them, not only in monetary terms but there is a big debt of gratitude there, also," Mr. Martin stated.

Aside from aiding residents in this county who have been injured physically, or had their homes demolished by tornadoes, the Red Cross has spent a considerable sum here in the treatment of pellagra cases, county records show. However, these cases were treated with funds in the local county treasury. It was shown, and the National Red Cross has spent thousands of dollars in this county alone, aiding those who were afflicted.

Help Last December

When the tornado swept through a section of the western part of Clanton County only last December, the National Red Cross came to the scene immediately and expended six hundred dollars among approximately eight families who were suffering from losses.

Big Difference

This amount of six hundred dollars looked rather large beside the small amount of membership sent from this county last year. Clanton County (Continued to back page)

EXPRESSES THANKS FOR OPPORTUNITY AT TRADE

One of Clanton County's favorite sons, Jack Coker, called at the News office this week and expressed his thanks and appreciation for the opportunity given him to learn the trade of watch repairing.

Jack stated that special thanks go to the Pilot Club, the Kiwanis Club, Mr. R. W. Lowe and Mr. Horace Aldridge. These aided Jack in various ways to spend several months in Montgomery in order to learn a trade whereby he can make a livelihood. He also stated that he would soon be ready to do watch and clock repairing here.

Farmers Are Making Syrup By New Method

Auburn, Ala.—Three Alabama farmers this year made sorghum syrup by the new process which prevents scorching, clabbering and jellifying, announces M. D. Herman, syrup specialist of the Alabama Extension Service. The three sorghum mills were operated by Claude Bice, Rockford, Coosa County; A. A. Palmer, Hamilton, Marion County; and J. W. Howell, Jr., Gordo, Pickens County.

"These three syrup plants will manufacture a small quantity of sugarcane syrup when the sorghum season is over," says Mr. Herman in announcing that plans are being made for several plants in South Alabama to manufacture sugarcane syrup in such a way as to prevent crystallization of the syrup.

County Council Plans Conference Here Soon

Organization Composed Of Departments Of County Government And Other Depts. Open Series Of Conferences

An interesting afternoon for mothers and fathers, and others of Chilton County, is being planned by the Chilton County Council for Friday, November 3rd, according to an announcement made this week following a conference of the Council which was held Tuesday in Clanton.

Announces Plans Of Larger Co. Council

MISS META GRACE
Home demonstration agent and president of the Chilton County Council, believed to be the first of its kind in the State.

SCHOOLS WILL HAVE JOURNAL OF THEIR OWN

First Issue Comes Off The Press; Will Be Issued Monthly

The Chilton County School Journal, a publication devoted to the interests of the schools and entire educational system of Chilton County, makes its appearance this week, according to an announcement from Luther E. Little superintendent of education.

The first issue is just off the press and a copy should be in the hand of each patron of the schools of the county by tomorrow, Mr. Little stated. It is the intention of the Board of Education to publish this journal monthly, distributing it in each school of the county, thereby giving the pupils, teachers and patrons a medium through which they may keep informed of the changes and progress of the school system of the county and state.

The plan has received much favorable comment from those who have already seen a copy of the paper. The publication is to be paid for strictly by advertising space which is already showing up fine, Mr. Little stated.

SINGING AT FRIENDSHIP NEXT FRIDAY NIGHT

All lovers of music are invited to come to Friendship church next Friday night and bring your song books.

—Jim Parrish.

Mr. T. T. Ivey of Beatrice was the week end guest of his son, Mr. B. N. Ivey. They attended the Auburn-Mississippi State football game in Birmingham Saturday.

The News Enters Sixteenth Year With This Issue

This issue of the Chilton County News is Number One, Volume 16—meaning the first issue of a new year, a new Volume of fifty-two issues.

Another milestone on the road which the News has earnestly endeavored to make as peaceful, as progressive, as profitable, as worthwhile as possible, and in viewing the incidents during these years, we believe we have not labored in vain for our county and our people. Some of the years have been hard ones, yet we have enjoyed it. No birthday gifts are necessary. Just allow us to continue to receive your support, cooperation, criticism when deserved in the coming years.

—The Editor.

Local Council Praised

The Chilton County Council has become widely known throughout the state and numerous inquiries have been received from other sections regarding the local Council, its method of organization, work and programs, according to Miss Meta Grace, who was recently elected president of the Council. So far as is known, the Chilton County Council is the first of its kind to be organized in Alabama and possibly in the South.

It is composed strictly of the County Health Department which includes the health officer, inspector, and nurse; the Educational Department, including the superintendent of education, attendance officer and supervisor; the Farm Security Department, composed of the county manager and home economist; the County Agent's office, composed of the county agent and the 4-H Club leaders; the Home Demonstration Department, which includes the county council of home demonstration clubs; the Department of Welfare and the Commissioners Court.

To Enlarge

It is the intentions of the Chilton County Council to enlarge its scope of activities in the county, taking in more memberships and stretching its programs out to aid practically everyone in every walk of life. Regular meetings are held by the Council to discuss problems of the various county government departments composing its present membership and in order for each department to have a better understanding of the other departments, their method of operating, etc.

Recently the Council met and a regular ballot election was held. Miss Meta Grace, home demonstration agent, was elected president; Dr. J. M. Kimmy, county health officer, vice-president and Miss Bertha Dennis, home economist, was elected secretary.

The program committee is composed of Judge J. Lee Smith, Miss Elsie Schurter of the educational department and Dr. J. M. Kimmy.

The social committee, appointed to serve for the conference on November 3rd, Miss Grace gave sufficient information to denote that the entire afternoon would be of much interest to the mothers and fathers of the county, as a cordial invitation is being extended to them to attend the afternoon session. Further information will be released next week, Miss Grace stated.

Chilton Girls Invited To College Events

Marion, Ala., Oct. 13.—(Special)—Twelve girls from each junior and senior high school in Chilton County have been invited to participate in the annual play day of District Three, to be held at Judson College Tuesday, Oct. 26. The activities of the play day are under the direction of Miss Mary O. Beasley, director of physical education at Judson College.

Four other counties will send representatives to the high school meet, including Dallas, Hale, Perry, and Bibb counties.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Mullins and Burton Mullins, Jr., of Eufaula were the week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Mullins.

Mr. J. Lee Smith, Jr., was at home this week end from school at Gulfport, Miss.

Fugh Truett is improving following a recent illness.

Week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Cope were his parents from Inverness.

"Here's A Challenge"

The above words were issued by the Standard Oil Company of California to between 15,000 and 16,000 employees and their families. From Northern California and Nevada, who were invited to attend the company 'Frolic' at Santa Cruz, California, recently. Before the Frolic, the company circularized its employees and said:

"Do you suppose that it is possible that the 15,000 or 16,000 people who will visit Santa Cruz next Saturday, and go by automobile, can get there and back without an accident? . . . What a wonderful thing this would be. It would show the world that thousands . . . can collectively drive tens of thousands of miles and not have an accident. So let's try it out! Give the other fellow a break and take no chances."

What was the result? Three thousand persons went to Santa Cruz by train, and 12,000 by automobile. Not a single one of its employees was involved in a motor vehicle accident, out of a total mileage that ran into the hundreds of thousands for the thousands of cars used.

This is a striking safety achievement and shows what can be done with forethought and intelligent cooperation. If every company and every automobile driver would join in a safety-first program every day, instead of just on "picnic day," the terrible automobile accident toll that is now a disgrace to the nation, could be practically eliminated.

Preventing Home Fires

A new bulletin issued by the National Board of Fire Underwriters points out that a very large proportion of all fires occur in homes, that home fires are responsible for about one-half of the total loss of life from fire, and that scientific dwelling house inspection can eliminate most hazards.

Fire departments in various cities have inaugurated campaigns to cut down home fires through annual inspections. In one typical city the number of home fires was reduced by 37 per cent and the loss by 44 per cent, as compared with a previous period in which no inspections were made. Cooperation of the public is, of course, essential. Local chambers of commerce can aid by appointing committees to deal with the problem and acquainting residents with the need for inspection. Newspaper publicity can also be invaluable in pointing out that the inspections, far from being just a nuisance, are in the interest of everyone. Posters and stickers can be effectively used. Women's clubs and school teachers can likewise help to accelerate the good work.

The inspections must be thorough. Heating plants, exposed wiring, storage of inflammable liquids, attics and basements and spare rooms where refuse and unused articles are allowed to accumulate, amateurish repairs of various kinds—every home is likely to present grave hazards such as these which can be easily and inexpensively corrected. The expenditure of an hour of your time and perhaps a few cents of your money today may save lives and thousands of dollars tomorrow.

Fire Prevention Week was recently observed. An excellent follow-up, worth the while of every community, would be the inauguration of a yearly home inspection plan.

A friend observes that this is prosperity all right but the delivery system is a bit slow and irregular.

The base ball umpire's job is difficult, to be sure, but just imagine the job of reporting on who is winning in the Spanish war.

Results of Producer Production

"Leaders and authorities in the milk trade throughout the United States are looking forward to good markets for fluid milk and milk products this fall," says the Dairymen's League News. "There is a definite tone of optimism throughout the industry which has not been in evidence for several years."

Progress made by the milk producers is largely the result of cooperation. Today in most of the country's large milk sheds established marketing co-ops represent the producer. The benefits of this application of sound business methods to agriculture are felt in the home of the consumer as well as on the farm.

You Can Buy It Here

By the tradition this is always the season of heavy buying. In the earliest days the pioneer family journeyed to the nearest trading center in the fall to buy the winter's supply of needed merchandise. Clothing for each member of the family was always demanded. A hundred and one other items needed for the winter months were then purchased.

Since then times have changed, and most of our readers buy more frequently. No single period of the year is of quite such importance now as the fall season used to be. But we still do a lot of buying at this season. The question now is where shall we do that buying?

As the result of our frequent visits to the stores of Clanton we are convinced that local merchants are now well prepared to supply all, or almost all, of your fall requirements at attractive prices. In clothing, in ready-to-wear, in food supplies, in shoes, in hardware, in furniture and in gift novelties and luxuries the stores of Clanton compare favorably with those of any other town of equal size in the entire nation.

Not only in variety but in quality and price our local merchants can also meet your requirements. Prices here are low because overhead is comparatively low. Quality is good because every merchant here realizes that he cannot depend upon any great volume of transient trade, and he must satisfy you week after week and year after year to succeed.

To those of our readers who do not buy almost exclusively here in Clanton we suggest that you make a survey of the stores of our community. You will be both surprised and pleased over the opportunity local merchants offer the public to buy economically here in Clanton.

Your Fall Shopping

So you're going to do your Fall buying soon.

There's a new suit for Johnnie, a dress for Sister, and many, many other items for the household. Later there will be overcoats, overshoes, caps with ear laps, and so forth.

To get all these items at prices which will meet your budget we suggest that you give careful consideration to what the merchants of Clanton have to offer.

In the course of our work we have occasion to observe the plans and preparations made by local business houses to serve the citizens of this territory. Not in many years we believe, have the merchants of Clanton made such an effort to provide the citizens of this community with the merchandise they will need and want.

We are confident that you can buy to better advantage here in Clanton than in any other center in this part of the state; Stocks are large; assortments are varied; prices are still attractive in view of what is happening to price levels everywhere.

Do the bulk of your shopping here in Clanton. It will pay.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskeew
An old fable says that a bar of iron lay across a log to be broken. "I can break it," shouted the hammer, but at the first blow it flew from its handle and could do no more. "I can cut it in twain" boasted the ax, but after two or three blows its edge dulled and it could not make a dent. "Just give me a chance" said the saw with a confident air, but its teeth were broken and it gave up the task. At length a warm little flame made a modest plea, "Will you not let me try?" This burning blaze twined itself gently around the iron bar and hugged it close. It imparted an influence that melted the bar and soon it dropped apart. What the hammer, the ax and the saw could not do, the little flame did without noise and with tremendous power. There are those who think that things are done by might and by power. Love, like the flame, is the most impressive thing in all the universe to melt down opposition and to part in twain the hardest ways of living. Love is the law that never fails.

Doubtless you have observed that there is but one line of that big L. & N. road that connects Mobile with Montgomery. If there were no side tracks between the two places, of necessity, there could only be a limited traffic, or else there would be a general mix up of trains. Many a side track has been built at different locations all along the way, and before the trains have a head on collision, one of them stops and takes the side track. It is the side tracks that make it possible for traffic to be thick and fast in both directions. Often have I pictured the mix up in life, the confusion in human relations if every man had to travel on one main line. I will admit that we have some folks who claim the main track, and practice the "Road Hog" idea, but there are enough folks who are willing to take the side track, to prevent many a crash. When a man is so selfish as to want the main track all the way, he becomes a menace to traffic. Love is the side track that is scattered all along the way of life, and many of us must take the siding to prevent a collision. All honor to that husband, or wife who will quietly slip into the side track of love when that blustering companion comes buffing down the main track. Better take a side track than to have a head on collision.

I visited a place where they were training horses to do tricks. With interest I watched the men as they dealt with the horses. I observed that a horse would not accept training from a stranger. One man claimed to have trained a horse twenty tricks in seven years. He said that he did this by first winning the confidence of the horse and loving him into action. A human being is very much like a horse. In order that a man may be trained in the virtues of the Christian life he must yield himself unto one Master. In fact there is but One Master who can train men and women in the fine art of living and that is Christ the Lord. When we learn to put our trust in the Lord he can love and lift us into a state of training that is good for us in this world and in the world to come.

I have listened to the singing bird and wondered why it sang. I have wondered why the sunbeam warmed vegetation into life. Why does the summer sun ripen the clusters of purple grapes? Why is it that a rose is so red and fragrant? Why is the rainbow so beautiful? Why does that beautiful young bride drop out of society and refuse all honors of church and cult when there is a tiny babe in the home to say "Mama"? I can tell you why. It is because it is the nature of the bird to sing and it is the nature of the mother to love. Can you tell me why God loves his wayward and sinful children? He loves us because it is His nature to love. If we could understand love we could understand God. There is room for deep thinking when we say that God is love and that love is God, when we say that God is nature and nature is God.

An artist painted a picture of the crucifixion and when he had completed his picture he called a lady friend to look it over. His friend said he was a great admirer of fine art and he was anxious for her to pass judgement on his production. She stood for moments looking at the crucified Christ and then, the tears began to fall from her eyes. She turned to the painter with deep emotion and addressed him thus: "Sir, you must have loved Him much to have painted Him so well." Her words touched the heart of the artist and he replied humbly: "Madam, I do love Him much and when I can love Him more I will paint Him better." Ah, my friends, what you are doing as a Christian and as a church member, is the only thing that you have by which you can express your devotion to the Christ. The way you live and the spirit of your loyalty to your church speaks in no mistaken terms of how much and how well you love the Lord. To be sure if you loved Him more you would serve Him better. The way some folks live and the spirit of loyalty that they show, they must love the Lord very little. If you loved Him more you would serve Him better.

Tigers Visit Tallassee

The Tigers were defeated in tilt last Friday night at Tallassee. Williamson made the only score for Clanton. The line and backfield played hard for the victory to be on their side. But the Tallassee heavy backfield kept plunging at the line and passing the ball until they defeated the Tigers 27-6.

Injured Players

Williamson received the only injury of the night. A contact with about three other boys dislocated Durwood's nose, but not serious. He will be in fine shape for the Sylacauga game Friday—we hope.

C.C.H.S. To Meet Sylacauga Here

The Chilton County Tigers will play Sylacauga here Friday, October 22, in the Clanton ball park. Coach Spicer has been drilling the boys hard this week for the Sylacauga game. We are expecting to see the boys do some real fighting here Friday afternoon. The game starts at 3:15. Be there and back the boys from whistle to whistle. Admission will be 15 and 25 cents.

F.F.A. Initiation

The Clanton Chapter F.F.A. held its green hand initiation Wednesday night, Oct. 13, in the agriculture building at C.C.H.S. The program was arranged by responsible members of the F.F.A. Chapter and was carried out nicely.

Mr. Jackson, agriculture teacher, was advisor through the initiation. Rev. G. G. Williams was also present. The following boys were taken in as green hand members: Morris Taylor, Noel Robinson, Henry Lawrence, Roy Smith, Herschel Penton, Morris Duke and Tasker Powell.

Some of the green hand candidates were unable to attend this initiation, but another program is being worked out for the near future.

Highlights of E.J.H.S.

The Junior III Class of Enterprise Junior High School met on Wednesday, October 13, for the purpose of organizing an English Class Club.

The following officers were elected at the meeting:

President—Mitcheline Mims.
News Editor—Mary Pearl Griffin.
Secretary and Treasurer—Irene Griffin.

General Reporter—Elvie Devaughn.
Sports Reporters—Samuel Burkhalter and Bunyan Yeargan.

School Colors—
The colors of the school have been changed from orange and black to Crimson and Blue. Numbers of the students are wearing bands with E.J.H.S. of blue on the crimson background.

Commercial Course—

Enterprise School is offering a commercial course of typing and shorthand, taught by a new member of the faculty, Mrs. Elsie Jones, from the Wheeler's Business College in Birmingham. We are very glad to have a teacher that can teach these courses. They will be of great benefit to those taking advantage of them.

The school is proud of several new maps which have made geography, history and civics more interesting.

Reorganization of 4-H Club—

The Enterprise girls met with Miss Meta Grace, our county agent, to reorganize the 4-H Club for the year 1937-38. At the opening of the meeting we sang our opening song, "The More We Get Together." Miss Grace made an interesting talk about her summer vacation. We then elected officers for the year. They are as follows:

President—Mitcheline Mims.
Vice-President—Irene Griffin.
Secretary—Inez Williams.
Treasurer—Elvie Devaughn.
Reporter—Mary Pearl Griffin.
Song Leader—Ester Burkhalter.
Leaders—Dorothy Nell Jones, Margie Sue Courtney, Irene Gray and Mary Earl Martin.

Girls, let's keep our motto in mind and strive hard to really "Make The Best Better."

Line-up For Basketball Team—

The Enterprise boys who are going out for basketball this year met last Friday with Mr. Evans, their coach, and organized their ball team for this year. The elected as their captain Rayford Jones.

Rayford Jones—Right Forward.
Bunyan Yeargan—left forward.
Chester Jones—Stick Guard.
Earl Neeley—Running Guard.
Hubert Williams—Center.

The substitutes are: William Griffin, Edsel Wilkins and Sam Burkhalter. Although we have lost several of our players, we are expecting to have the best basketball team we have ever had.

Faculty Play—

S-h-h, here she comes! Who? "Here Comes Hattie." You come, too, and see her. She will make her appearance in the faculty play Saturday night October 23, at Enterprise Junior High School, at 7:30 P.M. There will be fun, laughter and interest for about two hours.

The characters are:
Homer Greene—Clark Burkhalter.
Clara Greene—Mrs. Myrtle Taylor.
Ann Greene—Mrs. Myra Griffin.
Thomas Greene—Mr. W.A. Evans.
Florence Ryan—Mrs. Betty McLaurine.

Bill Billings—Raymond Bonnett.
Etta, maid—Mrs. Elsie Jones.
Velda Wayne—Miss Elsie Conway.
Hattie King—Mrs. Ica Bell Gandy.
Admission, 10c, 15c, and 20c. Do not miss it! Come!!

$5000 invested to provide each Job

In order to supply a cotton mill worker with a job, an average investment of five thousand dollars in plant, equipment and machinery is necessary... In other words, to supply the 39,000 cotton mill operatives in Alabama with a place to work, the machinery to work with, and an opportunity to ply their trade, it was necessary for stockholders (most of them Alabama citizens) to make an investment of 195 million dollars!

Alabama's cotton mills are its largest industry. It is an industry that has developed phenomenally in recent years... By the intelligent and sympathetic cooperation of management, operatives, legislators, farmers, and consumers, it will continue to grow to the greater prosperity of all Alabamans.

Christian Endeavor News

The Christian Endeavor Society held its weekly meeting on Sunday, October 17, at 6:30 o'clock P.M. in the Fellowship room of the Congregational church. The program was centered on Missionary work. The topic was "The Roads of a Missionary." Ouida Mac Wright was the leader. The following took part: Margaret Golsen, Inez Duke, Ruth Clark, Miss Townsley and Elizabeth Battles.

Special music was provided by Margaret Golsen and Frances Wood.

A business meeting was held at the close of the meeting and Ouida Mac Wright was elected a delegate to the District Convention to be held at Blackwoods Church, Headland, Alabama. Margaret Golsen and Richard Petersen had already been appointed delegates to the convention.

Thorsby Jr. High School News

Our P-T-A. met last Friday afternoon at the school building. This was the initial meeting of the present school year. The meeting was called to order by the president. A program centering around the subject of "Safety in traffic as a present day need," was prepared by Mrs. Williams. Prof. Griffin outlined some of the highlights of the recent statewide P-T-A. meeting in Birmingham. Several plans for the improvement of our school were discussed, with several being drafted. There were thirty members present, a fair representation, but there are other parents who need to join. We hope to see you at the next session, which will be held on the third Friday afternoon of November at two-thirty at the school building.

Work is now underway in the construction of additional rooms to take care of the large enrollment thus registered.

Several new students have entered this week. The Jr. High Department now has fifty-nine. The Grammar School one hundred and fifty-eight.

A number of new seats (desk chairs) were installed last Friday.

We regret the extended illness of Mrs. Taylor, third and fourth grade instructor. It is our sincere wish that she may soon recover and be back in her line of duty. However, we are indeed fortunate to have Mrs. Mixson to ably carry on Mrs. Taylor's classroom work during her absence.

Rev. Stanley, pastor of the Congregational Church, visited our school last Monday morning and conducted the Chapel exercises. A very inspiring ten-minute talk was presented to the student body, the subject being "The Hard Way Versus The Easy Way Of Life."

Athletics began to take on more color last week when the Independents opened up a barrage of uncanny shooting for the basket in their first practice game of the season. The Jr. High School team will meet Coach Shaw's Black and Gold Quint of Union Grove in a practice scrimmage tomorrow night (Friday), at seven o'clock in the local auditorium. Come out and see the youngsters match their skill in handling the ball.

IN MEMORY OF J.D. SANDERS

Over yonder in the grave yard,
Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies one we loved so dearly,
In his cold and silent grave,
As his loved ones broken hearted,
Stood aside to weep,
Safely in the arms of Jesus dear grandpa
Gently fell asleep.
He has gone but not forgotten.
Never will his memory fade away.
Loving thoughts forever linger,
Round the grave where is laid,
A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home,
That never can be filled.

CHRYSLER-PLYMOUTH ENGINEERS AND SERVICE MEN COOPERATE IN CAR BUILDING

Close cooperation between the engineering departments and service executives at the Chrysler and Plymouth plants in Detroit saves time and money for owners, according to George C. Polk, of Polk Brothers Motor Co., local Chrysler-Plymouth dealer.

"Every new procedure developed by the service department is checked by engineers," Mr. Polk said. "The purpose of this watchfulness is to provide the public with a car which requires less service than ever before, may be serviced according to approved procedure in a more efficient and more economical to maintain."

"Engineers cooperate in this work, because it is their belief that simplified body and engine design, which means simplified service, is the best method of preserving the many improvements engineered into the car when it leaves the factory."

"Few people realize that one of the important factors governing the design of a new model, is the file of reports sent in from the field on the ease or difficulty of servicing various parts of the previous year's model."

"Every engineer working on new models in Detroit could enter our service department, and get 'down and under' any one of our repair or service jobs. His cooperation with the service department at the factory, and his familiarity with approved service equipment, permits him to do the job quickly and well."

"This cooperation between service officials and engineers is one of the factors which enables us to give rapid, efficient service to our owners."

Accused of assaulting a playmate, a 12-year-old boy was sentenced by Justice O. C. Brewer of Pulaski, Va., to read seven fables.

Change In Title To Old Age Insurance Social Security Act

Mr. Martin C. Folmar, Field Manager of the Social Security Board office at Birmingham, calls attention to the fact that the term "Bureau of Old-Age Insurance" has been substituted for that of "Bureau of Old-Age Benefits." This is the division of the Social Security Board which administers provisions for working people who qualify for old age insurance.

It was pointed out by Mr. Folmar that the change in name will aid in clearing up misunderstandings concerning the two old age measures of the Social Security Act—that is old-age Assistance and Old-Age Insurance. "Old Age Assistance, (public assistance for the aged) is relief measure intended to provide financial aid for people 65 years of age or over who are unable to work and have no other means of support," said Mr. Folmar. Old-Age Insurance is based on wages and will be paid to wage earners who are entitled to it, regardless of need.

Mr. Folmar emphasized the fact that Old-Age Assistance (public assistance for the aged) is administered by the State in cooperation with the Federal Government and the questions of who shall receive this assistance and how much each recipient is given are matters which the State authorities decide. Old-Age Insurance is the only part of the Social Security Act that is directly administered by the Federal Government. The U. S. Treasury collects the social security taxes through the local Collector of Internal Revenue. The Social Security Board keeps the social security accounts. The Board also certifies claims for beneficiaries, which are paid by the United States Treasury.

Mr. Folmar stated that about 34 million workers have already applied for accounts under the Federal old-age insurance program and everybody who is working now under this system, has already begun to accumulate credits toward the benefits they receive in later years.

RECORDS SHOW ONE BABY DIED IN COUNTY IN AUGUST

Montgomery, Oct. 19.—One baby died in Chilton County during the month of August before reaching their first birthday, the county's infant mortality rate for that month being 16.9 per 1,000 live births, according to the monthly report of the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Department of Health. One stillbirth was reported in the county during that month.

In the State as a whole, 291 deaths of babies under one year of age were reported, the State's August infant mortality rate being 54.9 per 1,000 live births. Stillbirths totaling 228 were reported.

Premature birth was listed as the chief factor in Alabama's August infant mortality rate, 81 such deaths being attributed to this cause. Gastro-intestinal diseases ranked in second place, with 38 deaths, while malformation and diseases of early infancy ranked in second place, with 38 deaths, while malformation and diseases of early infancy ranked third, with 36 deaths.

WHY PAVE STREETS WITH CONCRETE?

here's why —

- 1 Every street demands a gritty, non-skid surface for the protection of motorists and pedestrians.
- 2 At night you need a pavement with high visibility.
- 3 Safety also calls for a pavement that is free from chuck holes, ruts and bumps; and stays that way with minimum maintenance.
- 4 You want a pavement that drains quickly; that is easily cleaned and stays clean; no depressions to catch dirt.
- 5 You want a pavement that makes the whole neighborhood look modern, prosperous, attractive.

Concrete... and only concrete... completely meets all of these specifications.

POINTING OUT ADVANTAGES

Business Men Are Told Of State's Possibilities And Advantages

Possibilities of the state of Alabama and the need for further industrial development to convert these possibilities into realities was the subject of a series of talks made before three representative groups of business and professional men in different parts of the state, Tuesday.

Karl Landgrebe of Birmingham, vice-president of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company and chairman of the speaker's bureau of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce, presented to the Anniston Rotary Club the program of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce and its relationship to the industrial advancement of Alabama. He was introduced by Harry M. Ayers, of Anniston, district vice-president of the State Chamber.

The Kiwanis Club of Winfield and Hamilton was initiated into the purposes of the State Chamber by W. A. Steadman of Birmingham, Alabama Manager of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company and a director of the State Chamber of Commerce, who addressed a meeting of this group and other business men of Marion County at Winfield.

SHILOH SINGING HELD

On Sunday afternoon, October 10, a large crowd gathered at this place and enjoyed a real good singing. The class was called to order by the chairman, Vester Bice. He appointed Mr. Joseph Varner to act as chairman for the afternoon because he was better acquainted with the singers.

The directors for the afternoon were: Prof. Joseph Varner, Andrew Nelson, Orville DeVaughn, Carlos Owen, O. C. Billingsley, Sam Burkhalter, John DeVaughn, Alvin Lee Cox, Clark Burkhalter, Seth Gilliland, Gladys Powell, Inez McKee and Maurine Henley. The Burkhalter quartet was with us and we invite them back every time. The singing will be held every second Sunday afternoon. All singers and lovers of music are invited.

The Pure Sign

"Prosperity is coming back," says the local hotel proprietor. "The other night I saw a set of figures on a tablecloth that totalled $500,000 and with it was twenty cents in cash."

Dr. H. G. Dowling, director of the state organization from Tuscaloosa County outlined objectives of the Chamber and its significance in the development of industry, to an interested body composed of members of the Exchange Club and merchants of Columbiana, Tuesday evening at 7:30.

Later in the week, the Alabama State Chamber will issue a prospectus and invitation to membership with a statewide appeal for cooperation and support.

That's What I Think

—O—O—O—

Saul M. Goldstein

The science of government in our present day civilization is referred to as "political science" or "political economics," and the seeking, obtaining and holding of public office of any nature whatsoever is all grouped together under the common heading of "politics." So often have we, the people of the United States, become accustomed to the manipulation of politics by individuals and groups for purely selfish motives that we have become quite used to thinking of politics in terms of elections secured by means of promises of jobs or civic, county, state or federal contracts, of nepotism openly and frankly practiced, and of governing officials growing suddenly wealthy after short periods of holding office. Just so, we have come to call all those who participate in politics by the name of "politicians" and we have imparted to that term a certain base connotation.

As I have inferred above, we attribute to every participant in politics the selfish, mercenary motives of what has come to be the majority of our politicians; and we of the laity are far from being complimentary when we use the name politician.

However, in the course of the human events which shape our common destinies, there rises up every once in a while among the great body of politicians one whose motives are not entirely selfish, mercenary and base; one whose devotion to the ideals and principles of the commonwealth elevates him to a higher plane than his loyalty to the political group by whose boasts he was put into office. Such politicians we have set aside in our public opinion and we recognize them as "statesmen." Unfortunately for the sake of the state, our statesmen are too few, our politicians too many; but by that very reasoning, it is of the utmost importance that we recognize a statesman just as soon as his head begins to emerge above those of the politicians and give him every encouragement and boost that we possibly can.

We, here in Alabama, can look upon political affairs in other parts of the nation with some degree of impartiality, and are able therefore to render certain criticisms which we could not do were our own municipal, county, or state politics the subject at issue. To cite only one instance, we are so confirmed in our belief in the political corruption of one faction of New York City politics that we would indeed be amazed to see a statesman arise from Tammany Hall. Yet it is often late before we reach the point at which we can distinguish in our own ranks between the politician and the statesman.

In our own family affairs within the state, we can afford to choose either politicians or statesmen without overmuch criticism from without; but when we are confronted with the task of choosing a public official whose actions will be critically surveyed by the entire nation, we are under a double obligation to choose the best which our state has to offer. We cannot continue, year after year, election after election, to send representatives and senators to the Congress of these United States who are mere politicians without demeaning ourselves in the eyes of our sister states.

Within the span of my lifetime, the state of Alabama has succeeded in furnishing to the nation some outstanding statesmen who are and have been a credit to the politics of the state. That does not excuse the fact that we have also elected to national positions some officials whose scope of political activity has been bounded by the narrow limits of political patronage, nepotism, and the demagogic appeals to prejudices based on ignorance, superstition and on outworn and misinterpreted traditions. It is no wonder, then, that our Underwoods, Bankheads and Blacks stand so high above the heads and shoulders of the ordinary run of political officeholders who have succeeded in gaining sufficient votes within their political territories to entitle them to national office.

We stand now on the threshold of another opportunity to select a national official from the ranks of Alabama politics. The recognition by the national administration of our Senator Black as an outstanding statesman and jurist has left vacant one of our key offices, and we must within the next three months make our choice of one to whom we will say, "Upon you falls the mantle of Underwood, Bankhead and Black."

Shall we be entranced by the demagogic oratory of another politician and flock blindly to the polls to put into the United States Senate a representative of our state at whom the people of our sister states will point the finger of scorn? Or will we, instead, scan carefully the political records of the candidates from whom we must choose, and ignoring heated appeals of the moment based on local prejudices and selfish interests, elect a representative whose unselfish service to not only his own friends and party supporters but to the nation at large promises to show in him a deserving follower in the footsteps of Alabama statesmen?

Let us forget our narrow circle of interests and prejudices in this election, and bring Alabama again to the forefront by putting into the United States Senate a new Senator of whom we will be able to say, in the years to come, "There is a statesman."

At least, that's what I think.

PARK AND MONUMENT TO BE ERECTED TO GENERAL DALE

Alabama's famous hero of the last century, General Samuel Dale, whose body has lain in a forgotten grave in a pine thicket near Meridian, Miss., for ninety-seven years, is to have a park and a monument erected in honors, according to Col. Jim Walton, secretary and director-general of the Sam Dale Historical Society.

The Sam Dale Society has already made its debut in twenty-one states. Sam A. Gordon, of Marion, Ala., is president and Col. Walton of Meridian, is secretary. Col. Walton, co-author of the life of General Dale, was in Clanton Tuesday in the interest of the Dale program.

There's a reason why some of us feel insulted when we are shown a snapshot of ourselves and informed "It's a candid camera picture," declares

Jobless Census Task Is Set Nov. 16-17

Washington, Sept. 27.—John D. Biggers, administrator of the unemployment census, announced tonight that registration blanks will be distributed to the nation's 31,000,000 families on Nov. 16 and 17.

The blanks will be passed out by postmen. Persons out of work or on part-time jobs will be asked to fill them out and mail them to Washington by midnight, Nov. 20.

The Census Bureau then will tabulate the data, Biggers said. After a conference at the White House with leaders of industry and labor, Biggers said that during the six weeks following Nov. 20 a house-to-house unemployment count will be conducted in typical communities throughout the nation.

"The results of these enumerative checks will be compared with the registration from the same areas to determine the average percentage of variation," he added.

The house-to-house checks also will provide information on some items omitted from voluntary registration cards.

Further checks on the accuracy of the voluntary registration will be made by the Works Progress Administration, the United States Employment Service and other agencies, Biggers asserted.

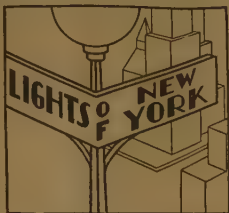

RULING ON LOANS ON COTTON IS RELEASED

The Executive Committee of Commodity Credit Corporation has made the following ruling with reference to loans under the 1937-38 cotton loan program:

"The provisions of Section 1 (b) of the printed Instructions (1937-38 C. C. Cotton Form 1) and of Paragraph 2 of the Loan Agreement (1937-38 C. C. Cotton Form A), providing that a landlord cannot borrow on the tenant's share nor on cotton taken in on account, have been and are hereby waived, but this shall in no wise affect the requirement that cotton must have been produced by a 'producer' as defined in Section 1 (a) of the Instructions (1937-38 C. C. Cotton Form 1)."

By L. L. STEVENSON

Economics: A diner at one of those snooty and expensive Westchester roadhouses told the waiter to serve two orders of fresh shrimps with his dinner. Instead of eating them, the diner waited until the waiter turned his back. Then he wrapped the shrimps in a napkin and stowed them away in his pocket. A scout for this department, who happened to be present, made inquiries and learned from the diner that he has a dozen small turtles which he cherishes highly. Turtles tire of a diet of ant eggs and are especially fond of shrimps. So in his pocket was a big meal for his pets. The scout did a bit of figuring. At that eating place, shrimps are 75 cents an order, which consists of six—and small turtles retail at a dime each.

Ingenuity: Two small boys, equipped with a pole on the end of which was a piece of chewing gum, were fishing for a quarter through the subway grating in front of one of those old brownstone tenements on Central Park West. The janitor came out and chased them. When the lads had vanished, the janitor came up from the basement with a big hook and a short ladder. Removing a section of the grating with the hook, he descended by means of the ladder, pocketed the quarter, came up, replaced the grating and returned the ladder to the basement. Then he resumed his business of polishing brass railings.

Tops: More fat women ride the Brighton local of the B. M. T. subway than any other line. More bundles and packages are carried aboard the Interborough subway trains at Fourteenth street than anywhere else along the whole system. More newspapers are read on Washington Heights trains. More books and magazines are read on Bronx expresses. The greatest mob scenes are at the Grand Central end of the Times Square shuttle during rush hours. The deepest subway station is at One Hundred and Eighty-first street. The highest elevated station is at One Hundred and Tenth street on the Sixth and Ninth avenue lines. The coolest station is the lower level of the Fifth avenue stop of the Independent system. The longest subway station in the world is the Forty-second street station of that same line.

Brief: New York's shortest street is Edgar street, which starts at 20 Trinity place and runs through to Greenwich street. Its length is only about 40 feet and it is possibly a dozen feet wide. So short is it that a sandwich shop runs the entire length of the downtown side, with entrances on Greenwich street and Trinity place. On the uptown corner on the Greenwich end is another sandwich shop and on the Trinity place end there's a store dealing in hosiery and other articles for women. But despite its brevity, Edgar street has a sign at each end. And when inspected by this correspondent, there was a sign on the Trinity place side which announced that it was closed to through traffic.

Starts: Nadine Conner first lured fame across the footlights as a concert pianist. Severe stomach trouble convinced her she should sing to strengthen the abdominal muscles. So she renounced the piano and entered on a new career as a soprano.

Barry McKinley, baritone, got his start on the air as a soprano. He sang falsetto as a substitute for one of the Morin sisters who was taken ill during a broadcast. Jerry Cooper was a stevedore on the New Orleans docks. In spare time, he was shortstop for the New Orleans Orioles, a semi-pro baseball team.

Information: Dorothea Lawrence likes to pull this one at house parties: "Who's the treasurer of the United States?" Eight of ten usually answer "Morgenthau." The correct reply is W. A. Julien, whose name graces the nation's currency.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our friends for their many deeds of kindness which they have shown us all through this year. Everyone has been so thoughtful and nice to us. May the Lord bless every one is our prayer.—Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell Mims and Laura.

ALABAMA GROWERS FAVOR 5-POINT COTTON PROGRAM

Auburn, Ala.—More than 125 Alabama farmers, selected as official delegates by mass meetings in 66 Alabama counties, met here the past week and recommended that "legislation adequate to meet the problems of American cotton growers should provide for:

"(1) An agricultural conservation program every year, with payments for carrying out soil-building practices and payments for diversion of acreage from soil-depleting crops such as cotton to soil-conserving crops.

"(2) Cotton price adjustment payments on all cotton produced on allotted acres in any year in which the income of farmers is below parity. This is necessary in order to compensate cotton growers for the tremendous losses they suffer because of the American protective tariff.

"(3) Loans on cotton or purchase of cotton by Government agencies in emergencies to prevent drastic price collapse.

"(4) Compulsory acreage control every year when necessary to hold the supply of cotton down to effective demand.

"(5) That yields on which any payments are based in any year be established on the basis of the average for the preceding five years."

These recommendations will be presented by 9 Alabama cotton growers,

Alabama Is Allotted $615,531 For Tenant

Auburn, Ala.—Alabama has been allotted $615,531, under Title I of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, to be loaned Alabama tenants, farm laborers and share croppers for the purpose of family sized farms, according to official announcement received by Julian Brown, state director, Farm Security Administration.

Counties in which loans will be made will be determined by the Secretary of Agriculture after recommendations are received from the Farm Security Advisory Committee to be established in Alabama.

Applications for tenant purchase loans should be filed with county agricultural rehabilitation supervisors.

POTASH makes Cotton

Easier TO PICK

BOLTS that are small, hard, and fail to open properly due to cotton rust (potash starvation) are hard to pick. They slow up harvest and cause growers an annual loss amounting to millions of dollars. Even with excessive rainfall, in many sections this year rust damage has been as severe as it was during the dry weather last year. There is only one known way to control cotton rust—USE MORE POTASH. In addition to controlling rust, potash produces larger yields, and heavier seed and bolls. It makes more lint per seed, better grade, longer staple, stronger fibers, and a higher percentage of normal fibers. Plan now to produce a crop next year that will grow normally to maturity. It can be done by using a fertilizer containing 4 to 10% potash and a nitrogen-potash top-dresser if necessary. Consult your county agent or experiment station about the fertility of your soil. See your fertilizer dealer about the right amounts of potash in your cotton fertilizer.

Aren't you glad, Mother; that you went to Watt's Hat Shoppe to get department with me?"

"I surely am! I never looked so well, nor felt so comfortable!"

Daughter loved the Le Gant Corsette she got from us and couldn't wait to bring Mother in, so we could give her "the works!" After we finished with Mother, one of her friends told her she didn't recognize her from the rear—she looked so much trimmer! That's what "TwoWay-OneWay" Le Gant can do for you—it's a veritable "bulge mask!" You can have a Corsette, or a girdle with an A'lure bra.

MEMORY OF MRS. W. H. CASTLEBERRY

On Saturday morning, October 16, at 10 o'clock the death angel came home of Mr. Harvey Castleberry and one-half miles east of Clanton and carried away his beloved who had been sick for almost two years. She had only been in bed since she left to mourn her go-brother; five children, Earl, Duff, Earl, Earmon and Delton; a daughter, the Rev. and Mrs. J. Jackson of Emory County; a son, Gray of Montgomery; Miss Earmon of Clanton; and a host of other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday at 11:00 o'clock by the Rev. Lawrence Culppepper at New Hope Church in Emory County.

To know her was to love her. She was a friend to all; Her desire was to live a Christian life. And meet the Savior's call. Her weary hands are now at rest, Her smiling face is cold; For Jesus called her home to Him, In the land where we'll never grow old.

No more on earth we'll see her face; Her voice we'll hear no more. But let's live to meet her on that bright and golden shore.

We miss her, yes, we miss her, No human tongue can tell; We said good-bye for a little while But didn't say farewell. When the golden sun is sinking, Far into the West; Do not worry friends and loved ones, For we feel she is at rest.

We want to thank all the friends, neighbors and especially the doctors for the deeds of kindness and charity shown during her sickness and death. May God bless each and every one of you.

MAPLE SPRINGS

The crowd was small at Sunday School Sunday on account of bad weather, though we hope it isn't raining and so cold next Sunday so we can come back, although we shouldn't stay away on account of cold weather, because old man Winter is in the air. We should attend Sunday School every Sunday. Everybody come back Sunday and bring someone with you.

The farmers around here have a little more cotton in their fields and they are wishing for it to be pretty weather until they get the rest of it out.

Brief Farm News

Cleaning up cotton fields in the fall destroys many boll weevils, announces the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine. "The important thing in cleaning up the cotton fields in the fall is to stop the production of late squarers and bolls just as soon as possible," says the Bureau.

Two Alabama herds of Jerseys have recently completed yearly records of all cows in the herds and have averaged over 300 pounds of butterfat per cow. The herds are owned by the State Demonstration farm at Wetumpka, and the Van Antwerp Realty Corporation, Mobile.

By planting immediately 4 to 5 pounds of Italian rye seed per 1000 square feet of lawn area, Alabamians can have green lawns throughout the winter months. The lawn should be fertilized with 5 to 10 pounds of cottonseed meal or mixed fertilizer per 1000 square feet.

Alabama farmers have $2,601,283 outstanding in loans from the New Orleans Credit Corporation, announces Jesse Hearin, president.

The United States ranks second among the countries of the world in the production of soybeans. During the past two years the soybean crop in this country has averaged nearly 40 million bushels a year, about eight times as much as it did 11 years ago.

There are about 10 per cent fewer turkeys on farms in the United States this year than at the same time last year.

IN MEMORY OF MRS.

WILLIE BICE

Just the other day this fair good wife and mother greeted us almost daily, with a pleasant smile and cheering word that bespoke the happy and contented home-maker for a devoted husband and four dear children. Today her happy spirit is mingling with scenes celestial and she rests in peace. Though we grieve and do not understand it, she knows why God called her away and left us so sad and desolate a home and fireside here.

The writer has known Mrs. Bice just a few short years but she was such a good neighborly woman until it seems I have known her always. I have known her in the sacred role of wife and mother and truly can it be said of her that she was true, tender and devoted at all times to her loved ones, not only her husband and children, but to all her neighbors as well.

There is no relative, friend or neighbor who will not miss her loving kindness and sweet smile, but we can all rest assured that she is in a better land than we are for we know she is resting in her glory.

No matter how much trouble she had or how worried she might be she always had a smile ready to drive the blues away. This ends the earthly dream of happiness of one little family here. May the broken ties so rudely severed be reunited again in that home beyond the vale where partings and heartaches have ceased to be.

—A Friend, Mrs. W.B. Corley.

VERMONT 4-H CLUB GIRLS

The Vermont 4-H Club girls met at eleven o'clock Thursday morning, October 14, at the Vermont Junior High School.

The meeting was called to order by Miss Meta Grace. Then all sang "The More We Get Together." After we had finished singing the song, the officers for the new year were elected, which are as follows: President—El Verna Klinger. Vice-President—Alma Abbott.

Secretary—Tommy Lou Klinger. Treasurer—Myrtle Lee Smith. Leaders—Era Crane, Louise Owen, Laouise Sansom and Myrtle Lewis.

There being no other business, we were dismissed by Club pledge until next month.—Reporter, Pauline Still.

Dr. and Mrs. J.E. Edgar Compliment Mr. and Mrs. Broadus Constanter And Mr. and Mrs. Roy Constanter

On last Friday evening Dr. and Mrs. J.E. Edgar entertained with a picnic at Gullledge's Camp honoring their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Broadus Constanter of Tulsa, Okla., and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Constanter of Chicago, Ill. At eight o'clock a picnic lunch with the Halloween idea was carried out in the salad sandwiches and cakes that were served to the guests.

Games and dancing was enjoyed. About forty guests enjoyed this hospitality.

Grady Hefflin, Jr., Has Birthday Party

On last Thursday afternoon, Grady Hefflin, Jr., celebrated his seventh birthday when his mother, Mrs. Grady Hefflin, entertained with a party for children.

Green and yellow balloons were draped from the chandelier in the dining room.

The green birthday cake, embossed with yellow daisies and holding yellow candles, centered the dining room table. The cake was cut and served with ice cream as refreshments. Gifts were presented each little guest. The girls received miniature statuettes and balloons and the boys received harps and balloons.

Guests present were: Johnnie Kimmey, Richard Reynolds, Billy Burnett, Barbara Burnette, Frances Ellis, Joe Mullins, Jr., Sally Gowan, Charles Bradford, Ben Popwell, Ann Maddox, Julia Nell Parrish, John Deramus, Jr., Bobby Webb, O.K. Welch, Jack Elmore, Evelyn Lowe, Sonny McCutcheon, Donna Blacketter, Ina Saxon McCraney, Buddy Roberts, L.J. Stewart, Jack Waite, Johnnie Fant and others.

Mr. Dan Smith, Dewey Williams and Coy Lockhart were at home this week end from Auburn.

The C.H.S. had as their visitor last Thursday the world's former champion typist. He gave a demonstration to the pupils taking typing and did over 200 words a minute. His name was Chester Coucek of New York.

Sub-Deb Club Has Progressive Week End House Party

The Sub-Deb Club had a grand time last week end. They had as their visitor Sara Elizabeth Venable, of Wetumpka, an honorary member with them. They began their house party at a lovely luncheon at Alee Stewart Johnson's home. The table was beautifully decorated and souvenirs which were Hallow'en horns, were near the place cards. After lunch the party went to the movie to see "The Emperor's Candlesticks" and then to the drug store.

At seven o'clock they met at the home of Peggy Page. Six boys came in for supper with them. They were Callen Alred, Buell Locklear, Guy Alred, Guy McKee, Harold Lawrence, and Marvin Truett. After supper the crowd played games and danced. When the boys left the girls drove over to Olive Rainer Elmore's home. They slept in the Elmore's new servant house that hasn't been occupied yet. The house was decorated with black cats of paper, and colored lights.

Ghosts were found in the closets, but best of all was the feast at midnight. They had all sorts of fruits, candies, and pop corn. The next morning they were awakened by the sound of the bugle blown by Jack Elmore. They then went over to Lump Pitts for breakfast. After breakfast they rode awhile with Jane Pitts and were carried to the drug store. They then went to church at the Methodist Church. After a very entertaining sermon, they continued with their party to the home of Nell Rockett. Here they enjoyed a most delicious dinner. Immediately after dinner they journeyed to the movie to see "Easy Living." They then hurried to the train to see Sara Elizabeth off. After doing so the members scattered to their different homes.

The members of the club are: Peggy Page, Alee Stewart Johnson, Olive R. Elmore, Nell Rockett, Lump Pitts, two honorary members, Sara E. Venable and Theda Wyatt.

Mrs. Robert Williams of Montgomery was the guest Friday of her mother, Mrs. H.L. Davis.

Mrs. M.J. Seales and children were in Birmingham Saturday for the football game.

Things We Think

Things Others Think and What We Think of Things Others Think

relative Glances encountered our friend Grover Walker, county solicitor and well known attorney of Clanton, the other brought up the matter of the fact that he would probably be a date for Representative from this county next year. Mr. Walker did not definitely state that he would be a candidate nor that he would not. However we were inclined to believe he was in the race when the time came to legislative matters when it came to any laws affecting Chilton County. "The people will speak first," he said, "any laws now affecting Chilton County, or on any proposed laws that will affect the county if I should be their representative in the future," Mr. Walker told us in no uncertain terms. "I do not believe in the laws upon our people until I have thoroughly made up my mind and the people want the laws enacted, and have first voted on the question and so stated by their votes that they want the laws, he continued. We heard many friends of Mr. Walker speak favorably of his candidacy and therefore we thought it a good idea to see what he thought of it. We believe Mr. Walker will be of great service in this capacity.

able Local Talent We listen so often to our radio and the programs on which appear children and ages below the "teens, and married at the talent shown there. Then Monday night the air was rich with the voice of little Helen Hayes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hayes, Clanton. Helen is just six years old, but she could imagine the look of the people and pleasure combined on the faces of those whose radios were tuned to Station WSEA, Montgomery. Helen was singing and giving an excellent number in tap dancing, also. We find that right in Clanton we have some very noticeable local talent, and we are wishing Helen the best of luck. We understand that the pictures to a little scouting down the section for juvenile stars and Helen attracted no small amount of attention from one of these picture representatives Monday night. Helen was the youngest on the program presented over the Air Mont.

vements have perhaps already noticed improvements being made around the grounds of the courthouse lately. Additional concrete which has been placed around the building, and along the sidewalk has added much to the appearance of that corner as making it easier to clean and recently increased the space there.

Mayor And Water We had a fine chat Tuesday with Mr. Jones and naturally the conversation turned to the water supply problem. After he gave us a story in the paper, he spoke of his first in publishing it. The Mayor is interested in this matter and we are going about it. Clanton a larger and better supply of water, and no city needs such supply more than Clanton. If he is to carry out his proposed plan for this water problem for many years, then Clanton will not worry where the city water will come for a long time. We just hope he will push his plans rapidly as possible.

menting on you call at the News office you probably be greeted by a pleasant lady in the front office. This we present to you Miss Mary Duke, who recently became acquainted with the News.

Proud of our good friends in Clanton been feeling mighty fine the past days—and just so, coupled with pride which has been difficult for them to conceal. City Clerk Pipes announced Wednesday that the stork had presented Mrs. Pipes with a fine young girl in a Birmingham hospital. The youngster will carry on the name of C.H. Pipes, Jr., except he will be named Claude as his father is, Mrs. and Claude, Jr., will be home last Saturday as we started by

SATURDAY IS LAST DAY FOR CO. LICENSES

Fifteen Per Cent Penalty Added If Licenses Are Bought After 30th

Operators of any type of business establishments in Chilton County have until the closing hours of the probate office on Saturday of this week to purchase their business and privilege license without paying an extra penalty, according to Judge J. Lee Smith, who stated that this was true throughout the state.

A fifteen per cent penalty is placed on all business licenses after this date, Judge Smith stated, and also that he hoped those who have not already purchased licenses would come in not later than Saturday to avoid this extra cost.

Auto Tags Off Judge Smith also stated that this year is showing a decided slump in the number of automobile tags purchased as compared with last year. Auto tags become delinquent after November 13th, since November 14th, the last day according to the law, comes on Sunday. Drivers license are delinquent the same date.

City Authorized To Use New Well Water

The State Board of Health authorized the City of Clanton to use water from the two new wells which were dug recently on property acquired by the city during the past few months.

Mayor Jones stated that the Board of Health also recommended to the city that they go ahead with a proposed project which has been considered for sometime, and which would cause an expenditure on the part of the city of several thousand dollars.

SOUTHERNAIRES AT CONCORD THURSDAY NIGHT, NOVEMBER 4

The Southernaire Quartet will put on a musical concert at Concord Jr. High School, Thursday night, November 4th, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. This program will consist of a big variety of sacred numbers, comedy songs, solos, duets—in fact everything that goes to make up a real rounded out musical concert.

The admission price will be 15c and 25c. Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

FIFTY CHILTON YOUTHS ENROLL IN CCC CAMP

Only One From Group Of 51 Of County Is Rejected In Recent Group

On Friday, October 22, 56 boys from Chilton County were enrolled in CCC Camps. This is the largest number of boys ever to be enrolled from Chilton County at one enrollment. As each boy sends $25.00 per month home to his family, this enrollment will place $1,400.00 per month into circulation in the county for the next 6 months, provided each boy remains for the full term of enrollment; in addition to providing board, clothing, medical care and incidental expenses for the boys themselves.

Quite a large number of eligible applicants were unable to enroll because the quota was not large enough to take care of all eligible applicants. These applications will be held pending and will be given every possible consideration in the next enrollment.

Out of 51 white boys examined for selection, only one was rejected because of physical handicaps, and out of 8 colored boys presented, only two were

METHODISTS SET SUNDAY AS ORPHANAGE DAY HERE

Next Sunday has been set aside as Orphanage Day at the Clanton Methodist Church and the following statement issued in regard to this:

"We, in behalf of the parentless children of our church, plead for a hearty response and a liberal offering to the needs of the orphanage. The offering will be taken next Sunday at Sunday School."

Hallowe'en Festival At Isabella Friday Night

The News has been requested to announce a big Hallowe'en Festival to be held at the Isabella High School on Friday night of this week, beginning at seven o'clock.

Among the entertaining features of the program are various booths including a "Pretty Girl Contest" fortune telling, "House of Horrors," tap dancing, "Bluebeard's Wives" and other numbers. The public is cordially invited.

CITY GAS TAX IS DETRIMENTAL FOR ANY CITY

Additional Gas Taxes Attacked By Local Gas Man

Mr. W.E. Huddleston, chairman of the Chilton County Petroleum Industries Committee, stated here today that a study of the effects of local municipal and county gasoline taxes made by the Alabama Petroleum Industries Committee, disclosed that such taxes are fundamentally unsound because they drive business out of the community levying them.

"The study, Mr. Huddleston said, 'was based on several years experience and is based on facts collected in various portions of the State where such taxes have been levied or repealed. He pointed out that invariably when such a tax is levied, the business of service station dealers immediately suffers a drastic reduction and the lost business is never regained until the tax is removed. This decline in the service station business is felt also by the property owner who owns the service station property, it being customary for service stations to be rented or leased on a stipulated amount per gallon on the business done at the station. Since only about fifteen per cent of the service stations in Alabama are owned by oil companies and the other eighty-

IT IS NOT MUCH TROUBLE TO BECOME FULL FLEDGED, VOTING CITIZEN

In these United States, it is not much trouble to be classed along with the full-fledged, voting citizens who have the greatest say in this government of ours. These citizens are the qualified voters of the nation—those men and women who take a little time to register as voters and to pay the small poll tax each year.

In Chilton County there is a large number of young people who have just reached the age of twenty-one which entitles them to come before the Board of Registrars of the county and register as voters. And, upon the payment of the small poll tax, they become qualified voters of the county, the state and the nation.

Next year, 1938, is another major election year, and in January there is a special election in which a United States Senator from Alabama will be chosen. The state election is of utmost importance to young and old alike. A Governor of Alabama will be chosen; a Congressman will be selected, and numerous other high offices to be filled. A county Representative and State Senator, two important offices must be filled next year, saying nothing of the tremendous importance of our own county election.

So, while the Board of Registrars is in session, make plans to become a qualified voter, and pay your poll tax.

OFFICERS MAKE HEAVY INROADS DURING WEEK

Several Arrests And One Still Included In Week-End Raids

Heavy inroads were made in the liquor law violations in this county during the past week by officers of the sheriff's office, according to records there. In addition to seventeen arrests for various offenses, a whiskey still, mash and beer were captured.

Sheriff J.R. Hardy and his deputies made the raid on the still Wednesday of last week and arrested one white man and a negro, charging them with manufacturing whiskey and the possession of a still. The still was located in the western part of the county. Eight gallons of whiskey and 100 gallons of beer were destroyed at the still, Sheriff Hardy stated. Officers stated that in order to make the arrests, it took a good runner to catch the whiskey makers.

Deputy Sheriff S.D. McCary reported nine arrests made in and near

Board Of Registrars In Session Fri-Sat.

The Board of Registrars, of Chilton County, will be in session at the courthouse in Clanton on Friday and Saturday of this week for the purpose of registering all those who have not done so to become qualified voters of the county.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY AT BILLINGSLEY SATURDAY NIGHT

There will be a Hallowe'en party at Billingsley School Saturday night, Oct. 30. Dress in costume for free admission. Otherwise pay a small door fee of 5c. This is planned for a night of fun and frolic for both young and old. Fortune telling, bobbing for apples and other attractions are being planned. Make your plans now to come.

Fiddlers Convention At Courthouse Sat. Night

Fiddlers of Chilton County and surroundings will have a fine opportunity to get together in contests on Saturday night of this week, when Circle Number 4 of the Clanton Baptist Church sponsors a real, old-time fiddlers convention at the courthouse.

The program will open at seven o'clock. First prize will be cash and then there will be prizes for all those participating in the contests.

Those who intend taking part on the program are urged to be at the courthouse not later than six-thirty o'clock Saturday night for proper registration, etc. All fiddlers are cordially invited to take part in this event. Admission to spectators will be ten cents.

March 1st Is Deadline On Homestead Exempts

The Attorney General of Alabama recently ruled that March 1st is the deadline for homestead tax exemptions to be secured in the state, according to Hon. T.L. McKee, Tax Collector.

Mr. McKee stated that property owners in Chilton County who are entitled to this homestead exemption, must make their claims before March 1st, on their 1937 taxes.

COUNTY MUST HAVE SHOWING IN RED CROSS

Debt Of Gratitude Due Organization From County Citizens

When the annual Roll Call of the Red Cross opens on November 11th, Chilton County will be expected to go far beyond the regular quota set in memberships. In fact, this county will necessarily have to go the limit in memberships and contributions if its people wish to repay the American Red Cross for the many outstanding instances it has come to the relief of stricken areas and residents of the county.

The above statement comes from sentiments of those citizens of the county who have experienced just what the American Red Cross has done and is still doing in this county.

Work Is Continual The work of the Red Cross in this county is not confined to emergencies nor disasters such as the county has experienced, but is continually being carried on year after year. As was pointed out in a statement last week

The Leader To Bring Anniversary To Close

M. Land, the genial proprietor of The Leader, one of Clanton's largest dry goods stores, announced this week that their huge Eighteenth Anniversary Sale is coming to a close.

The wind-up of this event will bring to this section many of the most outstanding values in dry goods and clothing in the history of the store, Mr. Land stated. An advertisement in the News this week tells more of this winding up event.

TREASURER'S REPORT CARRIED IN THIS ISSUE OF THE NEWS

This issue of the News carries the semi-annual report of the County Treasurer of Chilton County, covering the time from April 1, 1937 through September 30th, 1937.

Your News will be in three sections this week. If all three sections are not received please notify us.

NEW ELECTRIC RAZOR BEING SHOWN AT ALRED DRUG CO.

An advertisement in this issue of the News from the Alred Drug Company, calls attention to a new electric razor, said to be one of the most popular makes on the market.

Alred's is exclusive dealer for this item here and the low price is attracting much attention. They invite inspection of this new shaver at their store.

Alabama College Theatre Coming To Clanton To Present Play "Hobson's Choice" Friday

"Hobson's Choice," a very amusing realistic comedy by Harold Brighouse, will be given in the Chilton County High School auditorium Friday night, October 29, by the Alabama College Little Theatre. The play is being sponsored in Clanton by the Senior III Class of the Chilton County High School.

The Alabama College Little Theatre is under the capable leadership of Dr. Walter H. Trumbauer, and Clanton is indeed, fortunate to have the opportunity of seeing one of the Little Theatre plays. The players come to Clanton after having given the performance at Livingston.

The curtain will rise promptly at 8 o'clock Friday evening, October 29. The cast of characters is as follows: Henry Horatio Hobson, proprietor of Hobson's Boot Shop, Ellen Fish, Maggie, his eldest daughter, Ellen

NEW TELEPHONE SYSTEM GIVEN APPROVAL HERE

Local Subscribers Ask For Change On Old System In The City

Telephone users of Clanton and vicinity placed their approval on the proposed change and improvement of the telephone system now being used in Clanton by the Southern Bell Telephone Co., according to Mayor C. Fenn Jones, who recently conducted a poll of the subscribers by post cards through the mail.

Mayor Jones told the News Tuesday that 206 of the cards were returned to him and that only 38 were marked as being satisfied with the present antiquated telephone system of Clanton which has been in use here for many years.

The City Council, at their regular meeting on October 19th, voted to have the telephone company full authority to install the new and improved system, which would eliminate the necessity of ringing to get the central office as now being done. Just what the telephone company will do following this poll of their subscribers is a matter which was not known at the time of press this week.

Burt Curlee Wins In Radio Football Contest

News was received in Clanton this week to the effect that U. Burt Curlee of Clanton, had been named a winner in the G-E Radio Football Contest which has been conducted for some time over the nation.

Mr. Curlee is well known here and is one of the county's athletic fans. He was awarded a new 1938 model General Electric radio set by the Alred Drug Company, local dealers, and who sent in Mr. Curlee's report which was one among several thousands.

Pilots Planning For Convention Nov. 13th

The Pilot Convention of District Number 1, Pilot International, which was announced to have been held October 16, was postponed until November 13 due to the fact that the International President, Hester Bingham, of Tuscaloosa and the District Governor, Martha Aldridge, Selma, Alabama, were in the western part of the States. Their plans now are to be back in Alabama and attend the Clanton Convention on November 13.

With the capable Clanton president, Gertrude Fiquette, and cooperating committees, plans are nearing completion for one of the most enjoyable and successful Conventions ever held in Clanton.

SNIDER-GOODMAN TAXI CO. MOVES TO NEW LOCATION

The Snider-Goodman Taxi Co., of Clanton, announced this week that they have moved their headquarters to the Hayes Shell Station, across from the Ford Building. They have recently improved their service by adding new equipment and telephone service is promptly attended to. The telephone number is 78.

Fake Argument

The glib talking salesman was applying his last high pressure argument: "You see, our company can offer you this wonderful value because it doesn't spend anything for advertising. We give you that benefit."

"Oh, yea," we answer, "now thoroughly unconvinced. Well what about your commission. Isn't that a pretty big item of expense. We've seen many want ads seeking agents for articles such as you offer for sale. All of them tell about big commissions—thirty, forty, fifty per cent and even more. That's more than advertising and local dealer margins together, by quite a margin. You really haven't any argument there at all. We are not interested."

When some fast talker hands you the fake argument, just do a little careful thinking for yourself. Is it in line with your personal observation that the advertised article is more expensive? Can you buy an unadvertised article of equal value for less? You know you can't. If you investigate carefully, you will find that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the advertised article is cheaper when quality is taken into account.

And there is a good reason why this should be so. First because advertising is an inexpensive form of salesmanship. Companies which advertise spend a trifling fraction of the selling price of the commodity in advertising. They usually discover that this small investment in advertising makes possible lower prices for two reasons.

First, because advertising opens a big market for the commodity, and this big market makes possible the economy of mass production.

Second, advertising, when effective is economical salesmanship. The manufacturer may expend a half million dollars in national advertising, but at the same time reduce his sales expense by many hundred thousands of dollars. There are countless examples such as this.

When some salesman hands you that old gag about the cost of advertising and tells you his company gives the benefit of that to the buyer, just make him prove his point. In nine cases out of ten you will get rid of a disagreeable pest and avoid an unwise and uneconomical purchase.

Patriotism Begins At Home

"Patriotism, like charity," observes a friend of ours, "begins at home. The home and the home town are the units of the great society of which we are a part in which we are most intimately identified. The good citizen, the patriotic citizen if you will, is the one who is loyal to his own community."

There is so little that the average citizen can do in behalf of a great nation of almost a hundred and thirty million people spread over an area almost as great as all of Europe that an expression of patriotism without a definite application to home town conditions is little more than an idle gesture.

Neither you nor the writer can do much about so great a nation or its colossal and complicated problems. But you can do a great deal for the community in which you live and thereby contribute your part as a good citizen to the betterment of the entire nation.

You can take an active part in public affairs, you can endeavor to assist in the solution of the problems which arise here at home, and you can extend to the community your loyalty as a good patriotic citizen. Such a spirit and such an attitude will place you in the position of patriotic, loyal American citizens.

We seem to be getting more and more involved in our neutrality.

It is always just a bit difficult, we have observed, to get down on the common level from a high horse.

The Movie Is An Art

Any contrast between the movies of today and those of ten or fifteen years ago would be startling. Not only has the quality of the photography and the reproduction of sound been vastly improved in recent materially advanced in comparatively recent times.

The inartistic imitation of false emotion; the appeal to sex, to sentimentality, and to morbid curiosity; the gaudy sensationalism and false representations of life have all been materially subdued. There has been an effort to develop the new medium into an art, something to be taken seriously by intelligent people. The better movies of today will bring new understanding of life to those who watch the silver screen.

We may well observe, in this connection that the proprietor of our local theatre has done his part in making the local show house an agency of public betterment. In his showing of the best pictures his percentage rating is high. He has helped to bring to our community entertainment of a class that was available a few years ago only to citizens of great centers of culture.

There is only one sorry note in all of this fine harmony. A large percentage of the theatre goers of Clanton do not apparently appreciate or endeavor to understand the best that the movie of today has to offer. Too many people shy away from anything which they feel may be educational; and because of this public attitude here in Clanton, and in thousands of other similar communities, the producers are given little encouragement to stage the very best of artistic performances.

This, we believe, is due to a general public misconception.

When some great classic is adapted to the screen, thousands of people fearing that it may be dry, educational, and difficult, avoid the play. They do not realize that the great classics were often once popular works. Shakespeare didn't write his plays for study in college classrooms. He wrote them to entertain the people of London, the people of all classes, some four hundred years ago. Dickens wrote novels not for scholars of later times but to sell in his own time. And they did reach an enormous reading public. Much the same thing can be said for Victor Hugo, or Mark Twain or any of the other great writers of the past whose works have been found suitable for movie interpretation.

Those who avoid these movies in the belief that they will prove dry, uninteresting and educational are missing some gorgeous entertainment. These writers were popular authors in their day. Surely the level of understanding and appreciation among the citizens of Clanton today should not be lower than it was among people of all classes fifty, or a hundred years ago.

Motorists---Take Care

It's recess time. A group of boys are kicking a football on the schoolhouse grounds. The ball strikes on end and bounds onto the highway. An excited boy races after it and dashes into the path of a rapidly travelling car.

When incidents like this arise it is well for the motorist to have his car under control. Children must play and an excited youngster cannot always think of all the rules of safe conduct which his parents and teachers have endeavored to impress upon him.

An added responsibility is therefore, placed upon the shoulders of the motorist at this time of the year, and during the entire school period.

Motorists, we believe, are generally careful near the school zones here in Clanton. But a few heedless drivers, we are sorry to announce, seem determined to reach their destinations in record time. They feel that they have their rights on the highway and those who do not recognize these rights act at their own risk.

But after all how stupid and blind is such an attitude. We were all young once. We realize how the excitement of play suppresses all sense of caution. The adult driver must take account of the perfectly normal actions and reactions of children.

Remember this, Mr. Motorist. If you kill or injure a happy, carefree youngster, you will know many hours of bitter reflection and sorrowful regret. Don't let it happen. Bring your car quickly under control as soon as you see a sign indicating a school zone.

It wasn't the fault of the engineers when that WPA dam broke. They couldn't calculate the amount of shovel leaning it would have to stand during construction.

MORALECHOS

D. W. Haskew

During the days of slavery a Southern community was visited by a Calvinistic preacher. He was asked to preach in this community and he delivered a great oration on the eternal damnation of infants. He pictured little babies "Not a Span long" as being burned forever in the fires of hell. At the close of his sermon he called upon an old negro slave to lead the closing prayer. The old man in black happened to be an orthodox Methodist preacher and he reverently knelt down and folded his arms across his breast and with a clear voice he started praying, "O thou great and unscrupulous God, we have heard strange things about thee this day if they be true, but our Father thou knowest that we do not believe a word of it." Then the old man talked to God about the plan of salvation and loud "Amen's" rose from every corner of the church. If God should be all that we hear that He is, if He should be all that He is charged of doing—we too, could join in with the old negro and address Him thus, "O thou great and unscrupulous God, I think that we should be very careful of charging God with doing things that we know that he does not do."

A traveler landed in Japan and a Coolie approached him with three questions: "Did you come sir to buy? Did you come to see? Did you come for your health?" The questions of that Coolie bring to our minds the three classes of people who live in our world. People who are here to do business. They want to make money and make more of it all the time. Another class seems to be in this world to see. They travel and travel some more. Still another class is here to find health. They talk diet and seek examinations in the east and in the west. May I not ask of you: What is your purpose in this world? Have you come to do business, to see, or to seek health? Let me tell you that what you are going to be in the next world will largely be determined by what you are down here. Why not give God a square deal and live to serve Him?

There is a lot of inconsistency in the world. For instance on the first Sunday in September, 1937, people told me that it was too hot to go to church, that they had a headache and could not go, that company came and they were hindered and a lot more junk just like that. But it is known that these same folks went to ball game at three fifteen in the afternoon. It was as hot as blazes, but not too hot to go to a ball game on the Sabbath. If they had a headache it did not keep them at home. If they had company they took their company and attended the game. I like clean sports as much as any man living, but if I understand God—the God whom I worship, Sunday baseball is wrong. There are six days in which to play match games. God has reserved the Sabbath for worship and rest. It is not the church that keeps folks away from church when they go to a ball game in the heat. It is not a headache that keeps folks from going to church when they rush off to a game with an aching head. It is not the company that keeps folks from going to church when they take that company and go to a game. Why not let God and your pastor the honest truth by saying that you love pleasure and entertainment more than you love God and His cause. Where your heart is, it is there that you will give your time an forfeit. O, consistency, thou gem of life.

A Western evangelist made it his practice to paint signs and epigrams on rocks and fences along the road over which he traveled. At one turn of the road he painted this question: "What will you do and where will you be after you die?" Along came a patent medicine salesman who had an eye to business and he stopped long enough to put another sign under the one left by the evangelist. It read thus: "Where you will most likely be, you had better have a bottle of Delta Oil for it is good for burns." That patent medicine salesman is offering good advice to a lot of folks who travel this highway of life. I would like to add that with some folks it seems to be the part of wisdom that they not only have Delta Oil, but they had better carry along an asbestos suit.

Two of my church members met each other at a summer resort on the Gulf for three successive Sabbaths. On the fourth Sunday they met up at the church door. One said to the other: "Here you are too. My car is in the garage what is the matter with yours?" The other man glanced at the questioner and with a twinkle in the eye he replied: "Buddy, do not act to pious, neither of us would have been here if our cars could have carried us elsewhere." If I mistake not, some folks go to church when they are hindered from going to other places. God gave you a car that you might use it in helping you to go to church, and not that you might use it for pleasure trips on Sunday. If the weather is beautiful and the car runs good, it is good-bye God, good-bye church—we are off to the shore and to revelry and sin. America has two great idols, the automobile and whiskey. I fear that God is just about to say: "Ephraim is joined to his idols, let him alone."

To make it more pleasurable for working into mittens and boots, Eskimo women chew sealskin.

News from Thorsby

MRS. WEBB PARRISH, Correspondent

Thorsby Institute News

On Friday of this week at 2:45 P.M. the Philomathic and Pushmataha Clubs will meet. This will be the first meeting which the new pupils will attend. These meetings are not open to the public but give training to the pupils in presiding and taking part in programs. These clubs are a part of the Helen Keller Literary Society whose meetings are generally at night and are open to the public.

A week from Saturday school will be in session again closing at 1:15.

Two weeks from Saturday, November 13, the annual Stunt Night program by the four classes will be given. Everyone is invited. Admission will be ten cents.

Rev. and Mrs. E.W. Butler, who have been away on a vacation in New York State, have returned to Thorsby and are gladly welcomed back.

The Ladies Guild, an organization of ladies whose special interest is Thorsby Institute, will have a social Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Arthur Villadsen. Mrs. Anna Villadsen will be hostess also. Everyone is invited to come.

We would call attention to the fact that anyone is welcome to draw books from the Thorsby Institute library. No charge is made, but if a book is not returned within two weeks a fine of one cent a day is charged and one may not get another book until the fine is paid. If a book is lost this must be replaced.

The P.T.A. is sponsoring a Halloween party at the public school Friday night at seventhirty. Admission five and ten cents. Everybody is invited to be on hand, and tell other people about this party. Refreshments free. Lemonade and sandwiches, cakes for the ugliest man and ugliest woman.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Coeburn announce the birth of a fine baby girl, born Oct. 22, whom they have named Mabel Elizabeth.

Miss Bertha Littleton of Birmingham spent the week end here with Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Billingsley.

AGRICULTURE AND LABOR SHOULD HELP EACH OTHER

Auburn, Ala.—"It is high time for both agriculture and labor to realize that the national goal must be increased abundance and a higher standard of living for both farmer and consumer," says Secretary Wallace.

"The highest price per bushel and the highest wages per hour will ultimately lead to serious disappointment unless they result in increased balanced abundance and higher standards of living for all the people," he continues.

"Farmers want a fair share of the national income, not merely in terms of dollars but in terms of goods and satisfactions in life. In striving for that share they want to cooperate with the other classes so that the total volume of goods to be divided will be increased."

"Greater than any modern time saving invention," explains — "is love at first sight."

Mt. Pleasant News

First meeting of the year at Mt. Pleasant was very interesting. Mr. Ivey and our project for next year and stock show and prizes won. Talked about the good times we are having the summer, about the trip to Shoals, the 4-H Club rally, etc.

Want all club members to be at next club meeting, as we are to elect new officers.

There being no other business the meeting was adjourned until next month.

Baker Club

Baker Home Demonstration met at the home of Mrs. Kate Tuesday, October 12, with seven members and three visitors present. Meeting was called to order by the roll call and reading of minutes of the previous meeting.

ing by the Secretary.

After the old business was disposed of Miss Grace discussed the success of both the county and state fairs. Mrs. J.A. Marcus read the constitution of the club and Miss Grace explained a few of the most outstanding points.

We were very glad to have Mrs. Stanley Kennedy and Miss Martha Kennedy of the Mt. Pleasant Club with us. They gave an interesting program which was enjoyed by all.

A committee of three were appointed by the President to put on a program at the next meeting. This committee consisted of: Miss Gladys Roper, Mrs. G.E. Stutt, Mrs. J.M. Roper.

There being no other business the club dismissed with the club pledge to meet Tuesday, November 9, at the home of Mrs. J.A. Marcus.

Leadership Meeting

On October 13, 1937, the first Leadership meeting of the year was opened by singing "The Song Of The Open Country."

Dr. Truett gave the Devotional, which was greatly enjoyed.

Miss Grace gave a short talk after which Miss Helen Kennedy, Food Preservation Specialist of Auburn, took charge of the meeting and gave a wonderful demonstration of the "Family Food Supply."

An explanation of what was gained from this lesson was given by Miss Martha Kennedy, Mrs. Stanley Kennedy, Mrs. J.D. Williams, Mrs. Geo. E. Spencer and Mrs. D.E. Edwards.

The meeting then adjourned for lunch.

When we met back at 1:30 o'clock, a play was given by Mrs. J.D. Williams, Miss Sallie Joe Cox and Miss Inez McKee on "Neighbors At The Grocery Store."

Miss Kennedy asked the following members to discuss the difference in price and value of various foods: Mrs. Claude Popwell, Mrs. A.B. Jones, Mrs. John Lett, Mrs. Geo. Spencer, Mrs. W.B. Strock, Mrs. D.E. Edwards and Mrs. J.A. Marcus.

The following clubs were represented by their leaders and presidents: Alpine-Pletcher: Mrs. A.B. Jones and Mrs. G.W. Walker.

FAIRVIEW HOME DEM. CLUB

The Fairview Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. J.D. Williams on Tuesday, October 19, with eleven members present. The meeting was called to order by President, Mrs. J.D. Williams. All new and old business was attended to. Plans were made for the Halloween party which is being given at Baker school house on next Friday night, October 29. This being a joint affair between the Fairview, Baker and Mt. Pleasant Clubs.

We welcome everybody to attend this affair because it is just a social affair and the admission is only five cents.

There is plenty of fun in store for everyone, old and young, so be sure and come. The Demonstration leader was unable to attend, due to a funeral so the president gave the demonstration, which was on the amount of food per person for one year.

Setting out of orchids of both large and small fruits was discussed by Miss Grace.

Our next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Morris Keen on November 16 with a spend-the-day party. There will be a way provided for every member to get to the meeting. So let's everyone go.

Clanton Methodist Church

We were made quite happy Sunday by the attendance at Sunday School. Almost every teacher, as usual, was right at his and her place and each department is complimented on its numbers present and the work it is doing. Your superintendent says "Keep it up."

Attendance at church services was really good too. We appreciate that, and feel sure that each one who attended was glad and blessed. We trust all will return regularly and bring others. We sincerely hope the absent ones will take notice of themselves, remember the Church next Sunday and attend both Sunday school and church services.

The Sunday school offering next Sunday is to be sent to our orphanage. Let's remember the children of our orphanage and give most liberally to that most worthy institution.

Remember, we miss a mighty good message when we fail to hear our pastor's sermon. We don't have the gratified sensation of duty well done and a pleasure enjoyed when we stay away from church. Rather, we feel depressed and oftentimes the rest of the day "goes wrong," just because we feel that all is wrong. We might have felt that all is right if we had attended church. We don't want to feel that going to church is a duty. It is really an opportunity—an opportunity to learn more of the stabler, the higher, the secure, the holier parts of life—an opportunity our better nature cherishes and longs for.

Let's go to church at our very next opportunity.

Jack frost made his appearance here in a big way last Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Higgins moved to Clanton last week. We shall miss them very much however, we hope they will like their new home, and that Mr. Higgins will soon regain his health.

A good many around here are suffering with severe colds due to the sudden change in the weather. Here's hoping they will be able to attend Sunday school next Sunday.

Mrs. J. P. Smith of Birmingham, Mrs. Mary Davenport and daughter, Louise, spent Thursday of last week with Mrs. Silas Oden.

We are sorry Jack Sanders cut his foot badly last week as he was cutting cane with a hoe, even if he won't be able to help finish the cane, he hates to miss those 'possums and squirrels, so we hope his foot will heal real fast.

Our sympathy is extended to Miss Eula Sanders, who is suffering again with a disease of the bone. She has been staying for some time at Billingsley, but is at home with her parents now.

Mrs. S. C. Sewell has returned home after several weeks visiting.

To the ladies of the W.M.S. who have not given in the quilt squares, please send them to Mrs. Silas Oden before next Saturday and to those who did not fix a square please bring or send your part in money to help buy a lining and thread for the quilt. The amount will be appreciated, however small and your name will be sent with the quilt.

Mr. and Mrs. Odell Higgins are now living at the place vacated by Mr. Ben Higgins.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Smith spent last week visiting relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Oden and little granddaughter, Juanita, spent a while Monday afternoon of last week with Mrs. Silas Oden.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Leach were the Sunday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Scott.

Mrs. Leonard Holley of Samaria visited relatives here last Sunday.

Miss Gladys Oden was the Sunday guest of Miss Oleta Watley.

DR. GRAGG COMMENTS ON COUNTY FAIR

"Well we had the Chilton County fair. I did not have much to do with it. The Kiwanis made it one more of their many successful objectives.

"While I was not very active, there were others who put forth almost superhuman efforts and worked day and night. And in spite of a late start, half time raining, and a license of one hundred and fifty dollars from the State and one hundred from the City of Clanton; it was a grand success in every way.

"All expenses were paid, including policing the grounds. All individual and community displays that won prizes or awards have been paid in full, and so far as I know, not one cent is now owing for anything, and a few dollars left on hand.

"It was a bundle of surprises to me. I was surprised at the many and wonderful agricultural and home demonstration displays that were put on with only about one month's notice. What could we do if we started now, took a full year, as we should, to get ready to get together and grow these things especially for this display.

"My next greatest surprise was that, after some of us had lost considerable time, put out lots of energy and some money to hold a county fair to put our farmers in position to display their products for their benefit and to get a crowd here to spend money with our business men and keep our money at home rather than go to Birmingham or Montgomery to a fair and trade there."

I say my next greatest surprise was that our own town charged us $100.00 for a county fair license, although there was no schedule for any such license. And right here, I want to say that last night I heard one of our leading merchants say that he found that the fair crowds from almost every section of the county brought him a most satisfactory trade, and he considered it money maker for him.

"Another surprise to me was the large midway that catered to the public in such a smooth and satisfactory way without trouble or criticism.

"Another surprise was the free shows which were the largest and most varied that I had ever witnessed at a county fair. Some of them were big enough and good enough for any state fair.

"Right here I want to pay my compliments to all who took part in this county fair, especially those who got up such good displays within such short time. My hat is off to you.

"Now I wish I knew the sentiment of our farmers and business men. Do we want another county fair next fall, or do we not? Please, you who would take part, express yourself freely for, or against it, in the county papers or by letter to me.

"If we are going to have it, say so now, so that the necessary buildings, etc., may be arranged in time to accommodate a good fair and stock show.

MT. PLEASANT 4-H CLUB NEWS

Hooray! we're back at our 4-H Club work again! The first song we sang was "When We All Get Together." We're all happy to be back with Miss Grace and Mr. Ivey again, after a happy vacation.

We sang three songs and had our program. The first meeting we had, we got our officers. They are as follows:

President—Evelyn Jones.
Vice-president—Marie Price.
Secretary and Treasurer—Dollie Price.
News Reporter—Lorene Guinn.
Song Leader—Myrtice Melton.

Cheer Leaders—Agnes Minter, Berlin Caton.

Miss Grace's helpers—Dorothy Wick, Doris Wiley, Geraldene Fox, Frances Fox.

We hope to have a successful club during the year of 1938, and will be a help to all the girls.

What's RIGHT with ALABAMA

A TREASURE CHEST OF MINERALS

Let's look into this buried chest of treasure which Nature stored in Alabama long years ago.

In Alabama's northern counties are vast beds of red iron ore (hematite) estimated by geologists at some 1,970,000,000 recoverable tons, and lesser deposits of brown ore (limonite), first used to make Alabama iron in 1818.

Coal bearing formations in four fields—the Warrior, Cahaba, Coosa and Plateau—underlie some 8,000 square miles.

Dolomite, used for furnace flux in our great iron industry, outcrops in extensive belts and at many points is practically adjacent to both coal fields and iron ore deposits.

Limestone, principal ingredient in cement manufacture, valuable ally of agriculture and important in the manufacture of many chemicals, is found throughout the state.

The Alabama Power Company and Our State

Because the Alabama Power Company is a neighbor rather than a kinsman, The Advertiser feels free to come to its side from time to time and say a good word for it. We think that the Alabama Power Company, as led by Mr. Thomas W. Martin, is the most progressive, economic force in Alabama. We think that in pursuing its natural interests it is performing a high service to all the people of Alabama. The Advertiser does not profess to be an expert upon the questions of electric rates, but, speaking for itself and for those whom it knows best, it does not think that the power company is an exploiter. It thinks that electricity in Alabama is low in cost, and at all events a blessing to all of our people.

As native industries require electricity, the power company will accommodate them and so withdraw service to consumers in other states. This policy is well known and it is grossly unfair to attack the power company because it sells its surplus to other states pending the consumption of its surplus by native industries, all of which it stands ready to serve.

Why should business interests in Alabama malign and misrepresent so useful a public agency as the Alabama Power Company? That company is doing its best to make this state prosperous. All that it is or hopes to be depends upon the goodwill of Alabamians. The Alabama Power Company is not a thief striving to escape the state with a lot of loot. It is a home industry whose natural self-interest requires that it benefit the highest possible number of people. Why should any good citizen make himself the enemy of the Alabama Power Company?—The Montgomery Advertiser.

Marble, noted for its fine texture, variegated colors and beautiful veining, occurs in many sections and has been used in many prominent buildings.

Clays of varied composition for making brick, tile, hollowware and sewer pipe are widely distributed.

Asphalt rock for paving roads is another mineral whose full possibilities have not been developed.

There are many other minerals in Alabama which remain to be commercially developed on any considerable scale. Among these geologists list bauxite, barytes, manganese, mica, graphite, slate, corundum, and Fuller's earth.

How may one survey these mineral riches—how may one observe the many growing industries which they have already caused to be located in our state—without a feeling of confidence in Alabama's future?

ANNUAL MEETING EASTERN DISTRICT WMU WILL MEET AT GOODWATER NOVEMBER 9

The annual meeting of the Eastern District, Woman's Missionary Union, will convene at the Baptist church in Goodwater, Tuesday, November 9, 1937.

The meeting will continue through the day, closing with a young peoples service in the evening.

There will be delegates from the following Associations: Carey, Central, Chilton, East Liberty, Elmore, Randolph, Russell, Tallapoosa, Tuskegee and Unity.

It is hoped by the leaders of the Eastern District, that the attendance this year will be much larger than usual since the meeting is only for one day, while heretofore it has included two days and one night.

Red Cross Handled Greatest Disaster In Peacetime History During Past Year

As an agency of the American people the American Red Cross last year cared for the largest number of disaster victims in the organization's peacetime history, it was revealed yesterday by Dr. C. O. Lawrence, chairman of the local Red Cross Chapter.

"During the recent Ohio-Mississippi Valley flood the Red Cross gave assistance to 322,300 families," Dr. Lawrence said. "This represented 1,450,000 individuals and far exceeded the number we were forced to care for during the previous all-time high water in 1927."

"Disasters struck 36 states, Alaska and the District of Columbia, and touched 384 counties. The American Red Cross also assisted victims in the Philippine Islands and in three foreign countries in answer to calls from Red Cross Societies there for assistance."

To carry out this great relief task, Dr. Lawrence pointed out, American people generously contributed more than $25,000,000 to be administered by the Red Cross.

The local chairman said, however, that while the Red Cross had been called upon to assist victims of 24 floods during the year, a variety of other disasters called for relief work. These included cloudbursts, dust storms, earthquakes, epidemics, explosions, fires, hailstorms, a landslide, mine explosions, mine fires, tornadoes, truck accidents, typhoons, and general windstorms.

"In all, the Red Cross assisted victims of 128 disasters during the year, including 106 in continental United States," he said.

Dr. Lawrence said that while most disasters struck without warning, that the Red Cross had continued its effort to have organized preparedness committees sponsored by each of the Red Cross Chapters throughout the country, all of them ready to answer calls for assistance without waste of time. He spoke especially of the committees organized in states subject to frequent tornadoes and hurricanes and said that chapters in those territories kept plans up to date for transportation from danger zones and care of refugees that could be put into action immediately.

"It would be impossible," Dr. Lawrence said, "to tell by statistics what renewed hope and brightened outlooks on life were made possible by this Red Cross assistance. It is hard to visualize the plight of flood victims last Spring had it not been for assistance in rebuilding and refurnishing homes and re-establishing means of livelihood for victims that the Red Cross gave in addition to the emergency assistance in the form of food, medical aid, clothing, and shelter provided while the waters were raging."

The year-round maintenance of Red Cross Disaster Service, Dr. Lawrence pointed out, is made possible by the annual Red Cross Roll Call, to be held this November 11 to 25 when citizens will be asked to renew their memberships or to join this great movement for the relief of those in distress.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

In these days of dictatorships, with strong-armed militaristic leaders at the helm of national governments and maintaining their power at the cost of the liberties of the great mass of people, the cause of democracy is in great danger of losing entirely the vast ground it has won through the ages.

In Spain, a whole country smaller than some of our states, a civil war rages between two opposing political beliefs—Fascism and Communism, both of which are antagonistic to Democracy. In Germany, Der Fuehrer rides roughshod over the liberties of the common people to strengthen his own individual power; he fans the flames of religious and racial hatreds, breaks treaties with much the same abandon that his royal predecessor tore up the pact with Belgium as a mere scrap of paper, and keeps the peace of Europe, and perhaps the peace of the whole world, on the brink of a steep precipice. In Italy, Il Duce controls the press, dictating even what his people may read, and thereby controlling their very thoughts; he musters an entire nation as an army and shakes an armed fist at the British Empire, both on land and sea. In Russia, Stalin, nominally on the Secretary of the Communist Party, but actually the sole autocratic ruler of the largest continuous stretch of dry land within one nation in the world, controls the property interests of the nation with an even greater power than the feudal barons of the Middle Ages dared to dream of, and wields the power of life and death over his subjects with a more sinister finality than the most autocratic of the Czars ever attempted.

At times we are prone to complain of our lot: if the administration succeeds in raising wages for the laboring class, then the consumer complains of the increased cost of the completed product; if the administration pegs the price of cotton, the exporter complains that with such high prices he cannot compete with other cotton-growing countries in world markets; if cotton is left to natural reactions for its price level, it drops to the point where the farmer's buying power is restricted, so the farmer, the merchant and the manufacturer all complain.

Yet we may read our newspaper without fear of censorship. The paper editor may freely criticize administration without fear of his paper confiscated, and his sentenced to prison or shot away. If we do not like the administration we are getting a unit of government, we are at the polls and change it. We may worship God in any way we choose, and by what ritual we have come to believe is the true without the iron hand of government to stop us.

Any one of the many liberties we enjoy, and for which our forefathers fought and suffered, is worth the vigilance required to keep democracy alive and turn our backs to "isms" that beset the political philosophy of the world.

That vigilance demands only one thing: an educated and intelligent voting public. So long as schools shall function for the benefit of all the people, so long as the mass of the people in these United States shall be taught the nature of the rights and liberties which they possess, and the manner of safeguarding them, that long shall we have democracy with all its blessings.

We should not take our liberties for granted. We live in one of the few countries in the world where that privilege is granted to the people. We should be as we hold our rights in trust as we please, our right to property without grant from a tyrannical ruler, and our right to those who shall govern us.

Read! Encourage your neighbor to read! Give your children books to read! If we will continue to read books, newspapers, magazines for their quality and the value of content, we shall always be able to keep our government clear of influences which would deprive the rights and liberties which we have won and suffered so much to shed and suffering.

To assure you, your neighbor, your children of the proper selection of books, newspapers and magazines it is vitally necessary that we have a free public library from which we may borrow these things, to be turned after reading. That it must be a joint community affair, must all join together in building, foundation, laying its corner stones, furnishing it with books and making it for our future generations.

At least, that's what I think.

Stalin, dictator of Soviet Russia, said to rule 160,000,000 people out any constitutional authority.

Maine passed a prohibition law in 1850, and never repealed it. Arizona's copper mines are the biggest in the world.

VERBENA YOUNG LADY IS CHOSEN BY PLAYERS

Marion, Ala., Oct. 12.—(Special)—Miss Evelyn Caffey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Caffey, of Verbena, has been elected to membership in Apprentice Players, Judson College dramatic club, for the 1937-38 season. New members were named following annual try-outs held this week. Miss Caffey is a member of the freshman class of Judson College.

Through participation in dramatic activities, and the production and writing of plays, members of Apprentice Players become eligible for membership in Alpha Phi Omega, National honorary dramatic fraternity.

Sylacauga Whips Tigers

Last Friday afternoon the Tigers lost their second game of the year to the Sylacauga Aggies, 32-7. There was some good playing on the part of each. The Aggies got off to a good start with a 40 run by Matson. Clanton seemed to be in a daze at the first when Sylacauga started off with a 13-point lead, but soon cleared their heads and slowed down the Aggies considerably. But try as they may, they couldn't overcome the long lead Sylacauga attained at the beginning.

Anyway, we have other games to play and hope we will make up for this defeat next Friday at Montevallo.

Following is the Tigers' program for the remainder of this season:
Oct. 29—Montevallo at Montevallo.
Nov. 5—Selma at Selma (night game).
Nov. 12—Holtville at Holtville.
Nov. 19—Maplesville at Clanton.
Nov. 24—Isabella at Clanton.

Sr. II Class To Sponsor School Paper

The Senior II Class is sponsoring a school paper which will be published every two weeks. The first issue will be out next week sometime. Miss Simpson held a meeting last week and elected officers to work on making this go over in a big way. The officers elected were as follows:
Editor-in-Chief—Carlos Wyatt.
Sports Editors, Nell Jones and Maurice Wyatt.

Social Editors—Hazel Nivens and Olive Rainer Elmore.
Art Editors—Mildred Maddox, Buster Popwell and Buell Locklear.
Business Managers—Annie Pearl Honeycutt and Myrtle Pitts.
Typists—Peggy Page and Myrtice Mims.

Circulation Managers—Harold Lawrence and Myrtle Pitts.
A drive is being made to get subscriptions for this paper during the school year. See any member of this group for a paper or subscription. Be sure and get a copy of the first issue.

LIVESTOCK REMINDERS

By F. W. Burns

Fall farrowed pigs should be weaned at 8 weeks of age in order that the sow may be bred back for the spring litter. Young pigs should be encouraged to eat as soon as possible. A mixture of ground corn, 60 pounds, wheat shorts, 30 pounds, tankage, 5 pounds, and cottonseed meal, 5 pounds, is an excellent mixture for growing pigs.

Oats and vetch or rye should be planted to furnish late winter and spring grazing for the fall farrowed pigs. It has been estimated that green grazing will reduce the amount of grain required to produce 100 pounds of pork 15 per cent. In addition, it reduces parasite infestation by keeping the pigs on clean ground. One acre per sow is recommended.

five percent by individuals, the loss is distributed widely.

Mr. Huddleston stated that his Committee, together with the County Petroleum Industries Committees in the other counties, together with the State Committee and other organizations was sponsoring legislation which would, if enacted, provide a uniform gasoline tax rate throughout the State, and would place Alabama in line with the forty-three other States that have no local gasoline taxes.

"In citing some of the specific illustrations disclosed by the study Mr. Huddleston gave the following:

Ft. Deposit, 1 cent gasoline tax removed, business increased 31.9 pct.

Demopolis, 2 cent tax reduced to 1 cent, business increased 25.9 pct.

Ozark, 2 cent tax reduced to 1 cent, business increased 10.8 pct.

by J. Mell Martin, disaster chairman, and chairman of the 1937 Roll Call, many deserving cases of pellagra have been given treatment in this county through the funds provided by memberships in the Red Cross.

During the past year when the states of Ohio, Kentucky and others were suffering heavy property loss and loss of lives from flood waters, this county raised, through the Red Cross organization here, $1,379.30 in money for the flooded section and approximately $1,345.00 in food and clothing which was also badly needed there.

Had Alabama and Chilton County been in need of aid, the Red Cross in other sections would certainly have responded immediately. That that is true was demonstrated in this county in 1932.

Volunteers Needed

Mr. Martin stated that volunteer membership solicitors were needed this year to work in their respective communities. Memberships are sold at one dollar each. The contributor is given a membership card and a button, both of which are symbolic of a kind heart and good citizen when carried.

HOME OF S.L. KNIGHT IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Help Is Needed By Family That Lost Large Amount Recently

The home of S.L. Knight, laborer, and father of two children, was almost completely destroyed by fire last week near Mountain Creek.

Although a large portion of the household furnishings were saved, much was damaged and Mr. Knight is in need of bed clothing, flour and other necessities in order that he may set up home again. Anything wished to be given to Mr. Knight may be left at the News office.

Get Ready

Whether you have a dollar or not—even if it's just a quarter dollar you have—make preparations beginning now to become a member of the Chilton County Chapter of the American Red Cross when the membership drive opens on Thursday, November 11th. Every citizen displaying a membership card or a membership button can proudly boast of being a member of such a worthwhile and life-giving organization.

Clanton's Band Has Excellent Program

A large crowd attended a public concert given by Clanton's band at the courthouse last Saturday night and the program was a success by those who were present. The twenty-odd members of the band displayed excellent talent.

On Friday night of this week the band will appear again at the house at the Mill Village here. The lowe'en program has been a success for that night and the band is invited.

Last Saturday, members of the band held a business meeting and the following officers: Archie Barton, president and assistant; Union Towery, vice-president; Roberts, business manager; Hayes, assistant business manager.

Charles Foshee, business manager; Miss Viva Glass, social secretary; Leona Mims, corresponding secretary; and Miss Gertrude Staggs, librarian. A. Crosby, well known musical instructor of the state, is the director of the band. Homer A. who is business manager, is the president of Alabama Mills and has done considerable work toward the organizing of this band, which is composed of young people.

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

SOMETIMES a bad break in Hollywood leads to a good one, which is just another way of saying that motion-picture producers are slow to make up their minds. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is going to star Willie Howard, the veteran comic of the stage, in a big musical extravaganza, because he was so funny in a skit in "Broadway Melody of 1938."

You never saw the skit, no matter how carefully you watched the picture, because it was cut out. When they first saw it, the officials of the studio didn't think it was so funny, and having to take something out to shorten the picture, they sacrificed what Howard was. He was the most hilarious skit of his career. Taking another look at the discarded film, officials have decided that it was very funny—so funny that they won't waste Howard's talents in the future.

With the season of big motion pictures only a few weeks old, four of the thirty or so pictures released have made outstanding hits. These are "Prisoner of Zenda" with Ronald Colman and Madeline Carroll, "100 Men and a Girl" with Deanna Durbin, "Thin Ice" with Sonja Henie, and Grand National's "Something to Sing About" with James Cagney. This last is a grand bit of nonsense in which the pugnacious singer, dancer, and fighter is through a delightful story, aided and abetted by Mona Barrie.

Victor McLaglen roared into New York recently on his way to London to make a picture, and when Victor hears anyone would think the whole mysterious good-humored American region was back in town. His high spirits are infectious and his magnum opus so overpowering that when he introduced his friend Brian Donnelly as the greatest actor in the world, everyone agreed—for the moment.

Paramount goes right on announcing one picture after another for Frances Farmer, but Miss Farmer says that she is coming to New York to do a stage play called "The Only Art" written by Luise Rainer's husband.

At the Universal studios where Harry McRae turns out thrilling serials faster than you can say "to be continued next week," they don't have much time to humor temperamental actors, but recently they had to give in and waste an hour or so while an actor had a tantrum. The actor was a lion. McRae thought he would save the lion from the existing period of posing while he was being adjusted, and brought in a stuffed lion as double. Jealous of this interloper, the lion broke from his cage, rushed on the set, and tore the stuffed animal to shreds.

Theater owners all over the country are begging Republic and Grand National officials to speed up production on Westerns starring Gene Autry and Tex Ritter, so that the thrilling cowboys will have time to make personal appearance tours. The ever-growing popularity of the two lads is the sensation of the bookkeeping departments.

Ever since Claudette Colbert came out in "She Met Him in Paris" as an accomplished figure skater, all the other girls have wanted to get off their profits at winter sports. Ruby Keeler, operating from recent illness, is making for her first picture at C. O. The story is called "Love Belongs to Freeling" and big surprise is skating is the feature of the picture.

AND ENDS—Marlene Dietrich's picture that used to extend very out of her return to normal in her picture "Angel" and will probably be a new fashion... Jean Parker herself a hat, copied from one Cooper wore in "The Plainsman" and she is very busy helping friends copy it... Ronald Sinclair given entirely satisfactory in roles and for Freddie Bartholomew, so is doubtful that Freddie will get any work with his strike for more money. Simone Simon is going to sing a coloratura aria in her next picture. The studio just found out that she is making records in France... Crosby wants his friend, Bob Hope, to play a dramatic role in his new picture, now that the team of Laurel and Hardy have split.

Following Instructions
"Great Scott!" said Mr. Newlywed, seeing broken crockery all over the floor. "Whatever has happened?"

Mrs. Newlywed explained: "This cookery book says that an old cup without a handle will do for measuring—and it's taken me 11 tries to get a handle off without breaking the cup."

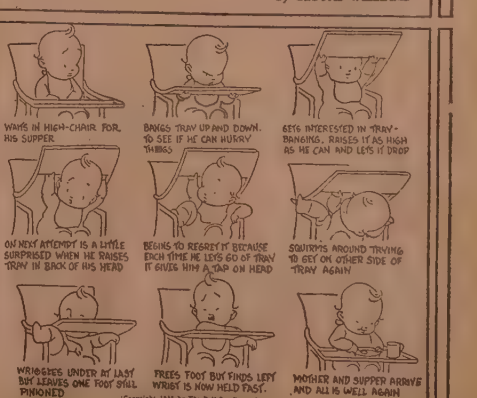

Pie for Breakfast
A traveling salesman stopped at a small Vermont hotel for breakfast. The waitress asked him what he'd like for his breakfast. "Have you cooked breakfast foods?" he inquired.

"Yes, indeed."
"What kinds have you?"
"Open-face, criss-cross and kivered—all apple."

PLANT WINTER LEGUMES FOR SOIL IMPROVEMENT

Auburn, Ala.—The most important problem of any farmer is to obtain the largest possible net return from his farm operation. Greater net returns may be obtained by either increasing the gross return or by reducing the cost of production or by the operation of both these factors. The farmer can obtain greater gross returns per acre by increasing the yields. Lower production costs per unit of product can be most effectively obtained by the use of those practices which give the highest yields at the least cost.

No practice is known which will give higher yields per acre and lower costs per unit of product than planting winter legumes. Experiments conducted by the Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station have shown that a good crop of vetch or Austrian peas will greatly increase cotton and corn yields at a very low unit cost. These increases have averaged approximately 600 pounds of seed cotton and 15 bushels of corn per acre. The cost of these increases is very low.

It is rather late to plant these winter crops in North Alabama. However, in Middle and South Alabama vetch and Austrian peas may be planted with safety up to November 1 if the proper precautions are taken. The precautions are as follows: Plant 20 pounds of hairy vetch or 30 pounds of Austrian winter peas per acre. Inoculate the seed with the commercial culture and with soil from a place where the crop has successfully grown when vetch or Austrian peas are planted on land for the first time. Apply 300 pounds of superphosphate or 600 pounds of basic slag per acre at the time of planting.

MYSTERY OF LOST COLONY RECALLED

Ancient Puzzle Touched by Fates in North Carolina.

Manteo, N. C.—As a fitting tribute to the first English settlement in this country (on Roanoke island, North Carolina), in the year 1587, under the sponsorship of Sir Walter Raleigh, a series of celebrations was held on the island this summer. The idea is to commemorate the three hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the colony. On August 17 was observed the three hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the birthday of Virginia Dare, the first child born of English parents in America.

Thirty-three years before the Pilgrims landed on Plymouth rock, and 20 years before Jamestown was settled, the 100 men, 12 women, and 9 children who formed the first English colony in America settled on Roanoke island. This was in July, 1587.

Colony Disappears.

On August 27, 1587, Gov. John White, who headed the expedition, bade farewell to his companions and to his nine-day-old granddaughter, Virginia Dare, and sailed to England for supplies. Upon his return five years later, the colony had completely disappeared. The only traces left being a few broken pieces of armor and the word "Croatoan" carved on a tree. What happened to Sir Walter Raleigh's "lost colony" is a mystery which for centuries has baffled historians. Many explanations and legends have arisen.

Did the colonists intermarry with the Indians and are their descendants living in North Carolina today? Was the colony exterminated by the Spaniards? Were the settlers massacred by the Indians? No one knows for sure.

Governor White himself told the story of his return to the island in 1591. Upon this story are based all accounts of what happened.

"We returned," he said, "round about the north point of the island until we came to the place where I left our colony."

"In all this way, we saw in the sand the print of the savage's feet of two or three sorts trodden in the night, and as we entered upon the sandy banks, upon a tree, the very brow thereof, were curiously carved the fair Roman letters, C. R. O. which letters presently we knew to signify the place where I should find the planters (colonists) seated, according to a secret token agreed upon between them and me at my departure from them; which was that in any way they should not fail to write or carve on a tree or posts of the doors the name of the place where they should be seated, for at my coming they were prepared to remove from Roanoke 50 miles into the main (mainland).

Found No Signs.

"Therefore at my departure from them Anno 1587, I willed them that, if they should happen to be distressed in any of those places, they should carve over the letters or name across in this form. But we found no sign of distress."

"And having well considered of this, we passed toward the place where they were left in sundry houses, but we found the houses taken down and the place very strongly enclosed, with a high palisade of great trees, with curtains and flanks and very fortlike, and one of the chief trees or posts at the right side of the entrance had the bark taken off and five feet from the ground in fair capital letters was graven 'Croatoan,' without any cross or sign of distress."

A growth of weeds indicated that two seasons had passed since the departure of the colonists. Sir Walter Raleigh dispatched five rescue expeditions, but none was successful.

Drive Launched to Spur Use of Fruit in Austria

Vienna.—An average yearly consumption of 200 pounds of fruit by every person is declared as a desirable goal by Austrian physicians. Now about 80 pounds are being eaten by the average Austrian in a year.

Even this amount cannot be furnished by Austria's fruit growers, as $3,000,000 worth of fruit is imported from abroad, mostly from Italy.

To increase this number in proportion to the rising demand is the object of the recently organized Austrian Fruit Growers' association, which advocates the importation of healthy and suitable trees from abroad, particularly from California and Florida.

WOODLANDS TREATED RIGHT HELP WITH FARM EXPENSES

Many farmers are reporting to the United States Forest Service that growing fuel and lumber and pulpwood or other forest products cuts down the running expenses on a farm. Good cash returns also are obtained when some of the forest products are sold off the farm.

One farmer says: "Farm your woods as you do a crop of corn. Take out the weed trees and the unhealthy and crippled ones and give the best breed a chance to develop. Cut the good trees only when they are ripe."

Still another farmer says: "My woods are my bank. I keep going to it and getting money, and each time the money keeps right on coming back."

A fourth farmer says: "Cross ties are legal tender around here. We bring in our ties and take home flour, sugar, coffee, tobacco, calico, and overalls."

Another farmer says: "Money from the sale of timber has helped to pay for the farm, taken care of taxes, and assisted in giving the children a good education. In addition, our farm woods has furnished lumber, posts and fuel for the farm."

And another reports: "Timber farming is different now from the old days when woods work was just chopping down trees and cutting them up just as you came to them, one after the other. Now you take care of trees as a paying farm crop."

FACTS FROM THE RECORD

Written by F. G. Stephens, Publisher of Southern Democrat, Ocala, Fla.

Alabama Armories

Alabama has twenty-five new armories that have been built in the two years. Two others are now under construction and will be completed before July 1, 1938. The already owned five armories, will give it a total of thirty-five.

These twenty-five armories have been completed during the two years have not cost the State a penny. They have been built with federal money and donations by the municipalities where they are located. Federal government contributed building of these armories $1,000,000 and when the full program is completed will have contributed a total of $2,000,000. The securing of this Federal money and the building of these armories made possible by an act of the legislature in 1935, creating the Armory Commission.

The location of these armories and the amount contributed to each Federal government follows: Bay Minnion, $25,000; Troy, $25,000; Decatur, $25,000; Huntsville, $25,000; Guntersville, $25,000; Albertville, $25,000; Gadsden, $65,000; Jacksonville, $30,000; two at Birmingham, $40,000; Tuscaloosa, $40,000; Greenville, $25,000; Ozark, $25,000; Dothan, $45,000; $30,000; Florala, $30,000; Prichard, $30,000; Mobile, $150,000.

The two new armories now under construction are one at Opelika, $40,000 and the enlargement and building of the one at Evergreen, $12,000.

Others to be built in the next months are one at Hartsville, $25,000 and one at Boaz to the same amount.

The State, before the present program was started, already had armories at Foley, Tallapoosa, Geneva and Ramer.

CHILTON LOW IN RANKING OF RED CROSS

Other Counties Place This County In Background In Memberships

November 11, which is Armistice day, the campaign for memberships in the Red Cross will be in Chilton County, and every resident of the county should make arrangements now to become a member. Memberships cost only one dollar a year and give a membership card and lapel button.

It was pointed out this week by J. Martin, who is serving as Roll chairman, that Chilton County ranked down the line in memberships as compared with other counties in the state, many of those being much smaller in population.

It was also brought out that the county has another opportunity to show that it does appreciate the Red Cross and that the citizens of this county will rally to this organization as it rallies to the aid of this country in any great emergency.

Radio Programs

The Roll Call of the Red Cross is of vast importance is shown by the fact that sixty-nine companies have been organized for the purpose of radio for advertising, are giving much time on their programs to the Roll Call campaign, at their own expense.

FOUR ARRESTS MADE OVER PAST WEEK END HERE

Mail Commission Record in the case of Sheriff J.R. Hardy shows four arrests made during the past week. This has been the quietest week in time according to Chief Deputies. One arrest was made on a charge; one for violating the liquor law and two for driving vehicles while intoxicated.

74 Bales Ginned In Chilton County

There were 16,074 bales of cotton ginned in Chilton County from the 1937 according to a report from V.C. Lee, special agent of the Department of Commerce. This figure is compared with 15,265 bales ginned in the county from the 1936 crop.

OLD'S DEATH TRACED TO ELIXIR SULFANILAMIDE

The death of a young child in Marshall County, after being treated with elixir sulfanilamide has been reported to the State Department of Health, Dr. J.N. Baker, State health officer, announced yesterday. "The information received by the Health Department is incomplete but points to the fact that the use of this drug may have been a contributing factor," he said.

Child's death brings to six the total in Alabama attributed to use of this drug. A warning was issued last week against its use and county health officers in the State were instructed by telegraph last Saturday to take immediate steps to prevent its sale and use in their counties.

ROBERT W. HEFLIN DIED AT HOME FRIDAY AFTERNOON

Robert W. Heflin, age 70, and a well known citizen of the county, died at his home in the Pinedale community last Friday afternoon.

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at Mt. Springs, conducted by the Rev. Jimmy DuBoise, assisted by the Rev. W.S. Cox and the Rev. M. Lockhart. He is survived by his widow, two sons and five daughters.

Mrs. Mattie Johnson of Eclectic is the guest of Mrs. J.W. Fant, Mrs. Johnson plans to be with Mrs. Fant two weeks.

Mrs. L.M. Mathews left Wednesday for Miami, Fla., where she will visit Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Mathews of Coral Gables. She will be away for several months.

IN THE WAKE OF FLOOD

This scene was enacted many times in refugee centers established by the Red Cross during the Ohio-Mississippi Valley flood. Inevitably floods bring the danger of disease as drinking sources become contaminated and large groups of people are thrown together. The medical-health service of the Red Cross serves thousands each year, and is maintained by membership funds contributed to the organization at the time of its annual Roll Call from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving.

Bray Bros. Shows Here On Nov. 6th

Bray Brothers Shows, after a tour of the Central and New England States, will exhibit a Clanton, afternoon and night, Saturday, Nov. 6th. The show presents a program of all feature acts and is one of the season's all around attractions. The equipment is second to none and the slogan of the show is: "You Never Saw So Much For So Little," as the prices are within reach of everyone. Twenty-five cents for adults with a special price of 10 cents for children at the matinee. No doubt this will be the last show of the season and as it has been many years since we have had an attraction like it, large crowds will attend.

"Black Feather"

MAZER'S ANNOUNCES OPENING OF THEIR ANNUAL HARVEST SALE

One Of Clanton's Most Popular Stores Brings Annual Event Opening With Many Outstanding Values And Offers

An event that has become annual and one that has been eagerly awaited by the thrifty shoppers of this section will open Friday, morning of this week when Mazer's Store begins its Annual Harvest Sale.

This announcement appears in the News this week in a two-page advertisement which will be of wide interest and which should be read by every person interested in taking advantage of money-saving values in clothing and dry goods.

Saul M. Goldstein, the accommodating and likable manager of this popular store stated in the News this week that "It has certainly been a long time since I have seen prices as low as we are able to offer during this, our Annual Harvest Sale. The people know of the fine quality of merchandise carried by us and now they will see that we are really offering them some outstanding values for their money."

Mr. Goldstein also stated that there will be plenty of clerks on hand Friday and each day during this Harvest event to take care of the customers that it would be their intention to avoid having a customer wait. The best selections during this sale can be made during the first few days.

Well Known Citizen Died In Jemison

William Thomas Hand, one of Chilton County's widely known residents, died at his home in Jemison, Ala., last Saturday afternoon, following a brief illness. He was 67 years old.

Mr. Hand, in the early part of his life, took an active part in politics in this county and in the state, and always gave a helping hand to religious matters during his entire life. He was also engaged in the lumber business following the death of his father, Loss Hand. He was well known as a farmer and established Havengreen Spa, summer resort at Mineral Springs.

Funeral services were held Monday morning at the home, with the Rev. Maurice Huggins officiating assisted by the Rev. Homer Carroll. Interment followed in the Pine Hill cemetery with Martin & Sons of Clanton in charge.

Pallbearers were C.C. Conway, Dr. A.A. Conway, S.P. Shaw, D.L. Langston, J.M. Langston, and Walter McNeil.

Board Of Education Announces New Plans

Will Aid Persons Sixteen Years-Or Older To Study Lines Of Work, Giving Help In Classes Three Nights Each Week

The Chilton County Board of Education through its department of Trades and Industries is offering the people of Clanton and Chilton County an opportunity to gain more technical and general information about their jobs.

Evening school will open at the high school in Clanton Monday evening, November 8 at seven o'clock. Classes will be held three nights each week. This school is for anyone who is sixteen years of age or over and who are not attending any regular day public or high school, regardless of occupation or employment.

The purpose of the evening school is to help individuals increase their efficiency if employed, and to give those who are not employed enough technical and general information about some job that they may obtain employment.

Classes will be organized at the high school, but may be changed to some shop or business where better instruction may be given.

The following is a suggested list of courses:

'NIGHT OF FUN' CAST MADE UP IN NOVEL WAY

Local Citizens Will Play Friday Night At High School Auditorium

On Friday evening of this week, November 5th, a side-splitting comedy will be presented at the high school building, sponsored by the Homemakers Sunday school class of Clanton Baptist church. The fun will begin at 8 o'clock and last for nearly two hours. The play is being coached by an artist in that work, Mrs. Beulah Garland of Atlanta, Ga.

Beyond doubt, this will be one of the funniest plays ever presented from any stage in the county. It was put on at Pell City last week, and the people there proclaimed it the most delightful entertainment they had ever witnessed.

The sponsors absolve themselves of all responsibility if your eyes run oceans of tears, your sides ache, and you almost pass out with laughter. Anything may happen if you venture near this feast of fun.

Mrs. Alma Huddleston is pianist, and the cast of characters is:

Madame Jarley, Mrs. Garland; Bride, Rev. Truett; Groom, Dr. Ezell; S. Hopkins, John D. Mullins; Black Mammy, Marvin Marcus; Babies, Earl (Continued to Back Page)

MINISTERS OF COUNTY GIVE LIQUOR VIEW

Legislative Candidates Are Cited To Stand To Be Taken In County

The following copy of resolutions was given the News this week with the request it be published:

We do hereby go on record against the present set-up legalizing intoxicating liquors, wines and beverages and its attitude toward candidates in the next year's primaries for the Legislature. We cannot be misinterpreted from the following resolutions adopted at this assembly, and which has become a part of the report on Temperance:

BE IT RESOLVED, by the Chilton County Baptist Association in annual session assembled:

First. We deplore the legalization of liquor, beer, wines and other intoxicating beverages by the Legislature of Alabama:

Second. That we are opposed to the present or any other set-up for the sale of alcoholic drinks and beverages:

Third. That we will not support any candidate for the Legislature who is not in favor of state-wide prohibition. All candidates for the Legislature who do not openly declare themselves for state-wide prohibition we will not support. Further, we will not support any candidates who refuse to so commit themselves. They will be classed by us against state-wide prohibition.

Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be furnished by the clerk of the Association to each of our county papers, with a request to publish the same, and a copy to the Alabama Baptist, also a copy be furnished all candidates for the Legislature in the primaries next year, with a request for each candidate's views on the question herein above set out.

Fifth. That we call upon our sheriff and his deputies of our County to do all in their power to enforce the Temperance laws, gambling laws and violation of the laws of our Sabbath Day, and that a copy of these resolu-

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION WARNS AGAINST MISLEADING INFORMATION

Washington, D.C., Nov. 4.—(Special)—The United States Civil Service Commission has sent a notice to post offices, warning that misleading information is being given the public by representatives of some of the correspondence schools which sell "civil service" courses.

For a long time, the Commission has been receiving complaints from diverse parts of the country which indicate that opportunities for obtaining Federal employment have been greatly exaggerated.

It was made clear that no school has any connection whatever with the Civil Service Commission or with any other branch of the Government, and also that the Commission has no agents who solicit applications for civil service positions or who sell "civil service" courses.

No school can "guarantee" Government employment and none is given information regarding examinations, or any other information, which is not available to the general public. The Commission stated that it does not recommend any school, and explained that it is not necessary for anyone to take a course with a so-called civil service school in order to compete in a civil service examination.

A special point was made of the fact that information concerning examinations may be obtained at any time, without cost, from the secretary of the Civil Service Board at any first or second-class post office or from the Commission's office in Washington, D.C.

Are We Entering World Affairs?

It was not long ago, we all recall, when the Congress of the United States deliberated the enactment of a neutrality policy. Responding to popular demand the elected representatives of the people debated for months over the law designed to keep America out of another world war.

But President Roosevelt, in his Chicago address, seemed to give scant consideration to the will of the people as exhibited in the attitude and legislative action of the Congress. He openly declared that America must take its part in a concerted effort to "quarantine" nations which endanger the peace of the world.

His lofty oratory relative to the preservation of peace may meet with general approval. But events which followed almost upon the heels of that sensational speech have left the vast majority of American people perplexed. For in Spain, in France, and in China his speech is regarded as a statement of American policy. We are going to be ready again with our ships, our men, and our money to help curb their aggressive enemies.

What does he propose to do about it all? Is our nation committed to a policy of helping enforce such a "quarantine" by sending American boys into the orient to curb the outlawry of Japan? Are we to send soldiers to France, or Spain, or Russia to enforce a "quarantine" against the governments of Mussolini or Hitler? Or are we merely to designate aggressor nations as dangerous members of the family of nations and apply economic pressure to bring them to terms? And if we do how will the cotton farmers of the south, or the silk manufacturers and workers of the East feel about the loss of markets and jobs?

Regardless of how one may happen to feel on this grave subject of international relations, it must be agreed that President Roosevelt stepped pretty far beyond the bounds of international policy favored by public opinion in this country. "Let's mind our own business in international affairs," is the attitude of the vast majority of American citizens. Our big job is here on our own continent and we can accomplish little when we leave our own sphere of influence.

All this sudden concern with foreign affairs leads to the conclusion that the Chicago speech was a blind to divert public attention from the rather chaotic status of affairs here at home. But the difficulty lies in the fact that it may commit our country to a policy fraught with difficulties.

Another President entertained ideas of international influence about twenty years ago. During the excitement of war and under the din of government propaganda his popularity seemed to ride the crest.

But in 1920 the people were given an opportunity to express their position, and they gave to the opponent of his policies the greatest proportionate popular majority ever extended to any candidate for high office. We doubt seriously if they have changed their position since that time.

Eleven billion dollars of war debts in default are about all we got of the last war. We are not ready to repeat the blunder.

Perhaps there is not great cause for fear Congress will assert itself before much will happen. And congress will reflect the attitude of the nation at large on an issue of such vital significance.

One thing, nobody can charge that the present era is uneventful or uninteresting.

The only sure sign of bad luck, observes a friend, is to depend upon a politician's pre-election promise.

Consider The Day Of Reckoning

A certain recklessness about running into debt seems to characterize the present time. People seem ready to buy and spend so long as credit holds out with little consideration for the inevitable day of reckoning.

Many economists view this present nationwide disposition to stretch credit to the breaking point with concern. They feel that all, or almost all, of our government units, from the Federal government in Washington, to our state and even our local units are giving too little heed to the difficult job of meeting obligations and too much readiness to borrow while the borrowing is good. This spirit now manifest in government seems also to characterize the attitude of the people. Sooner or later a change must come if all of us are to avoid the trouble from which we are just beginning to recover.

To the average wage earner, salaried worker or small business proprietor a word of caution is timely. Don't spend too freely of the earnings of the future. Remember it is always easy to run into debt. It is difficult to meet past due obligations.

Budget your buying carefully and don't fall too readily for the lure of easy credit. When the average person becomes heavily involved in debt, he inevitably loses hope and interest in his job. Whatever his income may be it seems too small, and the resulting dissatisfaction usually cripples his efficiency.

We are not condemning all credit or purchases made on installment plans. Provided these are carefully planned, and provided you can budget your outgo carefully and then can adhere to that budget, you are on safe ground.

So many cases have come to our attention of late, however, wherein well intentioned people have accumulated excessively heavy obligations for the future that we feel disposed to utter a word of caution.

Consider the job of paying those debts before you contract them. It is usually easier to get along for a while without some luxury, than to apportion out most of each pay check for a lot of things you bought on a long time payment plan.

An Accepted Doctrine

It bordered on the unusual when one of America's great merchant princes made the statement: "No deal is a good deal unless both buyer and seller are satisfied."

Today this axiom is almost a commonplace expression in the organizations of well established business houses. It is the guiding doctrine of a substantial share of the mercantile institutions here in Clanton, at least of those which have remained in business for any considerable period of time.

For they know, these substantial local merchants, that it does not profit them in the end to drive a sharp bargain and then lose your good will and patronage and the confidence of your friends. Located in a community such as ours they cannot depend upon transient business for any appreciable volume of trade. Their success is dependent upon your future trade. They can get that only if they give you the merchandise, the service, and the value that will induce you to buy in their stores again and again.

They cannot build a regular patronage if they give you shoddy merchandise, the defects in which are quickly discovered when it is put into use. They cannot win your confidence if they overcharge for the service they render or the merchandise they sell because they realize that sooner or later the transaction will not be satisfactory to you and when that time comes it will be difficult to induce you to trade with them again.

For this reason, we insist, you can buy to greater advantage here in Clanton. Your local merchant must be sure that you will be satisfied for months and years with the commodity he has sold you if he is to retain your good will.

Think it over, friends, and then we are confident you will realize that you can usually make better buys and secure more satisfactory service when you direct at least the major part of your buying to the stores of Clanton.

We cannot escape the conclusion that the taxpayers would do less bellyaching if the taxpayers would change their diet.

Public opinion, observes the old cynic, is an echo of some false statement that somebody uttered in public.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. HASKIN

A little boy of seven years of age came into the room where I was talking to his parents, and stood at his mother's chair. After a few moments of waiting he said: "Mother, can you see that I am any bigger. I had another one of those growing pains." His mother looked him over and said: "Why, son, you are growing. I never saw you so tall before." A smile played over his face and he left the room in delight. What cared he for growing pains if they made him a bigger boy. Thought I to myself; that boy's spirit should be the spirit of all people as they are growing a soul. In this life we are going to meet with all kinds of suffering and heartaches as we grow up into the finer state of living. Why should we lament and groan because of our suffering when we are growing a soul. Never allow your suffering "To get you down"; that is only growing pains.

In my travels up and down for a half a century I have seen the names of men written almost everywhere. I have seen them on sign boards, on rolling cars, on moving engines, on sailing planes. I have seen the names of men on things that we eat, things that we wear, on things that we ride, on the medicine that we take. This shows that men are doing something. It matters not what a man may think, or say, or do—he stamps it with his name. Should I have the right of choice where to write my name, I would not write it on a ship that sails the seas, I would not even write it on a church that calls men to God. I would go here and there and write my name on the hearts of folks. I would draw near to the man that works; I would be close to those who suffer; I would even mingle with those who are so careless, and there I would write my name on their hearts. It is far better to put your name into the heart of people than to write it on factories, or place it beside the highways.

We had a flower in a pot. It was a rare plant and it was most beautiful when it was in bloom. We made sure to water it every day, but once each week we would sit it under a faucet and drench it so that every grain of sand in the pot would be moist. Oliver Wendell Holmes said: "There is in my heart a most beautiful little plant known as reverence which needs to be watered every day, but it need not be drenched every Sabbath in devotion." Religion is an every day experience, but we stand in need of a special enrichment of the soul on every Sabbath day. He who fails to go to church every Sunday will find that the plant of his soul, the most beautiful plant of his life—is made to wither. The plant of reverence should have care and attention every day of the week, but on Sunday it needs to be drenched with the outpouring of God's spirit. If you think well of that plant of reverence in your heart, water it well every day and every Sabbath at the place where God's showers are falling.

A white boy was employed as Janitor in a bank building. One day while removing the papers from a waste basket he found a large roll of bills that had gotten there by some means. He took them and shoved them deep into his pocket and continued his work. He thought of how he could now send his invalid mother away for treatment, and with this in mind he ran home after work hours to tell her the good news. When he was nearing his home he had an overwhelming sense of guilt and he turned in his tracks and ran back to the bank with more speed than he had made going toward his mother. He walked into the office of the president and flung the roll of bills on his desk, and told his story. The president then asked him why he had brought them back. Here is what he said and I want you to study his reply: "Since, as long as I have to live I will have to live with myself and I do not want to live with a thief." Is it not true that many men and women today are living with mighty bad company when they are living with themselves. Before you do anything that is wrong, suppose that you think of having to live with yourself forever after you have done that thing. If you steal you have to live with a thief; if you curse you have to live with a profane swearer; if you commit adultery you have to live with that guilt.

While riding along the highway I came to this sign on a curve that impressed me. The sign read, "Furniture, good and bad, at Brown's." I studied that sign and after inquiry I found that Brown had good furniture and old furniture in his place of business. If the buyer wanted new furniture he could get it. If he wanted second-hand furniture Brown also had that for sale. So his sign was right; "Furniture—good and bad." In my travels here and there I have seen all kinds of folks. That furniture sign could be placed above the most family trees of which we are so proud. To be sure you are proud of your family and you take pride in studying your family tree, but just remember that this sign could be placed at the root of your tree: "Folk up this tree, good and bad." Just to be honest, I made the effort at one time to climb up my family tree and look around. I discovered several human beings who looked mighty like monkeys to me and so I came down and from that day to this I have not gone investigating in my family tree. The most of us have back of us and even with us, "Folks who are good and bad."

Cosby-Hodges Co.
Announces Plan
For Expansion

J. CHAPLINE HODGES
Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 1, 1937.—An aggressive program of expansions is being launched by Cosby-Hodges Milling Company, according to announcement today by J. Chapline Hodges, president. Controlling interest in the company has just been purchased by Mr. Hodges from the estate of the late W. M. Cosby, who founded the business in 1886.

New dealers are to be established in the company's present trade area and new markets for the company's well known line of flour, poultry and stock feeds are to be opened up at once.

The company will maintain a staff of specialists in feeding and raising of poultry, hogs and dairy herds.

The service of this staff of experts will be available without cost to all users of the company's products.

Cosby-Hodges is one of the oldest, yet most progressive, business firms in the South. W. M. Cosby, as it founder established a rigid policy of fair-dealing and high quality products, which has been adhered to strictly for now over 50 years. Mr. Hodges became connected with the company in its early days and always has been aggressive in following modern sales and advertising policies. It has been under his guidance that the company's trade names of Jazz Pultry and Stock Feeds, Mo-Biscuit and White Tulip Flour have become household words throughout the South.

Officers of the company, in addition to Mr. Hodges, president, are M. J.
Roberson, vice-president; R. C. Blanton, treasurer; and W. Cosby Hodges, secretary.

WILLIAM BAKER, AGE 75, DIED AT HIS HOME LAST SATURDAY

William Baker, age 75, died at his home at the Mill Village last Saturday morning. Funeral services were held Sunday morning at ten o'clock at Mountain Springs. Mr. Napoleon Jones conducted the services. Martin & Sons were in charge of burial.

He is survived by his widow, one son, 3 daughters, 22 grandchildren and one great grandchild. Pallbearers were Auburn Jones, Marvin Vines, Hugh Medlock, Jim Smitherman, Napoleon
Jones and Bud Estes.

SEVEN-POINT WOODLAND PROGRAM RECOMMENDED

Auburn, Ala.—Agricultural leaders outline a 7-point farm woodland program that any farmer can follow in making every part of his farm pay dividends and in controlling soil erosion. The program follows:

1. Keep stock out of the woods.
2. Confine annual cutting to a definite area of the farm woodland.
3. Make no large openings in the woods.
4. Favor the thriftiest, best-formed crop trees.
5. Remove some larger crop trees where crowding exists.
6. Cut inferior trees for wood.
7. Protect the woods against fire.

Poorly Nourished Women—They Just Can't Hold Up

Are you getting proper nourishment from your food, and restful sleep?

A poorly nourished body just can't hold up. And as for that run-down feeling, that nervous fatigue,—don't neglect it!

Cardui, for lack of appetite, poor digestion and nervous fatigue, has been recommended by mothers to daughters—women to women—for over fifty years.

Try it! Thousands of women testify Cardui helped them. Of course, if it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

NEW ATTACK PLANES ARE SPEEDIEST YET

U. S. Orders 392 Swift Death
Messengers.

Buffalo, N. Y.—America is fortifying in the air. Winged messengers of death and destruction, capable of speeds conservatively placed at better than five miles a minute, are being turned out here for the military. The Curtiss-Wright factory is a beehive of activity, with orders for 392 planes of different types for both the army and the navy.

Several types were tested here recently as the two military arms accepted them and sent them on to service squadrons. One tested was a twin-engined all metal attack plane which Harry Woodring, secretary of war, asserts is the fastest such in the world. A visiting army pilot who stood near by when the craft streaked by overhead, said:
"That's the fastest attack plane in the world, and there's no kidding about it."

Guns Fired Electrically.
The American ship is a mid-wing monoplane with a long tapering silvery fuselage. Its wheels retract as it speeds through the air with its two Cyclone 1,000 horse power engines at full throttle. It carries two men—the pilot in the front cockpit and the observer, or gunner, aft.

In the nose are implementations for four electrically fired machine guns.
As a defense against enemy planes there is a gunner in the rear cockpit. He has a gun mounted on a turret which he can swing into almost any direction.

Thirteen of these fast attack ships are being turned out rapidly for the army air corps.

Meanwhile this plant is turning out an order of 210 single seater P-36-A pursuit planes, having just been awarded the contract in the amount of $4,113,550 from the War department. These pursuit planes speed through the air like a bullet.

They are powered with double row Prait & Whitney Wasp engines of 1,050 horse power. Although the speed of these is a military secret, Secretary Woodring admits they fly at 300 miles an hour. It is estimated that they climb at better than 3,000 feet a minute.

Flies Nearly Straight Up.
Lieut. B. S. Kelsey of Wright field was flying one here recently that shot almost straight up into the air until it was out of sight in a few minutes.
Lieutenant Kelsey, who is one of the army's crack test pilots, ripped through the clouds and then dove earthward, only to stand the ship on its tail again and zoom up to a low hanging cloud bank.

Another plane seen in flight was a new navy scout bomber. It is a single motored biplane for use on the navy's aircraft carriers. It has the conventional arresting gear for short landings on the carrier decks.
It has machine guns firing through the propeller arc and carries a load of bombs which can be dropped on a target while in a vertical dive.

$1,000,000 Trust Fund
Given to Fight Diabetes

Pittsburgh, Pa.—A woman who nursed a brother afflicted with diabetes for 20 years gave $1,000,000 recently for a "never-ending medical war" against the disease in children.

Miss Emelie Renziehausen placed the money in an irrevocable trust fund as a memorial to two dead bachelor brothers, Frederick C. who once owned the Large Distilling company, and Henry, a dry-goods dealer in suburban McKeesport.

The income will be used by the Children's hospital of Pittsburgh for establishment of a "Renziehausen memorial ward and clinic" and for perpetual research into the disease.

Miss Renziehausen also gave an 11-acre tract of land to be used as a site for a home for convalescent children.

Emeralds to Be Mined in Salzburg Mountains

Vienna, Austria.—Europe's only emerald mine, Habachtal, 7,000 feet high up in the Salzburg mountains, will be put in operation again soon.

Its owners, Schaffhausen & Co., have engaged ten workers to drive a new gallery into the mountain. If pure emerald crystals are found in the gallery, work will be resumed on a large scale.

Habachtal was operated during the Eighteenth and Nineteenth centuries by various companies, including a British firm, which is said to have exported most of the gems to India. Crystals with a diameter of up to one inch were found in Ha-bachtal. They were of beautiful dark green color, but lacked transparency.

FARMERS MAKE PLANS FOR BETTER PASTURES NEXT SUM.

Taking time by the forelock, farmers cooperating with the Soil Conservation Service area near Clanton are making plans now for better pastures next summer by building contour furrows to store moisture and conserve soil during winter and spring rains, according to Mr. James H. Wood, Camp Superintendent.

As soon as winter crops are planted, cooperators will begin laying off contour lines and constructing contour furrows. Following the demonstration furrows, they are finding that it is better to improve a few acres each year, and do the job well, until a good sod has been established on all their pasture acreage, Mr. Wood said.

Beginning with the best available pasture land, contour lines are laid off just like terrace lines, except that they are level. Between those lines, furrows are laid off much the same as corn rows, starting at the upper side and constructing the furrows downhill parallel to the line until the middle of the narrowest point in the interval is reached. Then furrows are laid off uphill from the line below and short furrows are put in just like laying off rows for row crops, he explained.

Two back furrows are constructed with a turn plow, leaving a balk 8 or 12 inches wide, which is broken out with a disc harrow or other suitable farm equipment that will leave some soil in the bottom of the furrow and distribute some on the sides to provide a good seed bed.

Further information on constructing contour furrows, seeding recommendations, requirements for proper first-year grazing, and weed control to establish a sod which will control erosion and provide good grazing can be obtained from Mr. James H. Wood, Camp Superintendent, or County Agent J. W. Fant.

Joseph Dagan of Cardiff, reputed to be worth $300,000, was arrested for stealing a bicycle.

The old name for a tomato is "love-apple."

FARMERS ARE PLANTING MORE LEGUMES THAN EVER

Auburn, Ala.—Alabama farmers this year planting more winter legumes for soil improvement and for grazing than ever before, according to numerous reports reaching P. O. director, Alabama Extension Service.

Typical of many of the reports is that Mr. Davis are: "Concubus farmers are this year increasing plantings of winter legumes about per cent over the acreage planted in 1936. About 300,000 pounds of are being planted in this county this year."—T. P. Whitten, county agent.

Limestone County farmers are planting about twice as many vetch this year as last year and about times as many crimson clover seeds.

G. B. Phillips, county agent, reports that hairy vetch is being planted on 10,000 acres in the county this year, compared with 4,000 acres last year, while about 2,500 acres are seeded to crimson clover this year, compared with 1,000 acres last year.

Ring and Brymer, London, Ga. have served every lord mayor of quiet since 1696.

Did you ever hear about the lady who submitted all the recipes in the contest and then ed home to get some ham and for dinner?

Miss Mary Ellis Becomes Bride Of Raymond C. Smith On Tuesday Afternoon Of This Week

A marriage of wide interest throughout the state took place Tuesday afternoon, at five o'clock when Miss Mary Ellis, of Clanton, became the bride of Mr. Raymond C. Smith, also of Clanton, at a simple yet beautiful ceremony at the Clanton Baptist Church, with Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the church, performing the ceremony.

The church was appropriately decorated and presented a beautiful background for the ceremony. To the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, the bride entered on the arm of her eldest brother, Latham Ellis, of Birmingham, by whom she was given in marriage. She was charming in white satin fashioned on princess lines with train and short veil and carried a colonial bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley, tied with wide satin ribbon.

Maid of honor was Miss Mamie Middleton, of Birmingham, and a niece of the bride. She wore royal blue velvet, turned with tiny illusion veil to match and carried a bouquet of souvenir roses. Mrs. Cecil Smith, of Lakeland, Fla., was matron of honor and wore plum velvet with turban and veil to match. She carried a bouquet of souvenir roses.

Bridesmaids were Miss Marian Moody, of Scottsboro, and Miss Viola Vail, of Mobile. Miss Moody wore wine velvet. Miss Vail wore gold velvet, both carrying talisman roses. Their turbans with tiny illusion veils matched. Little Betty Ellis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ellis, of Montgomery, served as flower girl and was charming in coral taffeta carrying a tiny colonial bouquet.

Miss Beverly Hester, of Clanton, and Marion, was at the piano during the entire ceremony, playing Lohengrin's Wedding March for the entrance of the bride and Mendelssohn's following the ceremony.

Mrs. W. L. Longshore, of Birmingham, rendered two violin selections, accompanied by Miss Hester. She played "O Thy Sublime Sweet Evening Star" by Wagoner and "Leibstraum" by Liszt.

Mrs. Henry Stanley, of Clanton sang "I Love Thee" and "Silent As Night" accompanied by Miss Hester. Miss Kathryn Foss, of Thorsby, sang "Devotion" by Shumann.

The groom was attended as best man by his brother, Cecil B. Smith, of Lakeland, Fla. Ushers were Erle Ellis, brother of the bride, Dr. J. S. Gowan, Edwin Mullins and Dr. Charles Moore, all of Clanton.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Ellis, one of Clanton's most popular and charming young ladies. She attended high school here and is a graduate of Huntingdon College and has been associated with welfare work and work among underprivileged children since leaving college. She is a musician of note and comes from one of the most prominent families of this section.

The groom is one of the outstanding young attorneys of Clanton, having completed his law studies at the University and other colleges, he entered into partnership with his father, the late A. C. Smith, who was before his death several years ago, a leading attorney and counsellor of the state.

Following the wedding ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a small reception at the home. After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Smith will be at home at 315 Pueblo, Beacon Hills, Lakeland, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Conway had as their guest during the week end Mrs. Conway's mother, Mrs. Wood, from Calera.

Clanton Methodist Church

Were you ever just so delighted or thrilled and happy because of something and you wanted to tell all about it and yet every way you could think to express it seemed quite inadequate? That is just how we feel about our Sunday School and preaching services of last Sunday. We had the best attendance at each that we have had in a long, long time. The full line of teachers at Sunday School--and wasn't it a good Sunday School lesson! As announced last week, the Sunday School offering was to go to the Orphanage. The offering was the largest we have ever had to send to the orphanage. In behalf of the orphanage, we thank every contributor and know you will each be blessed.

Our choir was most excellent last Sunday. We've never enjoyed it more. We are grateful to you, our members, for the music last Sunday and trust you will henceforth be the wonderful inspiration to the preaching services that you were last Sunday. Our preacher never preached greater than he did last Sunday. His sermons went right to our hearts and we hope he realizes we do appreciate his soul-stirring messages.

Let's be back next Sunday in the same force, service, and in even more numbers than last Sunday.

Newcomers to town, we have a Sunday School class you will enjoy, and we most cordially invite you to join us in Sunday School at 9:45 A.M., and at preaching services at 11:00 A.M. and 7:00 P.M.

Y.W.A. HOLDS BUSINESS MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

Mary Frances Duke and Eloise Gray were hostesses Monday night to the Y.W.A. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Grady Heflin.

The devotional was read at the beginning of the meeting by the president, Gertrude Fiquette. Plans were discussed for a package sale at the next meeting of the Y.W.A. Plans were also discussed for the Annual Christmas party.

Miss Fiquette gave an interesting talk.

Circle No. 5 of the Clanton Baptist Church served a delicious plate with coffee, to the following members:

Frances Moore, Willie Maude Kelley, Dorothy Manning, Funa Powell, Sarah Mullins, Mary Charles Larimore, Judy McDaniel, Elizabeth Coburn, Thelma White, Gertrude Fiquette, Mrs. Renfro Mullins, Eloise Gray and Mary Frances Duke.

Mrs. Sam Cope and children and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Glasscock and daughter spent Sunday afternoon in Troy.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Warr and children of Luverne were week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Horton Walker.

Mr. Julian Evans spent Sunday in Birmingham with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mahan and children have moved to Tuscaloosa where they will make their home.

Mrs. John Riley and son, Joe, of Maryland, were visitors of her son, Mr. Floyd Dorsey, last week.

Take A Tip From Daughter

Daughter loved the Le Cant Corsetette she got from us and couldn't wait to bring Mother in, so we could give her "the works!" After we finished with Mother, one of her friends told her she didn't recognize her from the rear--she looked so much slimmer! That's what "TwoWay-OneWay" Le Cant can do for you--it's a veritable "bulge mask." You can have a Corsetette, or a girdle with A'lure bra.

Day by Day in Every Way, It's Getting Better & Better

He ended with the question directed at Standing Cloud and the old chief rose quickly to his feet, amidst a rowing tumult of voices. Black Beaver was up, as well, and crying to be heard, but with a majestic, silencing stare, Standing Cloud stayed him and checked the confusion of voices.

"The little trader has spoken," he cried. "The little trader has said he will do things which we can see with our own eyes. If the Black Beaver's medicine is greater than Black Beaver's will we not be pleased to see it, they would be pleased to see it, in my children?"

Dead cries of approval resounded. Short huzzas followed. Rodney declared that he would start at dawn, so all might see, and turned to watch Rickman speak slowly and energetically with Black Beaver, urging the magician to some further strategy.

CHAPTER VII

Night again, and Rodney Shaw made his simple camp beside the headwaters of the Laughing Musquash.

Camp, for him, meant a fire and a cleared place in which to lay his blanket. Not to lay his body. Just the blanket. A blanket spread half upon the ground and mounded up with branches to the size of a man's body and the balance spread across this hummock which would appear to vengeful eyes in the faint glow from embers as the figure of a man asleep.

While he smoked in triumph with the old men last night, he had watched Burke Rickman's face. He had seen the man stalk, finally, to his canoe with defeat gnawing at his pride. And he knew what to expect.

Fine opportunity, this, for a trader outgeneraled as Rickman had been! A chance for the attainment of a triple objective with a single blow. With Shaw gone, vengeance would be his, trade would be secure for the company beyond any possible challenge, and with Shaw unreturned from this errand into Windigo country, the influence of Black Beaver, already bought and paid for by Burke Rickman, would never again in that generation be questioned.

Just before sundown Rodney came to the deposit of white clay. He filled the square of sheeting he had brought with him, bound it to a package with thongs, and, in the last of daylight, made his camp which was to be no camp.

At some little distance, back against the bole of a tree, flintlock across his knees, he sat down to await what he told himself might be the most momentous interval of his life.

Rodney, even with the conviction that his life would be sought before dawn, dozed; wakened; dozed . . . wakened again with a start.

No sound, and yet an awareness of near danger spread through him like fire. He felt the skin of his back creeping and softly, slowly, making not the slightest rustle, he rose to his feet, rifle at ready.

His camp fire still glowed. He could see, from where he stood, the blanket folded over its deceptive pile of boughs. But not a sound. . . .

And then suddenly a man stood before him, an outline of darkness against darkness. Vague, indistinct, unreal.

But the click of a hammer was not unreal! It was like a shot itself in contrast to the silence of the night and Rodney could discern then a kneeling figure strained forward and the faint gleam of light from the embers was caught on the barrel of a rifle as it swung into position.

He went blind with rage for an instant and heard himself cry out as the other rifle cracked and he fired blindly, wildly and knew he had missed when a gun clattered to rock and the vague figure swayed and lunged toward him.

He threw himself forward, grappling for the man's throat. A fist bashed into his mouth, throwing him to one side. He floundered to his knees and grappled again. His hand clutched Rickman's powder horn and jerked it loose and dropped it as he swung on better hold.

Rickman hurled himself on Rodney, bearing him down, and they rolled on the ledge. Fingers had Shaw's throat, now, holding him briefly while the other hand rummaged for a knife. But Rodney shook off the grip and prisoned the fumbling hand; rolled over; was free. Shaw worked a hip against his hip. Rickman's, a hip against his hip. One hand over a shoulder and on the throat, the other encircling the man's waist, he heaved with all his strength and slowly his enemy yielded, fighting the leverage, making ragged sounds.

But he could not break the hold, could not stand against it. He did twist from Shaw's grip as he fell, though, and went sideways and down, over the rim of the ledge, disappearing from sight as Shaw poised to spring.

With a cry Rickman struck the water and Rodney, teetering on the edge, strained his eyes to mark the place where he would emerge. He heard, but could not see. The man gasped hoarsely as he came up but he began to swim at once.

Seconds passed for Shaw, dragging out painfully as the fear that the man would escape him became manifest.

"You wolverine!" he cried. "You dog, Rickman! . . . While a man sleeps, Rev. L. Stanley, Miss Lois Townsley, Miss Margaret Davis, Margaret Goslin, Ouida Wright and Richard Petersen attended the District C.E. Convention held at Blackwoods Congregational Church near Headland the past week end.

Mr. George Herbert Nix of Maxwell Field spent the week end here with friends.

Miss Estelle Benson of Collins Chapel spent Sunday with Miss Hilma Collins.

Mr. and Mrs. David Vines and children, Mr. Fate Vines and Miss Gertrude Davis spent Sunday in Montgomery with Mr. and Mrs. Luther Vines.

Basile and others brought goods, the debts were accepted. Tobacco was passed but Shaw shook his head firmly at requests for whiskey. When the trading was finished, whiskey would again be passed; not before.

For days this procedure was routine. For hours at a time Rodney sat on the floor of his trading room, bargaining, arguing.

"Net thread, my brother?" he might say. "Four plus of net thread. That is all. The ball of thread is the skin. Skin for skin. Or."

"No, Zhing-wauk. No spirits. No more than the taste when we end our trading. At the grand medicine I will give my brothers plenty. Not before."

After the fifth day following Basile's arrival, few hunters remained near the establishment and Rodney's men were busied with preparing the place for the rigorous seasons to follow. But some Indians remained nearby and among these was the Weasel, once ejected from the post but, in this period of Shaw's good will toward the band as a whole, tolerated within the stockade.

Local Store Has Grown In Size And Popularity Since Opening In Clanton One Year Ago; Brothers Express Their Appreciation

This week marks the first anniversary of the store of Levine Brothers, and during the past year this store has grown to huge proportions in their line of merchandise.

The Messrs. Levine opened their store here on a scale smaller than it is and through their congeniality, high quality merchandise and low prices, have built up a store that is one of the most widely known in the county.

Their first anniversary is not marked with any sale, but they simply say "This is to be a celebration, and not what one would call a sale. We want the people of this section to come in and help us celebrate our first birthday in business in Clanton."

"At this time, too, we want to express our deep feeling of appreciation for the splendid business we have enjoyed during the past year. It has gone beyond our expectations, and we have endeavored to show our appreciation throughout the past months by offering high quality merchandise at the lowest possible prices," the Messrs. Levine said to the News.

Levine Brothers handle a complete line of dry goods of all kinds, shoes, clothing, etc. They also carry a large stock of five and ten cent merchandise which has proven popular with their thousands of customers.

Advertisements in the News this week from Levine Brothers merely state "Don't Fail To See Our Windows Next Saturday."

Fathers, mothers, and citizens of America visit your schools during American Education Week, November 7-13, 1937. Next to the home itself, the school is your greatest ally in helping to prepare your children to take their places in the world. During this week, let us thank God for schools and for a country where all may learn to think for themselves and then have the freedom of intelligent self-directing citizenship. Government by dictatorship is repugnant to the American spirit. Such government will never be needed in America so long as we have an intelligent, responsible citizenry. Such a citizenship is the great product of our schools—the reason why education is so important in the United States. Visit your school and help to make it better.

WITH YOUR HOME Demonstration Agent CONDUCTED BY MISS META GRACE

The month of October has been spent in organizing 13 4-H Clubs with a new membership of 553 and holding 12 Home demonstration club meetings on the "Family Food Supply" with 161 present.

Various conferences have been held which follows:

1. A committee from Fairview, Baker and Mt. Pleasant clubs planning joint Halloween festival.

2. Three conferences have been held with the County Council President.

3. Two conferences have been attended with the Probate Judge and Commissioners.

4. One conference has been held with the program committee of the County Council of various County Departments.

5. A conference has been held with the social committee of the County Council of the various Departments.

6. A conference has been held with Miss Warr, the Alabama Power Company Economist.

A conference has been held with the State Health Department condering the district health contest and in connection with this a luncheon was attended by the health contestants and officials of the latter department.

8. A Halloween Festival was held jointly by three clubs and assisted by the Home Agent on Friday before Halloween.

9. The Teachers Institute was visited and a short talk was made concerning the program of work to be given during the year in the schools.

Major Projects—Foods—Women's Work

12 clubs met during the month with 161 ladies present and the demonstration was held on "Family Food Supply."

The "Family Food Supply" was also given by the Foods Specialist Miss Helen Kennedy, including simplified facts on the importance of keeping "Food Budget," making and going by a "Banning Budget," "Work Sheet" to calculate the amount and kind of food needed by each woman's family for each year.

A "Table of Average Weights" was studied which gave approximate weights of various commodities given in the foods budget. An "Inventory of the Storeroom" was discussed and records in each farm home was stressed. "Special Farm Menus" were discussed and last but not least a total amount of foods needed by each leaders family was determined and discussed according to the requirements for the family needs.

Thorsby Club Manifests Much Interest

The ladies of the Thorsby Club became so interested in the "Family Food Supply" which was given them at the Leadership School that they figured the exact amount of foods per person from the approximate quantity as given from their booklet and it was found from the results that the estimate was not high but an average amount stated. Several of the members what they produced at home accorders said they would keep records of ing to the market prices and also the amount of food that was bought for the family.

Each of the ladies clubs pronounced much interest in this lesson and agreed that it made them think in terms of greater varieties needed in their daily menus.

The Shoults club remarked, "This lesson was the weakness of our community." "We are short on fruits," and each lady resolved to get the consent and good will of her husband and plant trees of fruits, figs and grapes.

Halloween Festival

The Fairview, Mt. Pleasant and Baker Schools were joint hostesses in holding a Halloween festival for the benefit of their community, which was an outstanding community social.

The spookiest arrangements imaginable greeted the quest. The ghost met them at the front and they were guided throughout the building by the witches. First you were entertained by seeing the sights as the "Chamber of Horrors," and booth after booth of surprises and wonderment after which tortures were told and eating to your hearts content of home made candy, pop corn balls, peanuts, etc.

A special attraction was a program consisting of the Liberty Hill Quartet and special string music arrangements by local entertainers. An imitation of Charlie Chaplin and "Cake Walker" was included. At least 150 or 200 people attended the festival, both little young, and old, and among the giggles that went around and again was "Club women, entertain us again." Several dollars were added to the club treasury.

Foods—4-H Girls—Major Project

13 clubs, including Baker, Mt. Pleasant, Collins Chapel, Vermont, Maplesville, Stanton, Thorsby, Thomas Jr., Cooper, Verbena, Concord, Enterprise and Union Grove have been organized with five hundred and fifty-five enrolled, with prospects of more being added next month.

The Maplesville club was so large that the club will have to be divided into a Junior and Senior Club.

At each meeting a demonstration was held on "Parliamentary Rules and Procedures" for the benefit of new officers and leaders. The duty of each officer and leader was clearly explained. A plan is being developed whereby each club is to be responsible for its own discipline and any person openly violating this agreement must apologize either to the Board of Directors of the Home Agent, if held in the "A" Class.

The program of work for the year was discussed, scrap books were discussed, and the special news bulletin showing "Who's Who in Alabama 4-H Club Work" was studied showing the pictures of the State Leaders, Miss Elizabeth DeLooney, Mr. L. L. Self, Dad Sims, Mr. L. O. Brackeen and Director P. O. Davis.

The new club songs learned the previous year were sung and "Alabama was sung to the new tune at this meeting.

The 4-H County Council officers stressed the making of year books for each club and special samples of the year books have been run and are being given to the clubs to add their own club year book as a section of their County Council Year Book which helps the girls to keep up with both the clubs and the County Council.

The Clubs appointed special program committees to give 10 minutes program on Thanksgiving or current events at their November club meeting.

The County Council President, Miss Helen Patterson, suggests that a joint meeting be held by both boys and girls in December. This plan will be followed by the 4-H Club Leader, Mr. B. N. Ivey, and the Home Agent.

Minor Project—Gardening—Women's Work

11 clubs discussed the fall garden program along with their family food supply. Fall vegetables were studied by these clubs.

Orchards—Minor Project—Women's Work

5 clubs, including Shoults, Minooka, Mt. Pleasant, Verbena and Mt. Creek decided they were short on orchard products and along with the foods program now being studied they would add new fruits to their orchards during the year.

19 homes have been visited during spare hours between club meetings and on Mondays, getting acquainted with new people and visiting those who need special attention on various problems. 16 other meetings were held in relation to the projects at the Teachers Institute, the Health Contest, the Leadership School, the Halloween Festival. At these various meetings an attendance of 352 were present.

PROGRAM WILL OPEN WITH BIG HOTEL BANQUET

Thomason Hotel Is Headquarters; Prominent Members Coming

Clanton and members of the Pilot Club of Clanton will play hosts to the District Convention of Pilot International on Saturday night and Sunday of this week, with delegates from five outstanding Pilot Clubs of the state attending. Among them will be Hester M. Bingham, charming president of Pilot International; Jennie F. Brown, secretary of Pilot International, both from Tuscaloosa; Martha Aldridge, district governor, of Selma, and others.

The Thomason Hotel will be convention headquarters, the opening to be in the form of a brilliant banquet and dance Saturday night at the hotel. Miss Gertrude Fiquette, president of the Clanton Pilot Club, will preside and give the welcome address at the banquet. The dance will follow, with the visiting Pilots having local young men as escorts.

Program
Miss Nolen Meroney, of Clanton, will give invocation at the banquet. This will be followed by introduction of guests. Response to the welcome address will be given by Ruth Wallis, of the Selma Club. Hester Bingham, International president will make a talk. Little Miss Susan Powers, of Lay Dam, will give one of her popular dances at the banquet. This will be followed by a violin solo by Mrs. Jatie Longshore, of Birmingham.

"True Course Ever," will be rendered, in true Pilot style by Martha Aldridge, district governor and followed by a vocal number by Hortense Glasscock, of Clanton. Mrs. Lucy Parnell, of Maplesville, will render several piano selections to be followed by a

Convening Of Congress To Prevent His Visiting All Of County

"To My Friends, The Citizens of the Sixth District:

"I have thoroughly enjoyed my work this year and am gratified to feel that it has been my good fortune to get a good start as your Representative in Congress. There is much to do and my entire time has been devoted to the performance of these duties. I shall remain so occupied.

"Throughout the year I have looked forward with pleasurable anticipation to spending at least several months in our District this Fall, during which time I sincerely hoped it would be my privilege to see each of you. Unfortunately, between the late adjournment of the First Session and the Special Session which convenes Monday, very little time has been available for this purpose and I have been denied the pleasure of seeing many of you, although I have visited every County in the District and practically every town.

"While I sincerely regret that the very limited available time required me to cover the District so rapidly that I was denied the pleasure of seeing many of my friends, I am naturally quite anxious to contribute anything

Mrs. Louise Higgins underwent an operation at Highland Hospital and is doing nicely.

WELCOME PILOTS

"The City of Clanton is indeed proud to welcome members of Pilot International to their district convention his week. We are proud of our growing city and want to make each of you feel that if there is anything we can furnish you to make your stay here more enjoyable, you have only to call on us.

"It is customary for the keys to a city to be given visitors of prominence and I feel, on behalf of the City of Clanton, that on this occasion, the keys of the city belong to you Pilots during your convention.

"Clanton is your city, and we hope your convention is a success. We welcome you and invite you to come back to see us."

Sincerely,

C. FENN JONES.

Mayor, City of Clanton.

Local CCC Camp Gets New Officers

The local CCC camp had a recent change in officers in charge of the camp. Captain Raymond E. Ford has replaced Lt. Shier as Commanding Officer; Lt. Shier's tour having expired. Captain Ellis Sylvester has replaced Lt. Paul J. Brown, who has been transferred to Ashland, Ala. Lt. James M. Campbell of the Selma Company has succeeded Dr. Golden as Camp Surgeon. Lt. Golden was also transferred to Ashland. Lt. Campbell will serve both the Selma and Clanton Camp.

The personnel of the camp feels very fortunate in having such men in charge. Captain Ford is a lawyer by profession from Fort Pierce, Fla., and Captain Sylvester is a former Supt. of schools from Pascagoula, Miss.

The loss of Dr. William C. Golden will be regretted by his many friends in Clanton as well as in the camp.

Captain Ford and his family will make their home at Mrs. Tom Parrish's home while she is in Birmingham.

Captain Sylvester and his family will reside at Horton Walker's home on the Selma Highway.

DR. W.C. GOLDEN TO OPEN OFFICE IN CLANTON SOON

Clanton has another physician in the person of Dr. W. C. Golden, who stated this week he intended opening an office in Clanton just as soon as a suitable location could be found.

Dr. Golden is not a newcomer to Clanton. He has been doing private practice here for the past two years, having been connected with the local CCC Camp during that time. He stated that until he could locate a downtown office he would use his home for calls, etc., from his patients. During his stay in Clanton, Dr. Golden has made many friends who are glad to learn that he will remain here.

UNEMPLOYMENT CENSUS STARTS THIS COUNTY

Public Urged To Cooperate
In Government Step
To Aid Jobless

The job of taking a census of the employed and partially employed in Clanton County on November 16. The Clanton Post Office distribute blanks in every home in the city and the rural carriers will that one reaches every rural home.

This is to be a nation-wide census of employment and is being taken in the direction of President Roosevelt and by the authority of an act of congress.

If you are not working or if you are partially employed you are asked to fill out one of these blanks and mail it to the post office immediately. All information thus collected will be assembled and forwarded to Washington immediately.

Postmaster H. F. Downs urges the cooperation of all the citizens of Clanton and Chilton County in making this census a complete success. No late figures are available at the time as to the actual number persons out of work or who are partially employed.

This census, the purpose of which is to secure an actual picture of unemployment conditions in the United States, will be conducted by the distribution of report cards to the 31,000 American homes on November 17. It is intended that the unemployed and partly unemployed fill these cards and return them to the local postmaster by midnight November 20.

This census has been found necessary in order to ascertain an accurate picture of the unemployed; their geographical distribution; reasons for unemployment; trades and work most affected; and provide data for a scientific approach to this national problem. Following the completion of this census, the following will be conducted:

Radio Cowboys Will Be In Clanton Soon

Frank Penny comes to Clanton on Friday night of this week to present "The Radio Cowboys" at the courthouse, with the program beginning at seven-thirty o'clock. This presentation is being sponsored under auspices of the Liberty Hill B.Y.F. and the church.

Weldon Bennett, the ace fiddler of the band, Carl Stewart, master of all instruments, Julian Atkins, the south's best singing sensation with Louis West as master of all ceremonies, these entertainers are radio, stage recording artists and Clanton is fortunate in being able to have them here in person. Remember the Saturday night of this week at courthouse.

What Kind Of People Live Around Here

It was in the early days when the present mid-west was considered the American frontier. Men with their families were moving by flatboat and prairie schooner toward the setting sun.

A settler who had grown wise with years of experience and observation of life was standing in the doorway of his newly erected cabin contemplating the livid beauty of a sunset.

A wagon occupied by a family and miscellaneous household effects came to a halt in front and the driver hailed the old gentleman.

"What kind of people live around here? I've come over 500 miles with my family and I'm figuring on staking out a claim somewhere around here but I want to know what sort of folks live here now."

"Stranger," answered the old settler, "what kind of folks lived where you came from?"

"Oh, they were rather a mean lot. Not very friendly. Didn't seem like they were willing to help a fellow out. They never did co-operate very well."

"Well, stranger," interrupted the old settler, "that's just about the kind of folks you'll find around here, I reckon."

Before this wagon was then beyond the horizon, another appeared, and the old gentleman standing in his doorway was asked the same questions.

"Well, stranger," he queried, "what kind of folks was they where you came from?"

A wonderful lot of friendly folks," said the driver with enthusiasm. "They was kind and helpful and so easy to get along with. Yes Sir, I had a lot of mighty good friends I hated to leave, but I thought there was bigger chances to get up in the world if I'd come out here."

What a wise old philosopher the old settler was. Life, people, communities are much the same everywhere. What we see in each is largely a reflection of our own attitude and our own character.

When we hear people say, "Yes, but Clanton is different. I don't think much of the people around here. I'm going to get out of here as soon as I get a chance," we recall this interesting anecdote and come to the conclusion that these people will encounter just about the same sort of folks anywhere else they may choose to go.

Your community is made up of average, typical people. It's going to reflect your own attitude. It's going to be just what you make of it.

O-O-O

Too Late

About three months from now we are going to hear a lot of kicks 'about taxes here in Chilton County. We always do and we see no reason why there should be any exception this year.

But when those kicks are made it is too late to do anything about the subjects. Budget here in the community and county are made up this fall. The time to register your kick is when the budget is adopted and the levy made.

But even then it is too late to accomplish much. A little investigation will disclose the fact that you must really go back to election time. Because whether or not your local taxes are determined in a considerable measure by what our state government decides to do in the way of providing social services for the people, partially or wholly at the expense of the counties, villages and cities.

There must be a lot of serious study of the subject on the part of the public before very much can be done about high taxes. Certainly there is little benefit in registering a kick when the tax bill arrives.

Here's To The Men In The Line

The other day we listened to a radio announcer telling play by play the story of a particularly colorful football game. It was a thrilling and exciting story he offered, but if we were not slightly familiar with the nature of the game we might easily conclude that a football team consists only of a few fast halfbacks and a couple of nimble ends.

He told of the man who picked passes out of the air and raced across the goal line. He talked about the magnificent end runs and spinner plays on which the ball carriers gathered yardage for their teams.

But there was little said about those stalwart men in the line who opened holes through which the backfield men raced for their spectacular runs. There was little mention of the work of blocking backs who formed walls of interference for the ball carriers. There was scant reference to the defensive work of the team which offered such a thrilling and spectacular performance for the entertainment of spectators.

But we have long observed that the greatest backfield runner ever known in the sport could never get far beyond the scrimmage line if it weren't for the work of the ten other men on the team. We have been forced to realize by watching many teams in action that team play is what counts, that the center, the guards and he tackles are mighty important in football, but alas they rarely get any credit for what they do except from a few of the close observers of the game who are familiar with its intricacy.

And what's true in football is true in many other things as well. It's not the fault of the radio announcer or the news writer that the man who carries the ball gets most of the applause and approval. It's almost impossible to single out other individuals outand give them special recognition for what they have done. Neither is it possible to give individual credit to every person who assists in a community enterprise for example. It is just in the nature of things that the chairman of the committees and the leader of the program appear most prominently when public recognition of an accomplishment is extended.

It is well to consider, however, the way that publicity and recognition just naturally go to the spectacular players and extend a word of appreciation to all the centers and guards and tackles in this world who often do more than their part with little hope or chance of receiving public acclaim.

O-O-O

That 101st Blow

An anecdote was called to our attention recently which seems significant in its application to most of the affairs of men. Said a great social worker, Jacob Riis, who sought to acquaint people with the evil influence of city slums. "Sometimes when I get discouraged in my efforts to arouse people to the danger and evils of the thing against which I am campaigning I go and look at a stone cutter hammering away at his rock, perhaps a hundred times without so much as a crack showing in it. Yet at the 101st blow it will split in two, and I know it was not that blow that did it, but all that had gone before."

In your own private business this anecdote applies admirably. You try many things; you adopt sound policies and carry them out; you employ the best of equipment and the latest technique, but nothing seems to help very much. Then some day everything takes a turn for the better. Your advertising pulls in a phenomenal manner. The modern methods of merchandise display seem to appeal to the buying public. Your good sound policies bring reward you have hoped and dreamed about.

But all the good things you did for months or maybe years contribute to the final success. It wasn't the last blow but the hundred that went before it which contributed toward your personal success.

The same thought applies to community effort as well. Many enterprises in which you have taken an active part seem to produce little direct benefit. At times you begin to wonder if all you have done is worth the effort; if results will ever be realized; if the improvement, the change, or the development you have visualized and endeavored to make others visualize will ever come to reality. And then everything takes a turn for the better. Suddenly, amazing results reward your efforts.

And then you realize that it wasn't the 101st blow alone that split the stone but the 100 preceding blows that led to the final achievement of the desired result.

O-O-O

Anyway there's no good reason to ridicule the fall hats. It's almost time for the spring models.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

In story form we are told of an Artist who devoted many weeks to the painting of a picture of his wife who had died. The picture that he was painting showed her sitting in a swing in her flower garden. The painter grew tired and fell asleep in his chair as he studied the features of the one whom he loved and missed so much. While he slept the woman in the picture stepped down from the easel and walked across the distance to her husband and placed her hands upon his shoulder with her former devotion. The Artist felt her presence so distinctly that he moved to welcome her and then awoke from his dream. It was only a dream but for a moment that husband felt that his wife had come to him out of the picture. Many a time do we look at the face of the Christ in a beautiful picture. If we are laboring for Him; if we are giving to Him our very best we should give to Him down from that picture and give to us His own presence. Christ has the power to step out of history and to come down from the picture and live within.

* * *

An old sailor of the sea was asked how long he felt safe when his ship was traveling in a storm. The old man of much experience replied: "I never fear a storm as long as the captain is calm, and as long as the engine room is dry, and the motors are throbbing in their usual way. When this is the condition in the ship she will ride out of any storm." What a wonderful blessing in life is a calm soul. The man who can be calm when the waves are high and when the wind beats in fury, is the proud owner of a power that will ride the storm. The most of us will sooner or later find ourselves in a storm that beats with fury. We need have no fears as long as we can remain calm within. As long as we can have an unshaken faith and as long as we can say to ourselves "Peace be still" we can ride through any storm. The ship gets into trouble when its captain loses his calmness and the engine room is filled with water. The secret of riding the storms of life is to be found within.

I have never prided myself as a swimmer. I can swim with many different strokes, but I have never won any honors as a swimmer. I do feel a sense of pride, however, in my ability to float. I saw others doing this in the waters of the Gulf, but for a long time this was a lost art to me. Then one day I decided that if others could float I could too. In my efforts to learn I went under many times. I fought the water and feared it with all my heart. At last I discovered the art of floating and this came to me after I learned to relax and to trust the water to hold me up. I had no fear that it would pull me under and in perfect faith I trusted myself to the water to bear me up and it did that very thing. I became conscious of a power beneath me that was vast and wonderful. After learning this art I could recline on the water with almost as much ease as I could on a bed. In that same manner do we learn to trust in God. When we cease to fear and learn to love, when we relax ourselves and release our doubts and then place our trust in God, we can feel the Everlasting arms about us to bear us up. The art of learning how to float in the waters of the Gulf is to relax and trust the water. The art of living a peaceful happy life of trust and faith is to relax and give yourself entirely over to God. Trust in God and He will bear thee up.

Well do I remember the days of long ago when four brothers had much sport and fun in search of game. After supper at our country home we would light our torches, call our dogs and blow our horns. All understood that we were off to the woods for game. So off they went, the trusty hound of them all would open up a hot trail. In a few minutes he would be barking up a large oak or a tall poplar on the hillside. With our torches we would shine around for a while and if we saw no eyes, we would gather about the trunk of the tree and begin to bury our ax in its body. After an hour of cutting the giant of the forest would come crashing to the ground. The dogs would catch a coon that would bring about twenty-five cents on the market. The tree that we had cut would bring on the market today not less than twenty dollars. The tree was worth fifty coons but what cared we for the tree, we were out for sport and fun. That same spirit is in the world today. Many a man will spend much time and effort on a fishing trip and come home with a few minnows. His day of fishing cost him ten dollars and he did not catch a dollar's worth of fish. After all, what is real life? Is it money? I still believe that we need to have a little fun.

Suppose that we divide our day and night into three eight-hour periods. Eight hours for sleep, eight hours for work and eight hours for play or recreation. Which period would you say was the most dangerous for the young life of your community? When our young people are fast asleep they are not in much danger if they are where they should be. There is quite a bit of danger when one is engaged in business, but the most dangerous period of the three is when they go out into pleasure. The danger signal—the red light, is hanging over the road

ARMISTICE DAY, 1937

Ten thousand ghostly soldiers rise and march in grand advance
Above the snow-white crosses on the poppy fields of France;
Ten thousand ghostly voices chant and echo this refrain—
"Preserve the Peace we fought for, or we all have died in vain."

ALABAMA YOUTHS GIVEN AMERICAN AWARDS FOR OUTSTANDING WORK

C. W. Wells, Jr. Joseph Pearson Lawrence Crawford

Ala., Nov. 10.—(Special)—Alabama boys—C. W. Wells, Jr., Joseph Pearson, Dixon's and Lawrence Crawford, Marion among the 75 young farmers and the American Farmer Degree National Convention of the Farmers of America held at Kansas City, Mo.

American Farmer Degree is the award that may be bestowed F.F.A. Recipients of this honor have completed successfully three of high school work in Vocational Agriculture, supplemented by farm and community service and evidence of leadership. They previously have passed through three lower degrees in the organization, earned at least $500 in their project work, and have been leading in the state in cooperative and rural leadership. The state may submit applications only one American Farmer per members and the 120 applied received this year were forwarded to a total of 75 by a national F.F.A. constitutional convention went this year to boys in 33 of the territory of Hawaii.

C. W. Wells, Jr., a fourth-year student of Vocational Agriculture, is president of the Jemison F.F.A. Chapter. His four years of Vocational Agriculture, Wells has carried out an ongoing program of scientific farm enterprises. Among the projects in which Wells has demonstrated ability are home orchard, cotton, beef calves, meat hogs (sow and watermelons, and poultry. In addition to satisfactory conducting a program of supervised farming, Wells consistently won state and chapter awards. In 1935 he won prize in the state essay contest state prize in an essay contest sponsored by the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. A year later he was winner chapter public speaking contest placed second in the district contest. During this time Wells held the position of reporter for the Jemison F.F.A. and the Chilton County District was elected to the presidency of bodies, but resigned the Chilton County when he was elected president of the Alabama Association of Farmers of America. Wells is involved in all sports but has not allowed extra-curricular activities to interfere with his studies. His scholarship is high B, giving him the rank of 31 in a class of 31. He will graduate in a year with 20 credits at the age of 18.

FERTILIZER, FARM LABOR, EQUIPMENT MAY BE HIGHER

Auburn, Ala.—The level of prices of commodities and wage rates used in agricultural production probably will average a little higher during 1938 than in 1937, states the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics in summarizing next year's outlook for farm labor, equipment and fertilizer.

Farm wage rates have been advancing since 1933 and are expected to average somewhat higher in 1938 than in 1937. This advance in farm wage rates was greater than the rise in living costs and is likely to remain low relative to living costs in 1938.

Along with higher wage rates, farmers apparently will have to pay somewhat higher prices for farm machinery, automobiles, building materials, equipment and supplies, says the Bureau. Fertilizer prices also will be a little higher but advances in these prices are not expected to be as large as for other groups.

"On the other hand, the prices of feed, which represent an important proportion of the costs of many farmers, will be substantially lower than a year earlier at least in the first half of 1938. Seed prices, during the spring planting season, also will be considerably lower than in the spring of 1937," concludes the report.

Getting Full Benefit

Bro. Nix filled his regular appointment Saturday night and Sunday morning also Sunday night, all of the services were well attended.

There were fifteen visitors at Sunday School and we are always happy to have visitors.

The Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Watley were Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Sewell, Mrs. S. C. Sewell, Gladys and Perry Oden. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas of Cedar Grove, and two of the Pates Chapel girls.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas Oden were the Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lum Scott.

We are sorry to report that Miss Eula Sanders is not improving. She underwent a minor operation last Friday, but it seems that another one will be necessary.

Mrs. Sid Higgins is on the sick list this week.

Bro. Nix and wife were the dinner guests of Mr. Tom Foshee last Sunday.

Mrs. Ida Warren, Mrs. Gladys Anthony, of Potters, and a daughter of Mrs. Warren, who lives in Gainesville, Fla., visited the Sanders family Sunday afternoon.

We wish to take this means to thank the people for the help and kindness during the sickness and death of our husband and father.—Mrs. W.L. Baker, and Family.

Brief Farm Outlook Facts

The average production of all fruit during the next 5 years, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, will probably be larger than the average for the 5-year period just past and the total income from fruit production will probably be somewhat higher.

Sweetpotato acreage in 1938 is expected to increase about 20 per cent above the acreage harvested in 1937. With average yields this would mean a production of about 88,000,000 bushels, or an increase of about 20 per cent above the 1937 production. It is probable therefore that, with a larger prospective crop in 1938, sweetpotato prices will be lower than those received for the 1937 crop.

The acreage planted to Irish potatoes in 1938 is expected to be about the same as that planted in 1937, and if yields should be averaged, the production in 1938 would total about 365,000,000 bushels.

Production of commercial truck crops in 1938 is expected by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics to equal or slightly exceed the record volume of 1937 if yields are about average in 1938.

The number of lambs fed this winter probably will be larger than a year earlier, says the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in reporting that "at the beginning of the fed-lamb marketing season in December, prices of lambs probably will be higher than a year earlier, but the seasonal advance in prices from January to April next year is expected to be less than in 1937."

Famous Girl Show
Coming Nov. 23rd

Original N. Y. Winter Garden Production, Ziegfeld Folies, At Montgomery

The most important theatrical engagement in the history of Montgomery is scheduled for Tuesday night, November 23, at 8:30 at the City Auditorium, when the celebrated Ziegfeld Folies will hold forth for one performance.

The company numbers over 100 persons, seventy-five per cent of whom are the type of beauties that the great Florenz Ziegfeld glorified for a quarter of a century. The principal players include Dr. Rockwell, Sibyl Bowen, Cherry and June Preisler, Hugh Cameron, Enrica & Novello, James Farrell, Boy Foy and Ben Kost's Variety Eight.

As an added feature will be seen Marian Martin, whose titillating terpsichorean divestment at the Hollywood night club stunned even blasé Broadway with its frank disclosures and whose subsequent performances at the Winter Garden in the current Folies called forth the ministrations of the constabulary.

Owing to the extremely daring character of this season's Folies, children will not be admitted.

Four baggage cars and as many Pullmans are required to transport the paraphernalia and personnel from stand to stand—special trains on fast schedules are utilized.

Mail orders, when accompanied by remittance in full, including tax and self-addressed, stamped envelope, will be given special attention. Address all mail orders to Montgomery Enterprises, P.O. Box 195, Montgomery, Ala.

Music Club District Convention Is Outlined

From The Montgomery Advertiser
By Bertha Loya Gilbert

The Montgomery Music Club will be host to the Fourth District Convention of the Alabama Federation of Music Clubs which will take place here Tuesday. [The district convention is each year a high point in the musical calendar. J. Clarendon McClure of Mobile heads the federated music clubs of the state while Mrs. Barney Roberts of Clanton is president of the Fourth District and will preside at the meeting Tuesday.]

The convention will open in the parlors of the First Methodist Church on Park Avenue, Cloverdale, with the beautiful and impressive National Federation Ritual to be led by Reverend Oscar Rice, pastor of First Methodist Church, after which convention routine matters will be taken up to be followed by reports from individual club delegates and committee chairmen as well as leaders of junior work in the district.

Many state officers will attend as the executive meeting of the state board, which assemblies musical leaders from the entire state, is scheduled here for Monday at the Jefferson Davis Hotel, planned to coincide with the district convention. It is expected that a number will remain over for the district meeting Tuesday. Former State presidents who will attend are Mrs. Wade Carlisle, of Roanoke, and Mrs. W. C. Giles, of Opelika. Mrs. Walter Agnew, of this city and Mrs. S. L. Tooner, of Auburn, are former presidents of fourth district, who will be at the meeting Tuesday. Mrs. J. A. Sellers, former chairman of religious music and education, Mrs. Elric Gilbert, former editor and historian, Mrs. Charles Ingalls, former chairman of legislation, Mrs. Kyle Shirley, of Wetumpka and Mrs. R. G. Hebson, of Tallahassee, will also attend.

The high point of the morning session will be an address by J. Clarendon McClure, state president. Mrs. J. Greeley McGowan, of Chapman first vice-president, will also be a speaker of the morning. Other state officers and committee chairmen who will attend the meeting and will make talks are Mrs. Reid Lancaster, state chairman of student music, and member of the National Board, Mrs. Howard Gerrish, state chairman of civic music, Mrs. Douglass Jackson, recording secretary for the state convention, Miss Isabel Evans, state chairman of music in schools and colleges, Mrs. Florence Golsen-Bateman, state chairman of American music, and Miss Lily Byron Gill, chairman of student contests.

The artistic event of the day will be the musical program arranged for the afternoon session to be given by the Women's Chorus of Montgomery Music Club directed by Florence Golsen-Bateman and members of the Young Musicians Club of this city of which Miss Emily Lincoln is president. Young musicians who will appear on the program are Alice Condon, pianist, Louise Tharpe, violinist, and Billy Rigby, tenor. Miss Emily Lincoln and Mrs. Lois O'Neal will be accompanists.

Miss Condon will open the program with Fantasia and Fugue in G minor" Bach-List. Miss Tharpe, violinist, will play "Lament" from Esther by Handel-Flesch and "Londonderry Air" Kreisler. Billy Rigby's selection will be "He Was Alone" by Theodore Paxon, "The Spirit Flower", Campbell-Tipton "Old Mother Hubbard."

The Women's Chorus will be heard in "Night Song" by Clokey, "Wind on the Hill," by O'Hara; "Lullaby," by Brahms and "The Heavens Resound," Beethoven.

Clubs of the fourth district which will be represented Tuesday are the Montgomery Women's Chorus, a federated unit; Montgomery Young Musicians Group; Montgomery Music Study Club; Clanton Music Appreciation Club; Wetumpka Music and Magazine Club; Tallahassee Music Club; The Nannie Griffin Music Club of Lafayette; Auburn Music Division of the Woman's Club; Opelika Music Club and the Roanoke Music Club.

Mrs. Reid Lancaster and Mrs. Duglass Jackson, the committee arrangements from the host city announce that the public is cordially invited to the morning and afternoon session including the concert after noon.

The luncheon at 1 o'clock will be by reservation and will be the feature of the convention. Mrs. Barney Roberts, district president, will preside and will introduce the guests. An informal program of interest has been arranged by the committee.

Interest attaches to the fact this is the year for election of officers in the district which occurs bi-annually with the state convention. The election will take place at the close of the business session.

The State Board of the Alabama Federation of Music Clubs will be in executive session here Monday, an all day session at the Jefferson Davis Hotel. Musical leaders from sections of the State will be present. J. Clarendon McClure, from the State President of the Federated Music Clubs, will preside.

Members of the executive board include J. Clarendon McClure, of Mobile, president; Mrs. J. Greeley Gowin, of Chapman, first vice president; Mrs. Stella Harris, Tuscaloosa, second vice president; Mrs. Douglass Jackson, Montgomery, recording secretary; Mrs. N. C. Van de Vate, Mobile, corresponding secretary; W. F. Baugh, Decatur, treasurer; Alice Graham, Birmingham, editor; Mrs. L. P. Troup, Decatur, auditor, and Mrs. George Howell, Birmingham, parliamentarian. District presidents include Mrs. Walter J. Byrne, Birmingham, president first district; Mrs. E. Stephens, Gadsden, president second district; Miss Sadie Chappin, Greensboro, third district; Mrs. B. Roberts, Clanton, fourth district; W. C. Coker, Greenville, fifth district; and Miss Marjorie Schobel, president of the sixth district.

Chairman of standing committees are Mrs. W. W. Bateman, Wetumpka; Mrs. R. C. Woodson, of Birmingham; Mrs. Howard Gerrish, Montgomery; Mrs. Herbert Caldwell, Tuscaloosa; Mrs. J. V. Luke, of Birmingham; W. W. Harper, Selma. Other names are Miss Lily Byron Gill, Montgomery; Mrs. Phillip V. Spier of Greenville; Mrs. Estella A. Striplin, Birmingham; Mrs. Alston Maxwell, Tallahassee; Mrs. Beverly Hester, Jacksonville; Mrs. Newton Sams, Birmingham; Mrs. S. E. Washburn, Bolling; Mrs. Eli Shorter, Edinburg; Tom Garner, Tuscaloosa; Mrs. Katherine Kilgore, Birmingham; Mrs. Bernice Jernigan, Troy; Mrs. Reid Lancaster, Montgomery, and Dorsey Whittington, of Birmingham.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

The Fable of Pompey Demigra (Continued from last issue)

(Authors note: Several readers have been kind enough to comment on the first part of this fable, although adversely, complaining that whereas the previous contents of "That's What I Think" have been simply and plainly written, the present series is disguised in fable form. However, that may be, a fable is a fable, and as I said once before, a lot of people like fables, anyway, a fable is supposed to teach a lesson; furthermore there were just as many comments in favor of hearing, or rather reading the rest of the story of Pompey and his political adventures, here goes).

You may recall that our dear Pom-Pom had been rejected by the Populists because of his failure to support their candidate for President. When the party finally succeeded in gaining power, a strong attempt to re-unite all factions of the party was made, and in the scramble, Pom-Pom was forgiven, and to compensate for the loss of his seat in the Senate he was awarded a high position in the nation's capital, where for the princely sum of 6,000 francs a year he had only to keep a record of the number of reams of second sheets purchased by the stenographer to the secretary to the private secretary to the Second Assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury.

While in power, the new President had undertaken to relieve the suffering caused by the economic depression. Realizing that the farmer and the laboring man, having the lowest incomes of all the classes, would have to have a living income before it could truly be said that prosperity had returned, he set his attention to bringing back their income and incidentally their buying power. For the farmer, he set up a bureau which would pay him a subsidy for reducing the amount of his produce, reasoning that if the production was reduced, the demand would be greater than the supply and the price would rise. For the laboring man he devised a scheme whereby each industry would have rules and regulations governing its own particular field, and minimum wages would prevail.

Unfortunately for the President, the Supreme Court consisted mainly of judges who had been appointed by Patriot Presidents, and they ruled, when any case involving the President's schemes came up, that they were illegal and contrary to the law of the land. In behalf of the farmer, the President then set up an agency which was to rent the land from the farmer, and leave it idle, thereby reducing production; but his efforts to help the laboring man were so unsuccessful that he asked the Parliament, composed mostly of Populists, to pick out a new Supreme Court. It is doubtful if the Parliament would have consented to such a step, but the gesture so frightened the judges of the court that one of them retired, leaving a vacancy. To this vacancy the President appointed the leading Senator from Reston, an able statesman who had sponsored a bill which would assist the laboring man in maintaining a decent standard of living. This in turn created a vacancy in the Senate, and it was for this vacant seat that Pom-Pom decided to campaign.

Anybody would ordinarily think that Pom-Pom's experience in turning on his party, losing his seat, and being taken back after much ado would have taught him a lesson in practical politics; but such was not the case. Pom-Pom could not resist the impulse to appeal to the prejudices, superstitions and ignorance of many of his audience, and he took the stump on the platform that his predecessor's bill to raise the standard of living of the laboring man would prove injurious to the farmers of Reston, because it would increase the cost of the goods they had to purchase. It has never been clear how he forgot to mention that it would give the laborers more money to buy the farmers' produce, thereby increasing the farmers' incomes.

It was not surprising, therefore, that the more intelligent citizens of Reston looked elsewhere for a representative of the province who would prove more worthy of the confidence of the people, more to be honored by his nation, and more loyal to the party which had been instrumental in raising him to his position. They did not have to seek far. For over a decade, a section in the southern part of the province had sent, with a regularity which bespoke the high esteem in which they held him, a certain young Cecil Dumont to the national House of Deputies as their representative. When the national Administration in its efforts to relieve the depression spent much money on public works, young Dumont was instrumental in having much of these works directed to his section. Our future installments of this fable will therefore deal with the campaign battle between Pom-Pom and young Dumont.

Perhaps the lesson contained in the Next Saturday and Sunday are our regular preaching days. Everyone has an invitation to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Patterson from Phoenix City, Alabama, were visiting Mr. and Mrs. G.C. White Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Dennis had as their guests Sunday Mrs. Shirley Davis and son, Chester, Mrs. Car Gray and children, Sam Davis, Mr. and Mrs. John Dennis and daughter, Florence, from Wetumpka, Ala.

Mr. Park Mims and children visited Mr. and Mrs. Newton Dennis Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Kent Minor and children took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Ratliff Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. G.E. White had as dinner guests Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Davis and daughter, Helen Sue. Mr. J.N. Dennis and Miss Bertha Dennis of South Clanton were in this Community Sunday.

Miss Audrey Culver was the guest of Misses Jessie and Pearl Davis Sunday.

Mr. Shirley Davis, Elder Davis and wife attended church at Coosa River Sunday.

CHILTON COUNTY COUNCIL OF COUNTY WORKERS

The Council of the County Workers met at a luncheon meeting on Wednesday, November 3, at the Thomson Hotel. Miss Meta Grace, president of the Council, presided. Representatives from the following member organizations were present:

Farm Agent's Office, Health Dept., Board of Education, Dept. of Public Welfare and Probate Court. Besides the regular members, several visitors were present at the meeting.

After the regular business meeting, Dr. B.F. Austin, member of the Bureau of Child Hygiene and Public Health Nursing, gave a most interesting address to the council. Dr. Austin pointed out the value of such an organized county council as the one in Chilton County and showed how each department represented in the council could help the other department and so bring about a better cooperation between all public service agencies in the county.

Two installments thus far presented, might be that he who cannot be loyal to his party cannot always be trusted to be loyal to his constituents.

Anyway, that's what I think.

MT. PLEASANT 4-H CLUB NEWS

We started our club off with how to cook and fix school lunches. We were all present and feeling fine, and Mrs. Grace felt like she had been to some real funny comic show or something—she had a big laugh as usual. Undoubtedly she will be a great help to all us girls and others, too, by teaching home work and other things.

We hope that all the 4-H Club girls and others, too, are interested in reading what we write and knowing what we are studying about by the great help of Miss Grace.

SINGING AT SHILOH CHURCH

NEXT SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The News has been requested to announce that there will be a singing at Shiloh Church next Sunday afternoon, November 14, beginning at 2:00 o'clock. Everyone is invited to come and bring their new song books.

Clanton Methodist Church

Our Sunday school was fine in every way and in every department last Sunday. Some members must be, and we hope every member is, doing some mighty good work for the Sunday school. We hope each one will continue his and her good work and help our Sunday school to thrive continuously.

The attendance at church was fine, too. We trust all will be back next Sunday with others. We are promised comfort next Sunday in the church, however cold the weather on the outside may be, because plenty of coal has been purchased this week for the church.

Remember that Conference meets next week and we should surely hear our pastor next Sunday. Let's give him a record attendance at both preaching services, 11:00 A.M., and 6:30 P.M., and thereby hear another of Dr. Truett's good, spiritual sermons, and also in that way tell him we appreciate his efforts throughout the year.

If you aren't a regular attendant, begin next Sunday to attend each church service regularly. You will enjoy them.

Announcement

Next Sunday will be your last chance to hear our pastor of Clanton Methodist Church before Conference. Don't miss his messages at 11:00 A.M., and at 6:30 P.M. We hope it won't be the last Sunday he will be our pastor, but no one knows what the Conference will do—whether they will send him back to us or not. So, may we for emphasis, again say, don't miss Dr. Truett's messages next Sunday, November 14. Come to both services and in that way show him we appreciate him.

THE LEADER

"The Good Earth" To Show Here Soon

Theatre goers of Clanton have a real treat in store for them on Sunday and Monday, November 14 and 15, when the Wadesonian Theatre will show "The Good Earth."

This picture which taxed the ingenuity of Hollywood in production, is rated as one of the best films ever to be shown. It excels in both entertainment and educational value.

Mr. Wade, manager of the New Wadesonian Theatre here, states that he feels sure that the public will appreciate this truly marvelous picture. Additional interest should be manifested by the public as China has been in the public eye for some time now.

Remember "The Good Earth," Sunday and Monday, starting two of the greatest actors in Hollywood, Paul Muni and Luise Rainer.

News from Thorsby

MRS. WEBB PARRISH, Correspondent

An Evening of Fun

At Thorsby Jr. High auditorium, the Thorsby F.-T.A. will sponsor the funniest comedy ever staged in Thorsby. On Friday evening, November 12, at 7:30 o'clock. Beyond a doubt the funniest play ever presented. Sponsors not responsible if your tears run like oceans, your sides ache, and you almost pass out with laughter.

Mrs. J. L. Mixson is pianist, and the cast of characters are: Madame Jarley, Mrs. Garland; Mr. Jarley, A. P. Villadsen; Babies, Ernest Porter and Varney Wyatt; Sis Hopkins, Jim Collins; Black Mammy, Lloyd Howard; Flapper, Jim Higgins; Groom, E. N. Bentley; Bride, Donald Merchant; Social Butterfly, Marvin Davenport; Ragging Girl, Mrs. E. R. Piper; Silly Lizzie, Mrs. E. N. Bentley; Mary Jane, Lucile Goodgame; Porters, Bull Littleton and Bill Collins.

Lovely society women will be impersonated by fifteen or twenty prominent men of Thorsby including D. L. Ward, R. B. Johnson, P. M. Johnson, J. D. Griffin, E. R. Piper, J. L. Mixson, E. F. Billingsley, John Childress, S. J. Davenport, L. C. Lowery and others.

Admission will be ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents. Don't miss this extravaganza of hilarity.

The Baptist Social will meet this week, Thursday afternoon, November 11, at the home of Mrs. Luncy Martin. Everyone is cordially invited.

There will be the regular services at the Thorsby Baptist Church Sunday A.M. at 11 o'clock; Sunday night at 7 o'clock. Everybody is invited to attend these services. Dr. J. O. Colley of Troy preached for Bro. McLeod at the Chestnut Creek Baptist Church last Sunday night.

Friends of Mrs. Nan Taylor will be glad to hear that she has sufficiently recovered from a recent illness, and is able to take up her duties as teacher at the Thorsby Jr. High School.

Mrs. John Rowell spent last Thursday in Birmingham with her daughter, Mrs. Macon Espy.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Pate announce the arrival of a fine baby boy born Wednesday, October 27, weighing 9½ pounds, whom they have named Ralph Samuel.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Adams and son of Gadsden are spending a few days here with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Burt Higgins have returned home after spending three weeks in Ohio with their daughter.

Mrs. G. F. Harper and Mr. Lee Seale spent Monday in Selma.

Thorsby Institute News

Rev. George Luther of De Tour, Michigan, who is an uncle of Miss Charlotte Luther, Librarian, gave an interesting talk at Chapel on Monday, bringing out the thought that God is in nature and the wonderful things he has created are all about us. He is staying in Thorsby at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Johnson.

Saturday night at 7:30 in the Institute auditorium the four classes of the Institute are to put on various stunts. Everyone is invited to come. Admission is ten cents.

The officers of the Christian Life Conference are Ouida Wright, chairman; Carl Foss, treasurer, and Marla Wright, secretary. The Conference will begin on Friday night, November 26 and last through Sunday night, November 28. Young people are especially invited. The registration fee will be 50c, payable in cash or provisions.

Among the many very interesting books of fiction in our library is one which is proving especially popular, "The Dear Pretender," by Alice Ross Colver. Here Miss Colver has written humanly an dsmypathetically of a young woman who faced difficulties bravely and with gay pretense, and ultimately found romance in the home of her employer.

Another interesting novel is "K" by Mary Roberts Rinehart. It tells of a doctor who wins back confidence in himself, and of a girl who finds herself and him.

"Life Begins At Forty," by Walter B. Pitkin is a famous book which has dispelled doubt and brought a vital, dynamic philosophy to thousands of men and women who dreaded "middle age." Here in simple language is a practical way to achieve a richer, happier and more useful life.

A special business meeting of the Ladies Guild will be held in the Fellowship Room of the Congregational Church on Friday afternoon, November 12, at 2:30. This is a very important meeting. All members are requested to be present.

Mrs. J. L. McClarean of Birmingham spent last Friday here with her sister, Mrs. Edward Howard.

Mrs. Anna Phalin left Sunday for Tuscaloosa where she will visit for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Peterson and children, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Peterson left Saturday for their home in Detroit after spending a week here with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Peterson.

Christian Endeavor News

The Christian Endeavor Society held its regular weekly meeting on Sunday at 6:30 P.M., in the Fellowship Room of the Congregational Church. The program topic was "Be Grateful." Frances Woods was leader. The following took part: Anita Fretwell, Ouida Wright, Kathleen Petty, Ella Mac Dixon, Ruby Leigh Wilkes, Oleita Nowell. Special music was given by Inez Duke and Louise Clark. Wright gave an interesting talk at the Fifth District Conference recently at Blackwoods Church in northern Alabama. Sarah Nell Collins, elected delegate to the Congressional State Conference to be held in Birmingham, November 9-11.

Alabama Has Record Red Cross Year; Achievements In Disaster, Health And Safety

Wide accomplishments of the Alabama Red Cross in the year set a peace-time record in safety and disaster activities, reported today by Dr. C. O. Lawrence, Chairman of the Chilton County Chapter, in his annual accounting of the organization's work.

Red Cross membership in the state is up sharply upward to the point it has reached since the War—37,462 members, he said. Chapter officials in Clanton and other counties, along with other Red Cross officers throughout the state, determined to reach an even higher point this year.

In two years, the Chapter Chairman said, "Alabama has been at the head of the list in National Red Cross membership. Every other state in the country has enrolled a greater percentage of its population than we did."

This year we decided that Alabama was at the bottom long enough, and lengthening our stride a bit, we passed the membership of any other state.

Dr. Charles R. Moore, President of the Alabama Red Cross, said that the state's population was 2,200,000. Alabama's population was 2,200,000. Alabama's population was 2,200,000.

which the Red Cross gave emergency relief, household goods, building repairs, or new homes to 1,035 flood victims. Over $2,183,000 of this fund was expended in floods of lesser intensity in Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee during the same period.

In addition to these achievements, Dr. Lawrence continued, the Local Chapter and other Red Cross societies in the state continued aid to disabled ex-service men, their dependents, and to men in active military service, giving assistance in more than 9,100 cases. Junior Red Cross, one of the greatest youth movements in the world today, dedicated to the principle of Service and to the fostering of international good will, increased by 6,000 members during the year, bringing total Alabama enrollment to 116,850.

Red Cross volunteers in Chapters throughout the state made hundreds of garments for the needy; chapter accident prevention committees sponsored campaigns to reduce the appalling number of accidents in homes and on farms, and on the highways of the State 13 emergency first aid stations were set up in an effort to curb the tremendous number of deaths and injuries from automobile accidents.

"These accomplishments show a marked increase over previous years," Dr. Lawrence added. "But they are none the less only a start—over the road we have to travel. If we had the means, all of our services could be doubled or even tripled, and still not ne was given no attention, shouldered out of the way, while Shaw dealt with more dependable individuals.

Then the Weasel would seat himself at a distance and scratch his back with a stick and lament.

Each day he performed so, but each night he paddled from his lodge across the lake to the company fort and met Burke Rickman and whispered what he had learned.

And so Rickman paced his enclosure and drank and fumed and counted the time, reckoned the miles his letter to MacIver would be borne that day, estimated the weeks it would be before the opposition fort would find itself without a leader.

The canoe reached MacIver. Rickman's letter was handed at last to Donald MacIver. And the Scot, and other company heads read and frowned and set their minds to the task in hand.

MacIver climbed the hill and sat with the major and the grizzled old officer, veteran of many an Indian battle, was far less comfortable than he would have been under fire of hostile savages.

He grumbled and protested and roared. But he gave in, knowing a surrender in the field, in such an instance, was a lesser hazard than a disturbance in Washington, and a canoe with Capes, the lieutenant, and four soldiers embarked that day, the warrant for Rodney Shaw safe in an official dispatch case.

And then, indeed, the major was in for it.

Flying up the hill to the fort, Annette Leclere burst in upon the old soldier. And the major Mydeared and There-thered, and paced before his desk and pulled at his mustache and harrumphed as he admitted that, yes, soldiery was on the way to bring young Rodney Shaw back to answer to a charge of murder.

"But it is not so, major! It is common talk in the town that the thing was infamously gotten up to delay Rodney! Your own surgeon has said the man died from no knife wound!"

"But the warrant exists!" the major thundered. "And Leslie's man Giles does not deny the story that Shaw and his employer quarreled over the goods. What can I do?" And his boots went clump, clump, clump as the lovely Annette dropped her face into her hands and wept.

And after a time he patted her hand and his gruff voice grew almost gentle.

"There! . . . That's better, my dear! . . . And what is that in your hand? A feather? A black ostrich plume . . . Oh, I did not know it was some secret!"—as, flushing quickly, Annette thrust the remnant of the black plume into her bodice and began to talk of Giles . . .

So down the hill again as the sun sank went Annette, dismayed by its purposeful, and along a narrow street, and a few who happened near felt their eyes bulge as the mademoiselle walked alone on the beach with the garbled and leathery Giles, now an employee in the great warehouse . . .

At midnight the major roused at the rapping and descended to his door and there was Annette.

"Giles will make affidavit!" she gasped. "He tells that Leslie gave his goods to Rodney without reservation! He tells before witnesses, and he will say so to the marshal and the justice!"

"So all is settled!" boomed the major. "So when young Shaw returns he will be vindicated and free to—"

"Returns! Returns!" The sharpness of her cry, so in contrast to her look of a moment before, caused the major to hesitate. "That is the important matter, major! That he be not returned! Do you not understand?"—with an impatient stamp of a tiny foot. "Burke Rickman is there. If Rodney is taken from his establishment by soldiery, even for a brief absence, his trade will be gone! It is all Rickman asks, major! Another message must be sent, recalling the lieutenant and voiding the warrant!"

Annette clasped her hands beneath her trembling chin in an ecstasy of hope which went but like a snuffed candle when the major threw up his arms in a helpless gesture. Because, that day, an order had arrived calling a detachment to Detroit and the garrison would be so drained of men that it would be impossible to spare others for such an errand as was proposed.

Indeed, he'd write an order to recall Capes! He'd write an order that would bring Capes back to his post without even stops for food and rest! On his honor, that order would be something to read; he'd write an order to peel a man's ears, but he could not send it. There was no chance . . . no chance whatever. But let any company or individual come to him again and try to wheedle him into pulling chestnuts from the fire and see what happened. He'd skin them alive, he would . . . But this time nothing could be done. Nothing whatever . . .

And so, as eastern stars faded, Annette went slowly down the hill, cheeks as wet with tears as the grass was with dew, the black feather tight in a hand which clenched desperately.

Nightfall. And a canoe making its weary way toward Rickman's establishment, stared at in the gathering dusk by men at the stockade gate.

"The fort!" came a voice from the canoe, as paddles ceased dipping. "Is this the Astor establishment?"

"Yes! Who asks?"

"Capes, from Mack—"

"Ah, Capes! Capes, at last! Land here, Capes! Here, you men, help them! So. Quickly, but easy . . . Ah, Capes!"

And Rickman ran into water to his knees, clasped the lieutenant's hand with a fervor which matched the tone of his words.

Up the lake shore the glow of a great fire stained tree tops and read across the water, laquering it in black and gold. Drums sounded and the nasal voices of native women singing in chorus reached them, punctuated by shrill whoops. The grand medicine was in progress. The rum which Rodney had promised was taking hold on hearts and tongues.

Rickman explained this to Capes' query and rubbed his hands.

"He'll be there," he said. "The renegade, he'll be watching the dance! A fitting moment to drag him to answer this charge, Capes!"

"Tonight! He doesn't suspect pursuit, does he? My men are worn. Morning will do, surely, and—"

"You may have been seen! And if word reached Shaw that soldiery is at hand? What then, Capes?"

"But to march among the Indians with muskets! They're drunk, by the sounds. It might mean disaster, Rickman!"

"You mistake my meaning. We can go to Shaw's gate by following the shore. The place will be guarded. I'll reveal myself and tell the guard I want word with Shaw. That will bring him. Yes, and on the run!"

He shrugged his shoulders and lifted upturned palms in significant gesture.

"We may as well be done with this, I suppose," Capes said and paused because a figure was running toward him up the slope; a small, cloaked figure.

"Lieutenant Capes? Lieutenant Capes?"

A woman? Calling for him? Here in this wilderness fort?

They'd had no warning whatever that Annette Leclere was here, that she was running breathlessly up the slope, once the learned Capes' whereabouts.

"Lieutenant Capes?" she cried again but it was Burke Rickman who spoke.

"Annette!"

She came to a halt before them, one hand against the door frame for support, the other holding the long, maroon cloak close about her throat. Silence. Dumbfounded silence. And Capes, confused by the tableau, stammered:

"Ma'm'selle! Where did you . . . what brings you . . ."

"Orders, Lieutenant! I bring you orders from the commandant!"

She fumbled within the cloak as she spoke and brought out and thrust toward him a limp, frayed packet.

"Orders? What orders do you bring me, M'm'selle?"

"Orders calling you back," she said in a whisper, as if the completion of her errand had drained all the remaining strength from her body. "Orders revoking the orders that . . . brought you here."

She swayed then despite her hand on the wall and might have fallen had not Capes stepped quickly toward her, showing the stupefied Rickman from his way, and encircled her shoulders with an arm. "Rickman's mouth opened but no words came."

"From the beginning this charge against him has been known to be absurd," she said easily. "But still, with the persuasion and persistence put behind the effort to ruin Rodney Shaw, the officials have not had the courage to follow any other course until Giles spoke."

"Giles?"

"Giles! The man has been as frightened of company vengeance as any other. But when it became known that Rodney had bested you here, Burke Rickman; when the last unfair move in the cruel game you play was made apparent . . . then forces were brought to bear upon Giles which brought from him the truth."

"Then," she said, "the problem was to overtake you, Lieutenant, and stop this unwarranted and disgraceful arrest. There was none to come. A detachment had been ordered to Detroit. The major could spare no men. Someone had to come and . . . there was no one else." Her voice broke and she swallowed bravely.

"Fools!" moaned Rickman. "It can't be! It's not believable that any such order could have been issued! I demand, Capes, that you read that order!" The other drew himself up. "I read it," he said stiffly, "but not because of your demands, Rickman. Please understand, I know my duty!"

It would peel a man's ears, the major had declared. Annette, and surely it had effect on the ears of this young lieutenant because his ears reddened as he scanned the lines of script.

" . . . will disregard order to bring the alleged fugitive Shaw to Michigan and address to Annette, and yourself as though you were unaware of traders' contentions will return to this post immediately with no delays for any reason whatsoever . . ."

Capes folded the sheet slowly, thrust it into a tunic pocket. He drew a deep breath, a sense of relief, and settled his belt decisively.

One of Rickman's hands twitched upward as though a blow had stung him. The lieutenant stepped past him, confronting Annette. He was puzzled, glanced briefly at Rickman, and addressed her girl.

"In a place of contention such as this," he said, "an island encampment seems advisable for a military party. May I . . . may I offer the security of my detachment as a neighbor? Or . . . or are there other plans?"

"I thank you, Lieutenant," she said, her gaze going to Burke Rickman. Then, significantly: "I will follow directly."

Capes hesitated, then bowed and disappeared through the doorway.

CHAPTER VIII

The girl stood there, holding the cloak about her, facing Rickman.

"Annette? This . . . this means what?"

"That at last I can speak truth!" she said, "after these weeks of shame and humiliation. Two great privileges have come to me tonight. The one is in that I have repaired, as far as it could be repaired, a great wrong which I did Rodney Shaw. The other is that I can confess to you the falsity of my words at our last meeting. From the hour I struck at Rodney by betraying his plan to you I was in misery. And the morning of your departure, when you came to me for your farewells . . . when I begged you to remain; when I embraced you and kissed you—with a shudder—" "I was only acting a part."

"Acting?"

"Acting, Burke, to save my . . . the man I love."

"All I wanted you to believe that day was that I desired you to stay. I loathed you, I hated you, but I wanted you to delay, that Rodney might have some chance to capture the thing he wanted!"

She spoke that, slowly, with great tenderness.

"So that's your object, eh? The trader cried, grasping her shoulder. "So you confess to me your love for this upstart? You make this journey to save him and humble me? Is that it? Well, if that's it—"

"Burke! Let go! You hurt!"

POWER COMPANY HELPS SCHOOLS

Alabama Power Pays Large Tax Sum Into State Educational Trust Fund

Swelling the special educational trust fund of Alabama by $349,110.98 was the check delivered today by Lamar Aldridge, treasurer of the Alabama Power Company, in payment of the hydro-electric kilowatt hour tax. The entire amount of this check will be devoted to educational purposes. Of Alabama's 67 counties, 39 will receive over $5,000 each for high schools and elementary schools.

The payment today is only part of the Alabama Power Company's taxes for 1937. Total taxes for 1937 are estimated at over $2,750,000 by Thomas W. Martin, president, who commenting on the company's tax bill, said:

"There is a vast difference between the millions of dollars in taxes we will pay this year and the few thousands—$35,615.64 to be exact—paid by the Tennessee Valley Authority, whose untaxed physical property in Alabama cost as much or more than ours. Should the TVA be successful in its apparent effort to destroy the power companies, the millions in taxes now paid by Alabama Power Company must be made up from some other source. Not only the state, but counties, municipalities and the United States government are beneficiaries of taxes paid by the company."

In addition to the loss of the taxes now collected from Alabama Power Company, the state, and some counties and municipalities, will suffer a loss in tax collections because thousands of acres of rich agricultural lands and other properties are being acquired by TVA; most of it will be flooded; all of it will be removed from the tax rolls. Already several counties in North Alabama are feeling the tax pinch of the TVA where real estate assessments have been 'hiked' to offset the loss in the amount of taxable property; because TVA is a governmental agency and its properties are non-taxable. Thus, as its area of activities enlarges and it takes over more and more privately owned property, the remaining tax payers in other parts of the state will be burdened with additional taxes to make up the difference.

"In addition to tax losses there is an estimated loss to the general economy of the state of 12 1/2 million dollars in farm income because of the flooding by TVA of some of the richest agricultural lands in Alabama."

"When all of this is considered, perhaps the people of our state will feel they are paying an extraordinarily high price for a slight, subsidized saving in retail electric rates."

—The Eufaula Tribune

RIGHT with Alabama is the progress made by Education during the past twenty-five years. "Readin', writin' and 'rithmetic" were taught in many sections of Alabama in poorly furnished one-room schools to which pupils often trudged for many weary miles. Fortunate were the few who, on the completion of the grammar grades, could afford to go on through high school. Privileged was the mere handful who enjoyed the opportunity of a college education.

In 1904-05 for instance, there were in Alabama only 15 public high schools with an enrollment of 2,600 pupils. Today there are 333 senior high schools and 70 junior high schools with an enrollment of over 160,000. Many of the one-teacher grammar schools have been replaced with modern consolidated schools, offering an enriched program of study.

At the University of Alabama, the 1904-05 enrollment records show about 400 students. Alabama Polytechnic Institute had only 450. Today the enrollment at the University of Alabama is around 5,000; at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, about 2,500. Enrollment at Birmingham-Southern, Howard and Spring Hill Colleges—and other schools in the state—show proportionate increases.

Administration of the schools and supervision of instruction has kept pace with the increase in enrollment, and in this respect our state ranks high. Educational opportunities in the poorer counties of Alabama are more nearly equal to those in the richer ones than in some of the wealthier states.

Credit for Alabama's great advance in educational facilities and methods during recent years belongs largely to her many able educators, their associates, and Parent-Teacher Associations.

No state can have a more valuable asset than an educated citizenry. List high, therefore, among the RIGHT things we have in Alabama, the progress being made in Alabama to attain this end.

Supt. Little Says Schools And Equipment All Paid For In County

Chilton County has been rapidly forging to the front in educational matters over the state and the financial statement of the Board of Education which was issued this week, brings out many interesting facts that should be called to the attention of the citizens of the county.

In issuing his statement Luther E. Little, superintendent of education, was asked by the News regarding the present financial status of the Board of Education in regard to the new school buildings and school equipment over the county.

Mr. Little stated that the Board of Education did not owe anything on the new buildings nor on the equipment; that there was no bonded indebtedness, no warrants outstanding, nor capital outlay whatsoever. He also stated that the only obligations of the Board of Education at this time were only those expenses attached to the operation of the schools during the

Power Company Pays Quarterly Dividends

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 12, 1937.—Quarterly dividends were declared yesterday by the Board of Directors of Alabama Power Company on its $6 and $7 preferred stock, payable January 3, 1938 to stockholders of record December 13, 1937. These dividends amount to approximately $553,000.

At the same time it was stated that the regular quarterly dividends upon the $5 preferred stock payable February 1, 1938, will be considered and are expected to be declared at a meeting of the Board of Directors to be held in the early part of January 1938. These dividends will amount to $33,000.

TWELVE ARRESTS ARE MADE IN COUNTY DURING WEEK

Twelve arrests were made in this County during the past week according to Sheriff J. R. Hardy. These were: 1 for violating internal revenue law; 2 for public drunkenness; 6 for violating the prohibition law; two for burglary and 1 for murder.

RED CROSS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE MEETING WITH FINE RESPONSE

Roll Call Continues With Results From All Sections

Indications are now that Chilton County will have reached half its quota in the Red Cross Roll Call by today, according to J. Mell Martin, roll call chairman in this county. Mr. Martin stated that the workers are meeting with excellent cooperation and response over the entire county.

A tremendous amount of time and money is being expended throughout the nation to make this membership drive a success. Large national advertisers are devoting time on radio programs, magazines are giving space and newspapers are devoting unlimited space to this drive. This is being done willingly because even those who may never need the aid of the American Red Cross realize its usefulness in time of peace as well as in time of war.

Citizens of Chilton County who have not already given their membership to the Red Cross, are urged to look up some worker and join this week. The Roll Call will come to a close on next Thursday, November 25th.

NEWS TO BE PUBLISHED DAY EARLIER NEXT WEEK

Your News will come to you one day earlier next week, which means that it must go to press a day earlier. This is due to Thursday being Thanksgiving Day and there being no mail delivered on that day.

Those who wish to have anything published in next week's News are requested to remember the above.

NEGRO SHOOT FARMER NEAR HERE SUNDAY

Forrest Littleton Victim Of Gunshot In Quarrel On Littleton Farm

A white man is dead and a negro is being held in jail here as the result of a shooting on the Lewis Littleton farm east of Clanton last Sunday morning.

Forrest Littleton, age 40, and a well known farmer of the county is dead, and John Caver, negro, is in the county jail charged with the murder of Littleton. Caver lived on the Littleton farm and worked there. Details of what caused the quarrel between the two were not divulged. Reports state that Caver shot Littleton about eight o'clock Sunday morning, the charge from the shotgun entering the left side of the body, killing him instantly.

Caver is said to have gone to a nearby home where Woodfin Littleton lived and reported the shooting, saying that he had killed Forrest Littleton. J. Mell Martin, coroner, and Sheriff J. R. Hardy, were notified of the incident Sunday afternoon and conducted an investigation. Their findings were not given out at that time.

Funeral services for Littleton were held Monday afternoon, with interment in the Mullins cemetery. The Rev. W. T. Davis officiated, with Martin & Sons in charge. He is survived by his mother, his widow and five children.

ALMOST SAME NUMBER TAGS SOLD IN 1936

Small Difference Noted In Auto Tag Sales In This County

There was a very small difference in the number of automobile tags sold in this county this year compared with the number sold here in 1936, according to records at the office of the tax assessor and the office of the judge of probate.

While an actual count could not be had at the time the books were closed Saturday night, it was determined in round figures that 2,450 tags were purchased for the 1938 licenses, while almost the same number were purchased last year.

Saturday was the last day the tags could be secured without auto owners paying an extra penalty, plus possible citation costs. It was also the last day for buying drivers licenses. Highway patrolmen state they have been given instructions to tighten down on those who have not purchased drivers license.

Mrs. Louise Higgins has returned to her home here following an operation at a Birmingham hospital.

CHAS. WILLIAMS, CANDIDATE FOR SENATE VISITS CITY

The News received a pleasant visit last Tuesday from Hon. Chas. Williams of Shelby, Ala., who is a candidate for United States Senator from Alabama. Mr. Williams is widely known in the state and has been prominently connected with the Federal Land Bank for a number of years. While here, he made several calls, stating he would open a radio campaign right away in behalf of his candidacy.

Miss Edith Parrish of Birmingham and Miss Ruth York of Holtville were the week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Robinson.

HEADQUARTERS OF CAMPAIGN TO BE SET UP

Dr. N. S. Johnson Is Named Chairman With Dr. V. J. Gragg, Vice-Chrm.

A most active campaign in Chilton County for Congressman Lister Hill, of Montgomery, for United States Senator will be launched immediately, according to plans mapped out here this week, at which time a county campaign chairman and vice-chairman were named.

A representative group of citizens of the county gathered in Clanton Tuesday of last week for the purpose of selecting a campaign committee. This committee met again this week and selected Dr. N. S. Johnson, prominent physician of the county, as county campaign chairman and selected Dr. V. J. Gragg, another of the county's well known physicians and surgeons, as vice-chairman.

At the meeting this week, which was attended by some of the most prominent citizens of the county, there was no fear expressed for the victory of Congressman Hill over his opponents in the special Senatorial election to be held over the state on January 4th.

An active committee was immediately set up in Clanton for the campaign, and various committees will be named here the end of the week, over the entire county, according to Dr. Johnson and Dr. Gragg.

That Congressman Lister Hill is rapidly gaining votes over the state of Alabama in his race for United States

PILOTS HOLD CONVENTION IN CLANTON

Four Large Clubs Meet Here For Two-Day District Meeting

District Number One of Pilot International, an organization of business and professional women, held its convention in Clanton last Saturday afternoon and Sunday, with a most outstanding program being tendered at each session.

Headquarters of the convention was the Thomson Hotel. Delegates from the Pilot Clubs of Mobile, Selma and Montgomery began arriving in Clanton during Saturday afternoon, and the convention opened with a brilliant banquet in the large dining room of the hotel.

Miss Gertie Fiquette, president of the Clanton Pilot Club, presided at the banquet which was termed an outstanding success. Invocation was given by Miss Nolen Meroney, of Clanton.

Visiting Pilots were introduced, followed by Ruth Wallis, who gave the response to the welcome address. Among the outstanding Pilots attending the convention were Mrs. Hester Bingham, president of Pilot International and Martha Aldridge, district governor. Both were on the program for short talks.

The musical program at the banquet included songs by the entire convention, dances by little Miss Susan Powers, of Lay Dam; violin selections by Mrs. Jodie Longshore, of Birmingham who was accompanied by Mrs. Percy Pitts of Clanton at the piano; piano selections by Mrs. Lucy Farnell, of Maplesville.

An interesting feature of the banquet program was the presence of Senora Carmen Sierra Abadiano, of Mexico City, and a student at Alabama College. Senora Abadiano presented several Mexican dances in full

Things We Think

Things Others Think and What
We Think of Things Others Think
—BILLY SMITH

No Meat
are not exactly complaining, but was no meat to go with the huge left at our office the other day; at we expected the meat. We just thinking how much better turnip would taste when cooked meat. Our friend, C. B. Cox, has into a master farmer, as well as a master on business matters. he who made us a present of six-pound, well developed turnip, he raised on his place near here. Drug Co., also told us to remember that they sold the seed that the sprang from.

A Good Start
When real thinking citizens get to put across a matter or proposition can expect some real action. is what we believe is to be seen in county from the organization campaign committee for Congressman Lister Hill, a candidate for United States Senator. We have been going as closely as possible the on this election and can readily that Hill is rapidly gaining votes pulling many from his opponent. refer our readers to the article appearing in this issue of the News regarding this political race. Chilton selected two mighty good men and the Hill campaign, and you supporters should not worry that this county, although you have work to do yet.

Boat
you will look right carefully in window at J. R. Mullins & Sons, you will see one of the largest ever boots ever manufactured, we have. We inquired about the huge apparel and was informed that as soon as they received the mate it, they would immediately begin work for a wearer.

Like Santa
We visited with our friend, Claud, down at the Western Auto Store, the other day and all acquired the Christmas feeling looking at all the bicycles, tricycles, boxing gloves and other items, seldom found in Clanton. We compared on this and Claud immediately pointed out that it was merely a part of regular stock of merchandise the found.

Again—Anytime
to those visiting members of Pilot International, from Selma, Mobile and Montgomery, who attended the Pilot International district convention in Clanton the past week-end, we say time Again—Soon and Anytime. We thoroughly enjoyed being a guest their banquet and now we want to Pilot conventions, more often.

Samarian
series of philanthropic acts and kind deeds reach our ears quite often, but the latest and most commendable we have heard in sometime to light last week. In this column a few weeks ago we mentioned our good friend, W. H. Sartor, lost ten dollars while doing some picking of funds for the Baptist church recently. We were reliably informed last week that a citizen of Sartor passed along ten dollars from his pocket to the proper source so that Mr. Sartor could replace that loss, that is nothing more or less than a most commendable and we regret we are not at liberty to disclose the name of this Good Samaritan of Twentieth Century.

Pass It On
We found on our desk, a clipping from a daily newspaper relating how the city of Tulsa, Okla., has a "chain-gang" for habitual drunkards, wherein drunkards when arrested will serve time in public view on the streets in "chain-gangs" instead of being allowed to pay a fine. Attached to the clipping was a note, unsigned, asking to suggest this idea to Clanton and the county. So, here's the suggestion suggested.

They Run Both Ways

"Since the new highways were built and people began to travel about the country as though distance means nothing our town has been going down hill. Trade has moved on to the larger cities, and in time no telling what will happen."

Thus speaks the pessimist who finds it difficult to make adjustments to the new order.

"Since the new roads have been built and people can be induced to travel considerable distances for the things they want to buy, we can reach out into new territory here and get a lot of business that we didn't think about years ago."

Thus speaks the optimist, the fellow who is adaptable to changing conditions. He realizes that the new highways run both ways, and what may mean business destruction may also open the door to new opportunity.

Let's view the changing conditions from this higher side, and approach the problems of the present with courage, imagination, initiative and optimism.

O-O-O

Worry? Yes And No

A good friend of ours and a successful business man in Chicago dropped in to see us the other day on his way home from a northern trip. His face was as long as our overdue subscription list as he sat down and told us how the country was on the way to the dogs. "Things look black," he said, "we're going downhill fast. Taxes are up, living costs are up, and the stock market is down at the bottom of the well. Things are worse than I can ever remember."

We listened to that line of talk for a while and then told him to put on his coat and come along. We drove out a well known road and told him to use his eyes. We pointed out the well kept farms and indications of a good crop year.

"Do you realize," we pointed out, that this year the country is raising 1,000,000 more bushels of corn than last year, and that while the price per bushel will be less, the aggregate worth will be much higher? And do you realize the same thing is true with most farm products?

The trouble with you fellows in the big cities is that the big buildings shut off the view—and by 'view' I mean what you think as well as what you look at. Now if these corn cribs were empty, we'd all have something to worry about. When United States Steel common stock drops to 50 instead of 100, does that mean that they've got fewer buildings and less equipment than before? Does it mean that you and your family are going to miss even so much as a single meal? Paper profits and paper losses don't make or take away wealth, and you know it as well as I do."

We were just driving over a stretch of the road where a view of the sinking sun was most beautiful. "Take a look at that sun," we said, "and tell us it's not going to come up tomorrow or the next day or ever again. Or that rain won't fall again in Chilton County or anywhere else. When you can prove that those things are going to happen then we'll be worried and not before."

Our friend never likes to admit he's wrong but he knew from experience that when he doesn't argue back, he's convinced, and didn't have anything to say. He had his old time grin and his hearty handshake when he jumped into his car and started for Chicago, and we went back to the office and worried about how we're going to collect a lot of past due accounts.

O-O-O

We might be interested in a prize offered for the nation's outstanding hero, if it weren't for the fact that dead men can so rarely enjoy the reward money.

Idiot's Delight

Yesterday we almost saw what happens when an irrefutable force meets and immovable object. Two automobiles kissed fenders at the corner of a well known street but succeeded in avoiding a serious crash. Both drivers were approaching the intersection at the same time. Both tried to bluff the other fellow out. Both had to slam on their brakes at the last minute. Both scowled at the other with great self-righteous indignation as they started up again and went on their ways. Both lost far more energy and time and peace of mind than if one had courteously waved the other fellow ahead.

We recognized both drivers. Neither of these fellows ever seems to be in much of a hurry about anything. So the near smashup was not the result of either of them trying to save time. Also, both of these gentlemen are as pleasant and amiable gentlemen as you'll find in Chilton County—that is, until they get back of a wheel. Then something must click in their brains and their whole personality changes. They become different men.

If you were to meet either of these men face to face on a single plank walk over a muddy road, we believe he would step off to let you go by. He would get a lot of satisfaction out of being courteous. But when his foot is on the gas he gets the same satisfaction out of being discourteous.

Of course if there were only two drivers like that, they wouldn't be worth talking about. But there are so many of them abroad that they were responsible in large measure for the 38,000 deaths last year and the increased death rate this year. Here in Chilton county we can apply all the punishment and safety measures ever thought of, but nobody apparently can change the thinking processes of the man with a wheel in his hands and a chip on his shoulder. He seems to feel that he is letting the other fellow get the best of him if he does not beat him out in some way—either by passing him on the road, or beating him across at an intersection.

You tell us when that attitude is going to be changed and courtesy take the place of discourtesy and we will tell you when nations will stop going to war.

O-O-O

Reaction Against Theory

Those advocates of the shorter working day and week might well note the reaction against this philosophy which has occurred in France.

To stabilize the financial structure of that nation it is now found essential to abandon the forty hour week in many industries, and abandon many of the other theories which have been so vociferously argued in every modern nation of the world.

It is nothing surprising, of course, for a reaction to take place in France. The popular front movement there exceeded all bounds of reason and contributed heavily to the financial chaos which followed. It is possible that this reaction may become almost as extreme as the action of the popular front leaders.

But the French people have evidently discovered that utopia is not to be realized merely by doing less and less work, increasing public expenditures merely to provide easy jobs, and enacting legislation to restrict production and shorten hours of employment.

Such policies, when carried too far, inevitably lead to an advance in the cost of living, a loss of export trade, and eventual buyers' strike. Thus unemployment is created by measures designed to reduce unemployment, and financial chaos develops where stability is the objective.

We believe that the time is not far off when the people of our country and of every other nation will be forced to realize that hasty and ill considered legislation which restricts, regulates and controls the machinery of production will create problems more serious than those it was designed to solve. With that return of common sense we will then be well on our way to the more abundant life which our people almost unanimously desire.

O-O-O

Rated among enemies of highway safety is the fellow with the steering wheel in his hand and a chip on his shoulder.

O-O-O

A friend says that the ill wind he favors is the one that blows all the leaves off his lawn onto his neighbor's property.

O-O-O

It's our opinion that if General Sherman were alive now he would find no reason to change his definition of war.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

The Bible tells us that Methuselah lived to be nine hundred and sixty nine years of age. It also tells us that he was 187 years old when his son Lamech was born; that Lamech was 182 years old when his son Noah was born and that Noah was 600 years old when the flood broke over the face of the earth. When we add these numbers it is quite evident that Methuselah was still living when the flood came and most likely he was drowned with the rest of the people of his day. If the flood had not come there is just no telling how old Methuselah would have lived. As the records stand he lived a long time and he has become famous because of his age, but after all we know but little of him that commends him to the world. About all that can be said of him was that he lived a long time. If he ever did anything that was worth while no one ever heard of it. Of many people today it can be said, "They have lived a long time," but after all it is better to be able to say of any one, "He lived well while he lived." There is honor in old age but there is much more honor in lasting service. Jesus lived thirty three years, but he did something during that time and his life was worth while.

An old story tells us that once upon a time that a man died and God gave him the choice of either going to hell or to heaven. He went down to hell first to look the place over. It was a beautiful place, but the people down there were starting to death. They had plenty to eat spread on the table and they were sitting there using their golden forks, trying ever so hard to get the food into their mouths, but they were too long. The regulations of the place forced them to feed themselves with those golden forks. They grew mad as each one tried to feed himself and could take no food. The man left the place in disgust and he hurried up to heaven to look that place over. In heaven he found that things looked very much like they did in hell. It was a beautiful place, and there were many people sitting around the well filled table, eating and having a jolly good time. He observed that each fellow had as long fork as the folks had in hell, but they were sitting there chatting away and feeding each other across the table. No one tried to feed himself, but with his long fork he lifted the food and held it to the mouth of his neighbor across the table. It is selfishness that makes hell. Happiness comes from helping the other fellow.

I went into a home where there was a feeble minded girl who was just blooming into womanhood. In that home were several other children and they were all bright and lovely. In the vases in the room were flowers beautiful and rare, gathered by the children of the home, but in the center of the room there was a vase filled with weeds and sticks and a few scraggy flowers. The mother gave me to understand that this vase was gathered by the demented child. I understood that mother's heart. She knew that the poor girl had done her best with what she had to do with. Friends, none of us seem so very intelligent in the sight of God, but when we serve him the best that we know how, our Father in Heaven will understand. "Well done" will be spoken to every one of us who have done our best with what we have to do with.

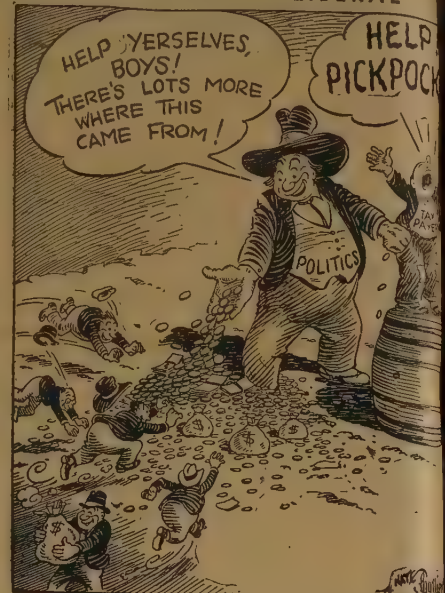

A preacher was making a prohibition speech when the whiskey forces were out to get the State of Alabama to repeal the prohibition laws. He had open state owned stores for the sale of whiskey, when he asked this question three times with increased emphasis: "If we vote in whiskey and then open curate stores, tell me, please, who will drink the whiskey sold?" One of the members of his church was sitting in the center of the church with his wife on one side and his little five-year-old boy on the other side. When the preacher asked that question the third time and then paused for a moment to see if an answer would be given, this little boy jerked his arm and sleeve of his father and looking up into his eyes he said: "You will help them to drink it, won't you, Daddy?" Was that man embarrassed? The little boy knew his daddy and child-like told the truth. That is where the "Negro" is to be found in the woodpile. If church members would stop patronizing the saloons of the state, they would go out of business.

One day I came upon a little boy struggling up a stairway with a scud-dle of coal. I looked at him and he looked at me and I said: "Lawrence, do you love your daddy?" Never shall I forget that answer: "Yes, Daddy, I love you with all of my strength," and he was showing it as he carried the coal into our bed-room. How much do you love God? We claim to love God with all of our soul and yet we refuse to keep our bad thoughts. We claim to love God with all of our strength and yet we refuse to carry burdens for Him. We claim to love God with all of our soul and yet we refuse to keep our hearts unspotted from the world. If you love the Lord with all of your mind, soul, body and strength, then show it by the way you live and labor.

DOLLARS WASTED ON UPKEEP

CAN'T BUY NEW ROADS

For roads seem cheap and easy to build. They stretch a long way so that it covers a big territory. But after a while or two, the trouble begins. Maintenance costs go up. Soon all your paving money is spent on upkeep. . . . no more new roads are built. . . . why it's wise—and economical—to build concrete roads. Concrete lasts! It requires almost no upkeep. Each year, the paving fund builds more miles of concrete until the whole job is done—for keeps: Concrete's smooth, non-skid surface is safe and satisfactory to drive on. It speeds up traffic . . . reduces accidents . . . saves gas, tires and repairs.

Get concrete. Insist on it—for safety, comfort and economy.

ZIEGFELD FOLLIES COMING

Announcement of the coming of ZIEGFELD FOLLIES to Montgomery on FRIDAY, NOV. 23rd at 8:30 P.M., in engagement of ONE performance at the New City Hall Auditorium, Clanton, Ala.

It is indeed the first time in the history that the original and COMPLETE Broadway Production has been sent on tour save to a few key cities in the East.

For three decades ZIEGFELD FOLLIES has maintained its supremacy as the glorifier of the American girl. Since the season of 1907 when the late Franz Ziegfeld first galvanized America with his Saloon of Feminine Loveliness, disclosing to public gaze alluring contours hitherto concealed beneath voluminous garments the very name, ZIEGFELD FOLLIES, has been synonymous with the blurring aura of Aphrodite.

And NOW, come the Messrs. Shubert, whom devotes the honor and responsibility of maintaining the merit and prestige of ZIEGFELD FOLLIES to Outfitted Ziegfeld with the Foremost Exposition of Glamorous Girlhood Ever worked on a Single Stage.

IL ORDERS, accompanied by remittance in full and self-addressed, stamped envelope, will be filled in rotation.

News From County Training School

A school, like any other public institution, is dependent upon the faith and good-will of its public for its continued success. When the public receives its information secondhand the information is many times so changed that the original meaning is quite lost. It is our hope that the public will read this column so that it will always have first-hand information of the news and activities of the school.

Although this section is not a new feature of this paper it is the first column that we have prepared in several years. In this first renewal of our column we wish to express our gratitude to the various agencies and the people of Clanton who have given the new administration and teaching corps of our school such a warm and cordial welcome to the community and in our work. The County Superintendent of Education, Mr. Little, and the County Board of Education, are due no little credit for the kind interest they have shown in our school program and personnel. We are also very grateful to the several parents who have given us their loyal support. Finally we must thank the editor of this paper for the space which he has given us in this paper. Hereafter this column will be edited by the English Department of the Chilton County Training School.

J. T. GAINES, Principal.

The spirit which the classes and teachers are taking into the carnival and coronation makes one want to really sing "Give me that old county spirit." It is hard to tell who will win out. More steam to all enthusiasm begets itself.

The school cafeteria is now open. Each day wholesome and appetizing foods are served at very reasonable rates. The project serves as a laboratory for girls of the Home Economics Department as it is managed by the HomeEckers, the club of that department. Miss Rose V. Lee is the faculty supervisor of the project.

Before the year is much older you will be given the pleasure of witnessing several interesting presentations of the "Players Guild." Already three one-act plays are in production. Foremost among the anticipated plays is "The Intruder," by Maurice Maeterlinck. Miss Thelma Baker of the Sr. II Class, is president of the organization.

Do people still like surprises? For first-hand information ask the new members of the County Training School faculty. During the middle of October the P.T.A. through the co-

Verbena High School News

Last week was National Education week and our chapel programs were planned accordingly. On Wednesday, Nov. 10, we held "open house" and invited all parents to come to school and observe our work. In spite of the rain more parents came this year than last, and were apparently well-pleased. Some mothers were disappointed in their children's work, but as one mother remarked, "The Lord just didn't give my little Amos any sense to learn English."

Dr. Ezell was our chapel speaker Thursday morning. His subject was "Educating for Peace." The whole school enjoyed this Armistice day talk and we invite him back again.

Mr. Henning and his assistants from Alabama College came to the school Monday and gave our students the speech test. One teacher remarked that she wished he would inoculate the pupils to keep them from talking instead of teaching them to talk better.

Our football captain, Leroy Mims, has been out of school for the past week with injuries from playing football.

Verbena High School is having a terrible epidemic. A few of the dames have a mania for inhabiting the boy's side of the building. If anyone has a cure for this disease consult Prof. DuBose.

The Sr. III's have been studying words in English to improve their vocabulary, so if you hear any Seniors spouting big words, don't be surprised. One dignified (???) Senior is walking around with her head in the air because she went to the Alabama-Tech football game. We won't mention any names but if you see a head floating about in the clouds remember, you'll know whom it belongs to.

Mr. DuBose can't get any seniors to answer questions in P. A. G. C. because they are all too busy "shinning up" their new class rings.

The Junior English club was organized last week. The officers are: President, Margaret Eiland; vice-president, Sara Messer; secretary-treasurer, Ray Cell Dennis. Only students with a B average or above are allowed to join.

Permanent Waves — 75c, at The Modern School of Beauty Culture.

operation of Miss Lee and Mr. Gordon provided a surprise reception for the new members of the faculty. Judging by the speeches and smiles we conclude that people still like surprises.

Mrs. Harris and Miss Green, who are taking special courses relative to becoming State Supervisors of Home Improvement in Virginia and Kentucky, respectively, were interesting campus guests last week. They expressed themselves as being favorably impressed with the work of the school. We wish for them outstanding success in their new work.

Patrons and friends of the County Training School are hereby urged to avail themselves of the opportunity to advance their training. Night classes are now open at both the County Training School and at the City School. Courses are offered in keeping with practical needs of each student. The classes meet from 6:00-8:00 P.M. on Mondays and Wednesdays and Thursdays.

The new flag-pole with the attendant flag salute, tends to add much dignity and charm to our student body. We invite the public to witness the activities.

The Enterprise 4-H Club girls met with Miss Grace last Friday for the second meeting this year. Since Miss Grace came a week early, we didn't have a program but our president and Miss Grace discussed with us some of the conditions of our club.

Since each girl is working for a certificate this year, we made some rules to follow regarding the order at each meeting which will also be counted on the certificate. We elected five girls to serve on the Commission Board. They were: Annie Mullins, Beulah Mims, Vera Rushing, Lela Logan and Freddie Cox. Those girls are going to do their best to help everyone else carry out this plan and to keep the following rules:

1. Each officer should perform her duties as required.
2. Each club member should serve on program when asked.
3. Each girl that disturbs the club in any way shall have a point against her record.
4. Each girl must get permission from the president before speaking.
5. No girl shall discuss anything except club work during meetings.
6. Each girl shall talk aloud and not whisper.

After making our rules Miss Grace discussed a school lunch then gave us our text book on Foods, which is going to be our major project, and also our second issue of the club paper which everyone enjoys reading.

Sport News

The basket ball boys are getting the spirit of real basket ball now and it isn't long until the season opens and we hope they will be the "Top Team" in this county this year. They have already played some of the teams just for practice. The scores of the games were: Thorby 9, Enterprise 24; Thorby 7, Enterprise 25; Collins Chapel 7, Enterprise 29. Our boys will go to Collins Chapel to play next Friday afternoon.

The girls also have the spirit of good basket ball playing. They have their suits and are doing some good practice work. They hope to play some interesting games this season. The line-up of the girls is:

Centers, Mitchelne Mims, Freddie Cox; Forwards, Inez Williams, Mary Pearl Griffin; Guards, Clydie Ruth Collins, Lucille Baker.

Under the law November 14, is the last day on which motor vehicle license plates can be purchased without a penalty. November 14, falls on Sunday this year and it will be necessary for motor vehicle owners to purchase their tags before that date. Penalties for failure to purchase such license plates will go into effect on Monday, November 5.

Under Alabama's first Constitution members of the House of Representatives were elected annually and sessions of the legislature were held annually. Members of the Senate held for three years and one-third of the members were elected each year.

The assessment of public utilities in Alabama last year was $190,553,461.00. Of this amount $44,695,867.00 was in Jefferson County and $16,463,553.00 was in Elmore. Jefferson County stands at the head of the list, with Elmore second. The smallest utility assessment is in Choctaw County. The assessment of all public utilities is placed at $277,385.00. The assessment of all property is by only four Counties—Jefferson, Mobile, Montgomery and Tuscaloosa.

The American railroads remain the outstanding transportation industry of the country—dependable—progressive—safe. Despite higher operating costs, increasing taxes and strict regulation, they are giving 50% faster freight service, have reduced loss and damage 80%, and are today hauling all kinds of freight—from sand to silk—at an average cost to the shipper of less than one cent per ton per mile. And although some higher rates have just been granted and others are being sought, if all are allowed the price of railroad transportation would still be cheaper than in recent years.

Freight rates on the L & N are down, too. In 1936 shippers over the L & N saved $28,000,000 in freight charges, compared with what they would have paid at the average rate of 1921.

The L & N is proud of its 87-year record in serving the people of the South and hopes to merit their continued patronage.

Whether you have a shipment to make or a trip to take, any L & N representative will be glad to assist you.

Interesting Letter From Former Chilton Resident Brings Many Worthwhile Thoughts About Farming In Chilton County

The following statements were taken from a most interesting letter written by Claude E. Marcus, of Los Angeles, Calif., to his father, Dr. T. J. Marcus, of Clanton. Claude was at one time a resident of Clanton, and is well known here. He is at present making a fine reputation in the field of promotion, and radio productions and keeps in touch with his home county with the aid of the Chilton County News. After reading the letter, the editor of the News thought it a splendid idea to pass it on to the readers of this newspaper:

"Speaking of looking ahead—Do you suppose the farmers in Chilton County will ever realize the folly of depending upon cotton for a living? Aside from the fact that I hate to think that you have spent the most valuable part of your life ministering to the physical well-being of Chilton County's sick, lame and lazy and have not been able to lay enough aside to enable you to retire, simply because of the ignorance of the county's farmers.

"I have just finished a quick survey of the printed material on the National Administration's sub-marginal land policy and the economic waste of farmers who fail to rotate and diversify their crops. I am also making a study of the new program for the Future Farmers of America as carried out by the high schools in agricultural courses in some of the more progressive sections of the country. I have chosen the Downey High School where I am teaching at night to begin this study. The objectives of the Future Farmers plan are to make farming more pleasant, productive and profitable. The plan of operation is to study agriculture along with his regular academic studies. It has been found that a boy in his formative years will not wait until he is through high school to begin thinking about or starting to prepare for his life's work. When the boy on the farm sees how hard his parents have to work and how unprofitable it is to begin early to think of the day when he is old enough to leave the farm and go to the city where he can get an easier and more profitable job. Due to the fact, that in most instances he has been forced to stop school before completing high school to help the old man, he is not as well equipped for a city job as he is for the farm, consequently, he is lucky if he can get a job as a laborer and in most cases that is all he will ever be.

"The Future Farmers plan of studying agriculture is a very interesting one and has many advantages. The boy already has had experience on the farm. He keeps this contact with the farm alive during his high school days. The idea of earning while learning appeals to everybody and that is what the boy does if he is a Future Farmer. Briefly, it works like this: Each boy is required to take a project which he carries through a complete production cycle. He keeps a complete record of all transactions and is encouraged to earn $100 net his first year in high school, gradually increasing to $1000 his senior year.

"At Downey, last year, the boys had thirty projects, the net earnings of which were $2919.91 or an average of $97.33. Downey is a little town 14 miles from Los Angeles and is the center of a dairying and truck farming section. These kids on these projects have elected to carry on all kinds of projects from soup to nuts so to speak. Dairying, trucking, flowers, poultry, hog raising and fruit growing, however, are the principal activities. A few weeks ago, I was invited to speak before the Rotary Club out there on the advantages of adult education and on the same program was one of the future farmers, a young lad about 18. This will be his fourth year on the project. He had chosen dairying. He began with one pure-bred heifer. Now he has a small herd of six cows and a registered bull. One of his cows is a champion milk producer and this year he won $531.00 in prizes alone at the L. A. County Fair at Pomona and at the State Fair at Sacramento on his herd, beside making a splendid profit on the milk, butter and cream production and sale of calves and bull service.

"Ignorance is to blame for the pitiable situation in Chilton County just as it is in most sections of the South. Chilton County is one of the finest dairy, poultry, hog, sweet potato, peanut, fruit and strawberry sections in Alabama. Several thousand farm boys become of age each year. The majority of them marry and settle on Chilton County farms. In most cases they will raise cotton and corn one year and corn and cotton the next, but with very little corn in any year. Oh, they will have a few downy-neck chickens which will roost on the wagon shaves and a half-dozen piny-woods roaver hogs that can easily drink buttermilk out of a jug and maybe a couple of hide and taller milch cows full of ticks and cockleburrs and think they are diversified farmers. When they have a baby, they will pay the doctor like the fellow in the enclosed cartoon.

"Suppose you will wonder what the heck, I want to be writing along this vein for, I don't know except that it might give you an idea to try to get some of those old Chilton County Mossbacks to stir their stumps and eventually get away from so much cotton and really do some real farming. Of course you will never get any credit for it, no more than you have for being responsible for the county having a health unit or any more than I for starting agitation which ultimately led to a county agent and farm demonstration service.

"Really though, it does seem a shame that potential opportunities in Chilton County, the whole South for that matter should go to waste simply because those charged with responsibility for the improvement of the country are asleep at the switch and the people go along and do not insist upon the advantages which are available.

"Of course, the people, the tax-payers, the voters are primarily to blame. They elect or appoint school officials no more competent to give value received than I would be competent to be president. From the State Superintendent of schools right on down the line to the school trustee in the backwoods district, we depend for leadership upon a host of school officials to shape the policies of our educational institutions and to prescribe courses of study which are about as useful as a buggywhip socket on the windshield of an automobile as far as practical value is concerned. Just think, Dad! The old school board at Vine Hill during the days we kids went to school there is a typical example of rural school boards all over the country. Will Blue, Ed Moore and Murray Russell. Men like that directing the education all activities of a community when they themselves were barely able to write their own names.

"Statistics for 1935 show that Alabama has 273,455 farms and 1,386,074 of the total population of 2,646,000 live on farms, yet the entire student enrollment at Auburn last year was only 2,384. Is there any wonder that the majority of farmers in Chilton County continue to raise cotton above every other farm product. They don't know any better and they won't know any better until the real leaders in the county point the way through education. Not education as it is made available at present, but a practical training based upon facts as they are. I remember when I made the survey before trying to organize the Chilton County Chamber of Commerce or what ever it was, that I found the farmers of the County were buying more farm products from outside the county than they received from their net cotton crop. Well, how long would it take farmers to go broke doing that?

"I notice in the Peoples Cash Store ad in the News last week that the following produce is advertised: Potatoes, cabbage, rutabagas, onions, apples, lettuce, dried peaches, hominy and pure lard. Just for the sake of argument, it would be interesting to visit that store and see where this produce came from. I'll bet a dollar to a dime that none of them came from Chilton County and every one of them could be profitably grown in Chilton County and every one who cares to stop and think, knows they can, for most people have seen them growing. Of course, you can't grow peaches or apples without spraying the trees, nor can you grow lettuce without keeping the cutworms out of it any more than you could render lard in paying quantities from razorback hogs which have had to subsist on dishwater and pine mass.

"Well, I suppose this is enough half-baked economics for one letter. More people are thinking today than ever before and with the modern miracles of radio, the automobile, airplane, etc., it is not quite as easy for the politicians and human exploiters to keep the people in ignorance as it used to be. Maybe we will eventually pull out."

Interesting Sermons At Adventist Church

"This age in which we live is different from every other age of which we have any record. It is an age of inventions, of development of human knowledge and ingenuity, of progress and advancement, or incredible achievement. Nothing has ever been known like it before," asserted Rev. Westermeyer last Sunday night at the Seventh-day Adventist church in his sermon, "1000 Sign In Clanton Which Now Show That The Second Coming Of Christ Is Near."

He stated further, "For five millenniums the world jogged along at an even pace. Noah, Abraham, and Pharaoh would have been very much at home in Europe 125 years ago. Vision of the beginning of the 19th century, with no railroads, no steamship transportation; while telegraph, telephones, bicycles, automobiles, motor cars existed only in the fantastic dreams of the dreamers. Think of the names with no sewing machines or vacuum cleaners, no bathrooms or sanitary plumbing, no electric lights nor even kerosene lamps, no ice or electric refrigeration, no photographs, phonographs or radio. Consider that day when the farms were without moving machines or reapers, steel harrows or cultivators, grain drills or tractors, gang plows or rearing machines, and where the old wooden plow, the scythe, the cradle and other crude tools were the world's best implements of agriculture.

"The prophet Daniel foretold that this drama of progress would occur at the 'time of the end,' and here is the full text of the prophecy: "Daniel, shut up the words, and the book, even to the time of the end; many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall increase."

"With this increase of knowledge the facilities for travel, publishing, radio broadcast, this gospel of kingdom is making its way rapidly all the world and is speaking to hearts of men and women 'Prepare to meet thy God.'"

Mr. Westermeyer, who is pastor of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, Montgomery, will be back in Clanton again for preaching service next Sunday. He will preach at 3 o'clock P.M.; at 7:30, and Sunday night 6:30. Sunday night his topic will be "Can We Know Which Day Of Woe Is The Sabbath For Christ Of Today?" (This sermon will be illustrated with lantern slides.)

Main Forestry Office Is In New Quarters

The main office of the Alabama State Commission of Forestry has been moved from 500 Dexter Avenue, Montgomery, to 5 North Bainbridge Street, facing the State Capitol. This change has been necessitated in order to conform to the progress being made in carrying out the plan of development of the Capitol group of buildings and grounds as prepared several years ago. The old office of the Commission will be removed, leaving that part of the block upon which it has stood to be graded and otherwise developed to conform to the landscape plan adopted.

The Procurement office of the National Park Service, co-operating with the State Park Bureau of the Commission of Forestry, also has been moved from its first location at 119 South Bainbridge Street to the second floor at 7 North Bainbridge Street. The new location adjoins that of the main office of the Commission of Forestry. The Division of State and Private Forestry CCC will remain temporarily in its present quarters at 300 Dexter Avenue. It is expected that, with the completion of additional State buildings through the WPA and other Federal assistance, all of the offices of the State Commission of Forestry ultimately will be grouped in a single building.

IN-MEMORY OF MRS W. H. RUSH

The death angel came Tuesday morning at 8:30, Nov. 9, and took our dear uncle Rush to his heavenly home. Our hearts are sad and lonely for those smiles and loving words that we cannot have any more, but we are thankful to our Lord that he was spared for us as long as he was. He was 72 years old. He leaves to mourn his loss, his loving wife, Ida Logan Rush, three sons Eugene of Lomax, Earl of Birmingham, Virgil of Tennessee.

Our loss is heaven's gain and we know the Lord doeth all things well.

Funeral services were held Wednesday at the Christian church, Plantersville, Rev. Lee officiating. Burial was in Plantersville cemetery.

We wish to thank our many friends for being so kind and thoughtful and for the many floral offerings.

A Nearby Market for Alabama Cotton

The cotton mills of Alabama consume an average of 667,777 bales of cotton each year. This assures the Alabama cotton-grower a ready, nearby market for his cotton.

A large part of this cotton is trucked directly from the gin to the mill, which enables the farmer to get a better price for his cotton than if it had to be shipped to a mill in a distant state.

The value of Alabama's cotton crop is increased by over thirty-four million dollars annually, through its conversion into yarn, thread and fabrics in textile mills within the state.

PILOT CLUBS

The banquet was followed by a dance in the lobby of the hotel. Music was furnished by The Clanton Orchestra, and young men of Clanton acted as escorts for the Pilots.

On Sunday morning, breakfast was served at Mitchell Dam at nine o'clock, in the large dining room of the guest house of the Alabama Power Company. There, a business session was also held. John Hollis, superintendent of the hydro-electric plant, conducted a tour through the dam and over a part of the reservation.

The following resolution was adopted at the business session: "Whereas the Pilot Club of Clanton has made it possible to conduct to a successful close this fall meeting of District No. 1 of Pilot International; and over the fact that our International "Whereas we are all extremely happy President, Hester Bingham, has been with us at this time; and "Whereas the Chilton County News has given splendid publicity to the meeting; and

"Whereas C. Fenn Jones, Mayor of Clanton, was very gracious in turning the keys of the city over to the Pilots during the convention; and "Whereas the Thomason Hotel has extended to visiting Pilots such a hospitable welcome and so many courtesies; and

"Whereas the Kiwanis Club and the Clanton Orchestra were very generous in assisting at the dance held on Saturday night, November 13, 1937; and "Whereas John Hollis has made it possible to have a lovely breakfast at Mitchell Dam, and Mrs. Hollis honored us with her presence; and

"Whereas, the Wrigley Jr. Co., the Brown Shoe Co., the Birmingham Paper Company and the White Water Flour Mills donated; and

"Whereas, Sanford-Chapman Piano Company of Montgomery, loaned a piano to be used during the convention; "Now, therefore, Be It Resolved: "That this convention body go on record as expressing to the Clanton Club and the many friends above named, our sincere thanks and appreciation for the beautiful entertainment provided and the help and cooperation given during this convention.

KLINNER-DICKERSON

The marriage of Miss Alma Klinner, daughter of Mr. W.W. Klinner, Maplesville, to Wilton Dickerson of Clanton, took place at a simple but impressive ceremony Sunday morning at the home of Mrs. Ben Colley in Birmingham. The Rev. John P. Bishop performed the ceremony in the presence of a few close friends and relatives of the bride and groom.

The bride and groom were attended by Mrs. Ben Colley, sister of the groom and K.V. Klinner, Clanton, brother of the bride. She wore a costume of brown crepe of lovely mode, with brown accessories.

Following the ceremony Mr. Dickerson and his bride left for the wedding trip.

The bride was favorably known both here and in Birmingham. She attended high school at the county high school and at Alabama College Montevallo.

For the last eight years she has worked in the Birmingham Trust & Savings Bank.

Mr. Dickerson was formerly a teacher in this county. For the last several years he has been connected with the furniture business. He now holds a position with the Klinner Furniture Co. of this city.

LISTER HILL

Senator, is evidenced by the following statement written by Atticus Mullin, one of the state's most observant political writers. In Chilton County, close observers of political matters indicate that the county will give Congressman Hill a safe count over his opponent, J. Thomas Hefflin, in the senatorial election on January 4th.

LEADER WHO LEFT THEM

"The writer heard Congressman Lister Hill, candidate for the United States Senate, deliver two speeches in Henry County Saturday and also heard a part of a speech former Senator J. Thomas Hefflin made in Dothan which was broadcast by the radio.

"Congressman Hill did not waste the time of his audiences, either in Headland or Abbeville, in telling jokes. He did not mention his opponent of the white tie and white shirt and long tailed coat. He went into the subject that is engaging the attention of the American people and the people of Alabama at the present time. And for an hour, both at Headland and Abbeville, Congressman Hill discussed issues vital to every Alabamian.

Speeches In Contrast

"While former Senator Hefflin, the pollywog who didn't vote as he advised his followers to vote, that is against Al Smith, told him he would have made the price of cotton 15 cents if he had been in Congress, (in spite of the fact that the South has raised the greatest cotton crop in history). Congressman Hill told how President Roosevelt and the Democratic administration in Washington were working with might and main to do something for the farmers in spite of the fact that if there is not a single bale of cotton raised in the United States next year, the mills of the country and all the exports cannot possibly consume the carryover surplus, much less encourage farmers of the South to produce another record-breaking crop and promising 15 cents for every pound.

"The difference between the public addresses of the two candidates for the United States Senate, delivered within less than 20 miles of each other, was really ludicrous. Hefflin said if he had been in the Senate 15-cent cotton would have been a certainty. Cotton farmers told the writer if Roosevelt had not been President and if a cotton loan of nine cents had not been decided upon, with 12 cents next Spring as the difference between what the farmer sold or loaned his cotton and 12 cents, the price would have dropped below five cents this year.

Sentiment Reversed

"The writer was in Headland and Abbeville more than two weeks ago and at that time we conceded that Tom Hefflin would carry Henry County. But now he hasn't a chance to carry the county and visitors from Houston County told us that Houston, already a Hill county, would continue the Hill swing and roll up a tremendous majority for the friend of Roosevelt.

"We were surprised at the swing away from 'Cotton Tom.' In the first place it has become talk in the circles that the former senator, during 30 years in Congress, never passed a bill that carried his name. He was a speechmaker and jokester and of course made Alabama a joke State. He did get through Congress, so the writer heard in Headland, a joint resolution at one time.

"We found many men who were led off by Hefflin in 1928 and who voted for Hoover where Hefflin refused openly and publicly to vote for Hoover, who were sore at him for leading them into the 'fire-eater' line of real Democrats and where he could not get it himself and stayed in the dugout behind the lines.

"The swing away from Hefflin in Henry was so noticeable that we were really surprised at it. Hefflin's idea of terming Congressman Hill a boy and things like that does not set well down there where they know Hill has been in Congress six terms and is a large figure in Congress and the head of one of that body's most important committees.

Hefflin's attacks on Hill are like the attacks he made on other Democrats in the past and they are making votes for Hill who is a Democrat."

Less Monthly Discomfort

Many women, who formerly suffered from a weak, run-down condition as a result of poor assimilation of food, say they benefited by taking CARDUI, a special medicine for women. They found it helped to increase the appetite and improve digestion, thereby bringing them more strength from their food.

Naturally there is less discomfort at monthly periods when the system has been strengthened and the various functions restored and regulated.

Cardui, praised by thousands of women, is well worth trying. Of course, if not benefited, consult a physician.

Dog Owners Warned About Vaccination

The following statement was issued this week by Dr. W. L. Parrish, rabies doctor for this county:
This is to notify all persons now having a dog that has not been vaccinated, to be on the look-out for the pick-up man. As this is a State law, the health and well-being of the people and livestock of the county, is at stake, we are expecting the people to cooperate with us by notifying us there is a dog in their community that has not been given the anti-rabies shot. Dog owners may also be called upon to show their vaccination certificates on the animals.
In these few months, since more dogs have been vaccinated, you no doubt, have almost forgotten about dog tags. We urge you to cooperate and comply with this law, for your safety and the safety of your neighbors.

HILL SPEAKS RECENTLY AT CROSSVILLE

Exposes Plan to Defeat Him Says Money Is Behind Opponent

Crossville, Ala., November 19.—(Special).—Speaking here at Crossville's Annual Homecoming today, Congressman Lister Hill, Candidate for the United States Senate, told an enthusiastic audience that "in coming to you and asking for your suffrage, I have no commitments; I have no alliances with any group or faction in Alabama; I come on my record and on my support of the objectives of the Democratic National Administration in Washington."

Recalling the economic conditions of four years ago, the Candidate reviewed legislation passed "to bring this nation out of the depths of the depression."

"We passed the legislation for the great Public Works Program; and you know how, under that program, we not only provided jobs for thousands and millions of men and women; but here in Alabama we got roads and highways and bridges and streets and sidewalks built, constructed and paved many school houses erected all over the state, Civil Centers, Community Centers, sewerage systems, sanitary systems, great public health projects."

The speaker pointed out that Alabama had benefitted some four hun-

WARNING IS GIVEN AUTO DRIVERS HERE

Patrolmen Must Check All Drivers For License, And Other Items

A general warning was issued this week by Highway Patrolman Wallace Waites and Earl Henley to drivers of motor vehicles in Chilton County. Their statement came following strict orders from the state patrol headquarters regarding drivers' license and other highway laws.

The patrolmen stationed in this county advised that they will stop every motorist possible within the next thirty days for checking of drivers license. They also pointed out the small charge for these licenses as compared with the usual fine and costs amounting to $16.50, for failing to have a drivers license.

Trucks will also be well checked for proper brakes, and the patrolmen stated. And all vehicles will be checked for proper brakes. They also advised that orders are to tighten down on vehicles having no tail light and only one head light burning at night. It is understood that considerable complaint has been registered by motorists on Alabama highways about improper lighting of vehicles traveling at night.

36 Arrests Made

Thirty-six arrests were made by Patrolmen Waites and Henley in this county during the past thirty days, according to their records.

These arrests included 3 for speeding; 2 for passing on hills; 14 not having drivers license; 4 reckless driving; 1 public drunkenness; 2 violating flag and flare law; 1 no brakes; 4 driving while intoxicated; 2 violating carrier act; 1 hit-and-run and 2 for improper lights.

Verbena Girl Wins Medal In Contest

The Chilton County champion in the 1937 4-H Club Food Preparation Contest is Miss Helen Patterson, of Verbena, Ala.

Winning of the contest in the county entitles the champion to the Servel Electrolux gold medal of honor which is awarded by the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work in Chicago.

Approximately 75,000 4-H girls from all parts of the United States participated in the contest in which college scholarships and kerosene-operated refrigerators are awarded national and sectional winners.

Announcement of national winners will be made at the 4-H Club Congress in Chicago to be held November 26 to December 4. The national contest is supported by Servel, Inc., refrigerator manufacturers at Evansville, Ind.

Man Drops Dead At Courthouse Saturday

The victim of a heart attack, Major Lewis Foshee, age 66, died suddenly Sunday morning about eleven o'clock in the sheriff's office at the courthouse. Mr. Foshee was attending to business and had just stepped from the sheriff's office when he fell. He died almost instantly when he was placed in a chair there.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon with the Rev. Green officiating. Interment followed in the Jemison cemetery with Spigener in charge.

The deceased was a life-long resident of Jemison and widely known. He is survived by his widow, two sons, Albert and Earl, of Jemison; two daughters, Mrs. Lee Sewell, of Montgomery and Miss Laura Foshee, of Jemison.

MACHINES FOR VOTING BEING TALKED ABOUT

Alabama Man Gets Order For Machines For City Of Tampa

With several states now using the automatic voting machines in all sections, it appears that Alabama will soon hear about these modern devices.

D. E. Manasco, of Birmingham, and widely known over the entire state, recently was instrumental in placing ninety-three electric voting machines in Tampa, Fla., at a cost of $111,000. He has been selected to handle public policy and finances for the Shoup Voting Machine Co., of Philadelphia, Pa. Mr. Manasco was also chairman of the committee on the repeal of the prohibition laws in Alabama, although he is a "teetotaler" himself. He is a close political observer and knows his way around in the state.

It was learned that considerable opposition was met by Mr. Manasco and the Shoup Company in their efforts to place voting machines in the Florida city, but they were successful.
Mr. Manasco stated that the day is nearing when the people will demand methods in elections whereby they will know they are receiving an honest count of votes. He has been for sometime, chief tax consultant for a number of Alabama corporations and individuals and is well acquainted in Chilton County.

100-GALLON STILL NABBED BY OFFICERS RECENTLY

Sheriff Hardy reported the raiding of a 100-gallon whiskey still the early part of last week. The still was located in the eastern part of the county, near the river.

No arrests were made, although county officers watched the outfit some time. Approximately sixty gallons of mash were destroyed along with the drum outfit.

Prospects Brighter For County's Berry Crop

WIDENING OF HIGHWAY THRU CHILTON URGED

Arrangements Being Made For Right-Of-Way In This County Now

This county will soon come in for its share of the widening of the Birmingham Highway, according to a statement made Monday by Judge J.
Lee Smith.

Judge Smith stated that arrangements are underway now to secure the necessary right-of-way from Jemison, north to the Shelby County line so that two feet more may be added to the paved road. This will make the highway twenty feet wide instead of eighteen feet and is a much needed improvement.

It was also stated by Judge Smith that the county would insist on the highway department widening the road through the entire county. Considerable improvement has already been made in the highway through Shelby and parts of Jefferson counties.

Hefflin To Speak In Clanton On Saturday

Announcement was made in Clanton Monday to the effect that former United States Senator J. Thomas Hefflin would speak in Clanton on Saturday afternoon of this week, at the courthouse.

The address is scheduled for two o'clock in the afternoon and will be in behalf of his candidacy for Senator. Just who will introduce the former Senator was not announced as the News went to press.

Guests From Germany France, Mexico Coming

The weekly meeting of the Clanton Kiwanis Club, to be held on Thursday night, December 2nd, will be of great interest to a special turkey dinner brought to the unusual program that has been arranged.

The program will be in charge of Luther E. Little, county superintendent of education, and chairman of the Educational Committee of the club. Mr.
Little announced that the program will be in the form of an International meeting and has arranged for three exchange college students from three foreign countries to be present.

Young ladies from Germany, France and Mexico will take part on the program which also includes Senorita Carmen Sierra Abadino, of Mexico City, who has endeared herself to many residents of Clanton during frequent visits here. She is a student at Alabama College, Montevallo, and will bring with her, Miss Elizabeth May as dancing partner and Miss Edna Hayes as accompanist. A special musical program will also be rendered, Mr.
Little stated.

NELL'S EAT SHOPPE TO HAVE SPECIAL DINNERS

Shoppe appearing in the News this week calls attention to a special turkey dinner for Thanksgiving Day. Special prices will be given families or parties for Thanksgiving dinner on that day.
Reservations must be made beforehand.

Truett Will Remain Methodist Pastor

Following the adjourning of the one hundred and ninety-fifth session of the Alabama Conference, Methodist Episcopal church, South, in Marianna, Fla., last Sunday, it was announced that the Rev. J. M. Truett would remain as pastor of the Clanton Methodist church.

Mr. Truett and his family have made hundreds of friends since coming here recently and are now enjoying the recently erected parsonage.

HOT DOG SUPPER

The Shiloh Epworth League is

J. THOMAS HEFLIN
Will speak in Clanton at the courthouse Saturday afternoon at two o'clock.

NEW HEALTH OFFICER FOR COUNTY NAM'D

Dr. Kimmey Resigned, Goes To Anniston; Dr. Sturkie Comes Here

Chilton County has a new county health officer in the person of Dr. S. D.
Sturkie, who fills the vacancy caused by the recent resignation of Dr. J. M.
Kimmey.

Dr. Sturkie served as county health officer of Blount County from February, 1934, until September, 1936, when he was elected to the position of county health officer at the School of Hygiene and Public Health at Johns Hopkins, Baltimore, Md. He also served as temporary health officer for Calhoun County from June to November this year.

Dr. Kimmey left last week for Anniston where he will assume duties as health officer. His successor comes to this county highly recommended and a warm welcome is extended to him in his new home.

Special Grand Jury Set For November 30

A special session of the grand jury of Chilton County has been called by Hon. Arthur Glover, judge of the 19th judicial circuit, for Tuesday, November 30th, according to an announcement from Hon. J. C. Pattillo, circuit clerk.

E. Spann Jones is foreman and the call from Judge Glover stated that the jury would investigate any matter brought to their attention and attend to any business necessary at the time.

A non-jury term of circuit court of this county has also been set by Judge Glover for December 2, 3, and 4th, Mr.
Pattillo stated.

REUBEN LOWE BAGS 4-POINT BUCK IN SOUTH ALABAMA

Among the deer hunters of Chilton County are R. W. Lowe, of South Clanton, and Dr. E. R. Odum. These two men spent last week-end in Sumter County on a deer hunt, and Mr. Lowe bagged a fine four-point buck.

FARMERS ARE BEING URGED ORDER PLANTS

Demand For Berries To Be Greater, Is View Of Planters Here

Farmers in general and strawberry growers in particular in Chilton County should awake to the fact that prospects in the strawberry markets are looking brighter than ever, is the opinion expressed in Clanton this week by several of the outstanding berry growers of the county.

Due to past arrangements in marketing the berries from Chilton County the eastern markets were flooded at the very time Chilton's berries were heaviest and ripest, consequently there was little demand for the best of the berries. That condition, however has been remedied to a great extent, it was stated, by a new system of coldpack, which enables berries to be held for sometime before going to the consumer. In other words, cold-packing the berries (freezing them in containers) places them on the markets almost the year round.

Local growers and those anticipating growing strawberries in the county are being urged now to place their orders for plants at the earliest possible moment, according to L. E. Diefen-derfer and J. N. Dennis, of Clanton, both of whom take a great interest in this money-crop of the county.

This idea was brought about by the past experiences of growers in this county failing to receive plants when needed. Planting will probably begin here during the latter part of January. It was also stated that Roy Roper, of Clanton, and E. H. Headley, have state inspected plants available for sale, and orders to other planters should be arranged now so that the plants may be contracted for in large quantities.

Mr. Diefenderfer, who is a close observer of the berry markets, stated this week that every farmer in the county should plan to use a small acreage this year for berries. He believes that the market will be good on the next crop, provided the growers start early enough to secure their plants.

SHOWING OF NEW FORDS IS SET FOR TUES.

Public Invited To Inspect New Cars In Clanton November 30th

An event that is looked forward to with much interest annually is the showing of the new Ford automobiles by Clanton Motors, Inc., local Ford dealers. This year the new 1938 Ford cars will be displayed on the showrooms of the local dealers on Tuesday, November 30th, according to an announcement appearing elsewhere in this issue of the News.

The announcement goes on to state that the new Ford V-8 cars, both the large and the smaller, have new and distinctive body lines, entirely different this year. The larger car is known as the '85' and the smaller known as the '65' with no difference in body sizes or styles. The difference comes in the size and horsepower of the motors.

A cordial invitation is extended by Clanton Motors to the general public to visit their showrooms on Tuesday, November 30th, which is next Tuesday, and see the new 1938 Ford automobiles.

DOZEN ARRESTS MADE DURING THE WEEK IN THIS COUNTY

Records in the office of the sheriff show that twelve arrests were made in the county during the past week, up to Monday morning. County officers and state Highway Patrolmen Waites and Henley, made the arrests including 3 for not having drivers license; 1 assault and battery; 1 violating prohibition law; 1 assault to murder; 2 burglary; 2 public drunkenness; 1 driving while intoxicated and 1 revoked parole.

Thanksgiving 1937

Not long ago we had occasion to hear an interesting address by the foreign representative of a big corporation. He told of the tension and the spirit of unrest which dominates almost every other nation in the world.

There was little unemployment in most European nations, he explained, because the people were busily engaged in the manufacture of munitions of war. But everywhere class conflicts was simmering. Everyone is wondering when the outbreak will happen. In few nations can a citizen express his own views. In many dictator dominated nations even the young boys are being regimented preparatory for the day when armies will again be on the march and the slaughter of the innocents for the purpose of national aggrandizement will start.

"When I came into New York harbor that statue of Liberty presented a glorious sight," he concluded.

Thoughts of this speech and many similar addresses which we may have an opportunity to hear today seem appropriate to a sincere Thanksgiving day observance.

In spite of all of our worries in spite of our perplexity over some of the strange adjustments being made in our economic order, we remain a comparatively free people, remote from danger of foreign invasion, free from the threat of despotism.

Our frontiers are unarmed and the countries beyond are peopled by friendly neighbors. Our standard of living remains the highest of that in any modern nation. Our abundance of resources is not approaching any point of exhaustion. Class feeling as it is known elsewhere simply does not exist.

For these elements of rare good fortune we have reason to offer a prayer of thanks on November 25, 1937. Don't let the day pass without at least a moment's realization of what good things we have for which to express appreciation.

Who Pays For It?

In the end who pays the cost of advertising?

Like all questions this one cannot be answered briefly and simply. The cost may be paid by the non-advertiser. It may be covered by the manufacturer. But usually it is impossible to prove just who pays the advertising bill.

In rare cases the consumer pays. We do know of a few articles that are higher in price than the non-advertised competitive brands. But such cases are rare. They are offset by the number of advertised commodities that undersell unadvertised items of the same grade and quality.

Sometimes the advertiser pays, but not if his advertising is effective and his business methods efficient. Advertising is part of his sales expense. He gauges it by his volume of business, by results produced.

A manufacturer opens new markets with advertising. This enables him to produce his product on a mass-production basis and thereby effect economies in manufacturing—economies that are more than enough to offset all advertising cost. Who pays the bill in that case?

Advertising must not be regarded as an expense, either by the individual who used it or by the community in general. It is a vital part of the normal expense of distributing an article, of bringing it to the attention of the buyer. By making possible mass production, by eliminating the work of many salesmen, by reaching great numbers of possible buyers at small cost per buyer advertising is a powerful force making for economy in all American business.

o-o-o

Love at first sight, observes a friend, is often followed by divorce at first sight.

Hope As Well As Despair

It is customary for us to regard the period in which we are living as highly uncertain and tense. Today's headlines of war in far-off places, of labor strife, of crime seem laden with dangers which on the morrow may night well destroy mankind.

What would we have thought had we lived in the Dark Ages? Or what were we thinking a few short years ago, when the world was really at war? What of yesterday's headlines?

Mark Sullivan, in his series, "Our Times," reminds us that war, labor strife, crime and hosts of evils have always beset our race. Modern communication and transportation have made us more aware of our dangers, but it is not probable that peril is any more imminent, than in the past.

If we seem to be closer to destruction we may have the consolation of knowing that we have more instruments with which to save ourselves. Certain diseases, such as cancer and infantile paralysis may puzzle modern science, but effective cures for tuberculosis and various death-dealing epidemics have been discovered in recent years. In times past cancer and paralysis took their toll, as they do today, and so did the other scourges. But we are facing our ills and learning slowly to master them. There is no reason to believe that we cannot face economic and social ills with the same confidence in ultimate conquest of them.

o-o-o

The Privilege Of Voting

At a recent school election, 26 of a possible thousand qualified voters in a small Mid-western city cast their ballots.

The reported explanation of this "turn-out"—the ballots were counted in five minutes—"was lack of contest or issue; also, rainy, inclement weather."

Unfortunately, this sort of showing at the polls, in most American communities, is all too frequent. A lively political scrap, even over petty issues, will bring the voters out every time, but when things are running smoothly and it is inconvenient to go to the polling place the prevailing attitude is: "Why bother?"

The greatest possible tribute to democracy would be a virtual hundred per cent turn-out when things are running smoothly. Dictators enforce their "votes of confidence" because they indicate whole-hearted support of their programs. Democracies, where any attempt to prohibit the right to vote would be contested bitterly, might take a leaf from the dictators' notebooks. Only through voluntary expression at the polls they would show that their interest in government was genuine.

The risk of not voting, even at seemingly mild elections, has been demonstrated again and again by minority groups who, noting public apathy, "write in" their own slate of candidates, thus defeating the popular will. But a popular will which fails to function because "there is no contest or issue" deserves the treachery which it sometimes reaps.

There is always one contest in every election, and that is to preserve democracy through application of the voter's franchise

A New Type Of Joy

They say this Christmas that there will be quite a sale of toys representing the good deeds of J. Edgar Hoover and his G-men.

Now a great deal has been said in condemnation of the practice of making toy pistols, miniature soldiers and cannon. And many can remember the time when mothers snatched "dime novels" from youngsters or scolded them for following the serial movie thrillers.

What parents do not always appreciate is the urge for excitement which burns in the youngsters' hearts. How many boys who loved the yarns about Jesse James have become outlaws? How many have been influenced to follow the paths of criminals because they delighted in reading stories of daring men?

One might guess that most of us have fallen along the way, if the toys and books of abstinence really took hold of our everyday actions.

No doubt some of our thrilling experiences were unhealthy. But to compensate is the fact that an outlet for our excitement was provided.

Now we find the toy-makers glorifying the agents of American justice. The thrill of shooting criminals is equal to or surpasses that of being criminals in fancy. And so we satisfy the growing boy and make him despise the underworld.

What a world of difference the conception back of a toy can make!

MORALECHOS

O. W. Haskew

On Monday morning I met a prominent member of my church in the Post office and said to him, "We missed you at church yesterday. What were you doing?" He hesitated for a moment and then replied, "Yes I failed to get to church, but I am ashamed to tell you what I was doing." I concluded that the good brother had been doing something on Sunday that not only kept him away from church, but that made him ashamed of doing it on the Sabbath. Anything that keeps folks from coming to church on Sunday and has in it a tendency to make the guilty feel ashamed should not be indulged in. If laziness keeps you from going to church—be ashamed. If indifference keeps you from going—be ashamed. If if you are doing something on Sunday that you are ashamed to tell and that keeps you from going to church, then be ashamed two times.

A traveler was walking along the water front of a Chinese city and came upon two Chinese who were discussing about three inches apart. They were vehemently telling each other something that the traveler could not understand. Each one was backed by a group of supporters who shouted mightily when a point was scored. This traveler asked his guide the meaning of this gathering, and was told that it was a Chinese fight. The two men stood there for five minutes and not a blow was struck. Finally the traveler said, "How can that be a fight and no blows are passed?" The guide replied, "You do not know our method of fighting, we never strike a blow as long as we can give an idea for the charges made. If either of those two men run out of ideas, then they will turn to their hands, feet and teeth." In China they never resort to blows as long as they can produce an idea, but when ideas give out then they strike. One traveler who was dashed at each others throats when not a word has been spoken, and oft time we fight before we know what it is all about. Even in the World War twelve-foot natives fought like tigers for three years before they knew why and in all probability they would have fought on without knowing if Mr. Wilson had not said, "We are fighting to end war—to make the world safe for Democracy."

I was in a large City spending the night and was awake early in the morning hours. I heard a clock in the hotel strike four. In a few seconds heard another clock strike four. No sooner had I heard the clock than the clock in the Court house declared that it was four o'clock. Then a big clock in a nearby Cathedral sang out with certainty that it was four o'clock. To satisfy myself I looked at the clock and consulted my watch and it told me that it was a little after four. It had not said a word but I believed what it said. It took five minutes for all the near by clocks to get the matter of the morning and I was struck with the correctness of the amount of dogmatism that sounds out from the pulpits of America. Every denomination has its own clock and it strikes with certainty. Go around to another church and you hear a different stroke and it is with certainty. After hearing many positive statements we consult our own beliefs and say that is right. The good part about all those clocks was that each one was striking near the correct time. We may differ as denominations but like those clocks we are each one striking near the truth. We are close together on the fundamentals.

One day I was visiting in a country home and as I walked the front steps a huge dog arose and barked at me at the top of his voice. Evidently he did not like my looks and to be sure I did not like his looks. He walked around to the front steps with his hair bristled and with his teeth showing as if to say that I was not to enter. I decided to try a bluff on him and walked right up to the steps as if the place belonged to me. To my delight when the dog saw this he quivered down and walked back to his bed on the porch. If I had shown signs of fear he most certainly would have been snapping at my legs. That gave me the lesson of pushing my fears into the back ground. If we show confidence in ourselves and walk right up to the thing of which we are afraid, in many cases we will find that we can solve problems and walk right through difficulties. Fear is a bad bed fellow for any one who must face the realities of life.

I was talking to a lady and she had this to say of herself, "Doctor, I am an unusual woman, and you will think so when I tell you that I never remember to have been on time for anything in all of my life. Not once but dozens of times have I tried to catch trains and they would be gone when I reached the depot." I know a man who has to punch a clock when he goes on his job, and he is always checked up from one minute to ten minutes late. Being punctual is one of the finest virtues of life. Why some folks will persistently be late to engagements, to church and to other things than demand punctuality I am not able to see. No one can treat himself fair and not certainly they can not treat other people fair when he comes tagging in late.

There are 5,326 elementary schools in Alabama. Of this number 2,885 are for white people and 2,441 for negroes. These schools are divided into six classes according to the number of teachers employed. There are 2,459 one-teacher schools, 1,148 two-teacher schools, 489 three-teacher schools, 229 four-teacher schools, 145 five-teacher schools, and 856 that employ six or more teachers. There are nearly twice as many one teacher negro schools as white, the number of whites being 888 and the negro schools being 1571. In all other classes the number of white schools exceed the number of negro schools.

A Three-Fold Obligation To My Church—

"Yes sir, I am a church member and I am not ashamed of it. I hope that my church is not ashamed of me."

"Yes, I figured this thing out. I think that I owe my church certain things. I call this obligation my 'Three-fold Obligation.' I will tell you what it is. First: Pray It Up.

"I believe that every Christian should remember his church in his prayers. The church brings God to me, why should I not try to bring God to my church. This is an obligation of first importance.

"We have the habit of expecting the minister to pray for us. Why should we not pray for him? I try to do it. If my church falls down on some task or my minister fails to register in some particular sermon I always feel a little guilty. Maybe I did not pray for him as I should.

Second: Say It Up

"If it were not to get the rhyme I would just say, 'Talk it up.' Every place I go I try to say a good word for the church. When men get together and someone remarks that the church is an outworn institution I get in my say, I remind folks that people still have worries and that babies still die. I guess that modern civilization has made it no easier for the mother who stands at an empty grave than it was a hundred years ago. There is only one answer for these things. That is God.

"Even in some church societies people talk about everything except the church. If we could turn the energy consumed in just plain gossip into verbal publicity for the church I am sure that our pews would be filled and our preachers grow eloquent.

Third: Pay It Up

"Pray it up! Say it up! Pay it up! But it isn't necessary for me to say anything about that—is it?" "Every good church member knows how badly money is needed. So his pledge is paid up to-date."

1938 POULTRY AND EGG OUTLOOK IS SUMMARIZED

In sizing up the poultry, egg and turkey outlook for next year, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics expects: The feed-egg price situation to improve from the producer's viewpoint, and early 1938 to be much more favorable than a year earlier.

The Spring hatch in 1938, therefore, to be greater than the spring hatch in 1937.

Poultry marketing to be less than those of a year earlier from July 1937 to June 1938 because of the small 1937 hatch, and to exceed marketings in the remainder of 1938 because of the larger 1938 hatch;

Poultry consumption to be under that of a year previous in the period July 1937 to June 1938 and to be above for the remainder of 1938.

Fall and winter broiler production in 1937-38, to be heavy but prices expected to be correspondingly depressed except possibly for shipments in view of the smaller supply of other meats;

Poultry storage stocks, first 1938 to be above average but the heavy summer carry-over but much below 1937;

Turkey production in 1937 about 10 per cent less than the crop of 1936;

The turkey hatch in 1938 to be larger than the hatch in 1937;

Turkey prices to be less than those above 1935 and to decline in 1938 with the prospective crop;

Chicken prices to advance in mid July-December 1937 and to be expected to be above 1937 during first half of 1938, they will be under during the last half;

Laying flock size to reach a low point early in 1938;

The egg production period 1938 to be under that of 1937 except in 1938 to be less than 1937;

Egg storage stocks, last half of 1938 to be much less than in 1937;

Egg prices throughout 1938 above corresponding periods of 1937.

MOST CARRY-OVER COTTON FOUND TO BE TENDER

A survey by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics shows that the cotton carry-over is not excessively tenderable or unsalable as has been reported.

The bureau inquired into the over records for the 1928-37 season and found that the carry-over included large quantities of "unsalable" cotton or an excessive amount of tenderable cotton. It found that over 1 per cent of upland cotton was of lower grade than the best of the established grades, and only about 12 per cent was unsalable.

The clerk was out of his bunk, then, advancing in the moonlight, one hand extended in pleading. "Stay where you are, Rich."

Shaw's eyes, sweeping the re- cesses of the room as Conrad halted, had fallen on a garment lying across a bench in the moonlight. It was a cloak, a woman's cloak; a long cloak, of heavy, maroon stuff. And, at sight of it, his heart seemed to stand still in his breast.

He had seen that cloak before. He had held the figure, wrapped within its folds, in his arms. An- nette Leclere's cloak... Here? She must be here, then. And an odd compound of emotions ran him; rage and jealousy and regret. Regret! That was odd, for a trader out to kill. Odd, indeed! So odd that it unstayed him, almost frightened him. The regret was that the cloak lay here, instead of in his quarters!

So she had come all this way to Rickman, who would not remain with her, despite her public kisses and embraces! A definite sickness ran through him.

Where was Rickman? None knew. Gone, then? Expecting a revenge- ful sally such as this? Hiding? Fearful of retribution?

Ah, could Shaw have guessed the truth! Could he have but known that he walked into a trap!

CHILTON COUNTY BOARD ORGANIZES NIGHT SCHOOL

Evening classes in Radio, Shop Arith- metic and Show Card Writing has been organized at the Chilton County High School. The class in Radio and Shop Arithmetic meets on Monday and Wed- nesday evenings at seven o'clock. The class in Show Card Writing meets on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at seven o'clock.

Other courses will be organized if there is a sufficient demand for ad- ditional classes.

A course in Textiles has been or- ganized at the Alabama Mills. This class is for people employed at the Alabama Mills or people who wish to seek employment in the textile indus- try.

There are two classes for colored people at the colored school. These classes are in Arithmetic and Nursing. See the teacher at the Colored Ele- mentary School for detail information.

All these classes have large attend- ance except the class in Shop Arith- metic and only a few more may en- ter this class. Should anyone wish to enter this class meet with them Wed- nesday evening at seven o'clock, or see Mr. Hicks or Evans at the High School this week.

These classes are made possible by the Chilton County Board of Educa- tion through its departments of Trades and Industries. There is no fee or charge for any of the classes, and they are open to anyone in Chilton County who is 16 years of age or older and not attending any public elem- entary or high school.

These various courses offer the people of Chilton County an opportunity to obtain more technical and general knowledge, while they are employed. Trained men and women are in demand and can always get more for their services than the untrained person. There- fore, may we urge you to enroll in one of these courses and get some train- ing that will make you more capable and more serviceable.

WILLIAM HENRY RUSH
Funeral services for W. H. Rush was held Wednesday, November 10, at Plantersville Christian Church at 2:30 o'clock.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ida Logan Rush, one brother, Mr. Mel- ton Rush, all of Plantersville, Ala.; three sons, Earl Rush of Birmingham, Virgil Rush of Tennessee, Gene Rush of Lomax. He has three granddaugh- ters, Dorothy Jean and Memorie Rush of Lomax and Martha Earline Rush of Birmingham; two grandsons, Will Porter and Gifton Eugenia Rush, Jr., of Lomax.

A burglar broke into the American Legion headquarters at Jamaica Plain, Mass., and stole three rifles. Several nights later he broke in again—and returned the guns. He has not been caught.

Demonstration Club at Thorsby

The Thorsby Demonstration Club met at the Campus Cottage of Thorsby Institute on November 17. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. J.H. Goddard, with reading of the scripture and prayer. Mrs. Tom Lesley is Secretary, and there four leaders. Miss Meta E. Grace, who is County Demonstration Agent, was present. Mrs. H.K. Christensen, who is County Counselor, led the program. The subject was "Economic Living in Household Buying." There was also a short play, "Neighbors At The Grocery Store." There were 21 members present. A most interesting meeting was held.

The leader had brought samples of canned and bottled goods, grapejuice, peanut butter, honey, canned peaches, syrup, etc. Two samples of each, of different sizes and prices. The leader emphasized the reading of labels on cans in order to know the brand, weights, and prices of what you were buying, so that the buyer might be able to compute which of the two containers would be the best to buy, as to quantity of contents and comparative price. There are many chances of making mistakes if the buyer depends upon appearances of packages instead of reading labels. For instance, one box of soap heads is considerably larger than the other. The large box contains 22 and one-half ounces of soap, the smaller 32 and one-half ounces. Knowing the cost of a package, means little unless the buyer also knows how much the package contains. It is well to know the number of canned goods, whether No. 1, No. 2, or No. 2½. A No. 2 can holds two and one-half cup fulls, while a No. 2½ can holds three and one-half cup fulls. Also read labels to know facts about the uncooked grain. Prices also vary in the same neighborhood. Shop around and pay cash. Either orange, grapefruit or tomato juice contain vitamin C, one of these should be consumed every day if possible. Buy in the largest containers you can use without the risk of loss. This is a good rule to follow. The play "Neighbors at the Grocery Store," the parts were taken by Mrs. H.K. Christensen as grocery woman. Mrs. Jim Collins, a customer who did not plan her buying, and Mrs. C.M. Williams, a customer who read labels, knew what she wanted, also knew prices and contents. It was a most interesting play and gave much information for the buyer.

On Saturday, November 20, the Eastern Star Chapter, had a meeting. Official visits from some of the State officers were there. Thosby attendance rather low. Leila Halliday, W.G.M.; Mrs. B.B. McGowan, W.G.P.; Mrs. Dorothy Gillet, G. Con.; Mrs. Lesley Myers, Mrs. Nora Clements and there were also present, Mr. Schive, and two nieces, Mrs. Berg and Mrs. Broderen from Chicago. A very nice and profitable afternoon was had together. A light luncheon was served by the hostess chapter.

Thorsby Jr. High School News

The writer regrets that he has been unable to collect and send in the school news for the past three weeks. Other school duties have commanded his time and attention, to the extent that this feature was unwillingly omitted.

The past two weeks have found the Jr. 2 and Jr. 3 Classes assembled in the newly added rooms. This necessitated a complete change in the schedule and a reorganization of the school policy. Thus, we are now progressing nicely through the new arrangement.

Among the added equipment to the school, were a number of select books for the library, and tools for the work shop.

Assignments are now being made for the Negro Minstrel, which we hope to stage at some date between the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays. Keep this announcement in mind for we hope to make this entertainment the classiest and most enjoyable which Thorsby has yet witnessed.

Week before last was observed over the nation as National Educational Week, whereby all patrons and friends of the various schools were urged to visit their school and observe the classiest and most enjoyable which Thorsby has yet witnessed. Due to the rainy and inclement weather many parents were withheld this privilege. The Thorsby faculty extends to you a most cordial welcome to visit your school at any time most convenient to yourself.

The entertainment sponsored recently by our local P.T.A. was declared a most pleasing success. A full auditorium registered their hearty approval in a most pleasing manner. Gross proceeds were $59.58. The P.T.A. will apply their share to the payment in full of the stage curtain.

The Jr. High girls are taking keen interest in athletics. Several of the students are drilling conscientiously in an effort to build a team worthy of representing the school in interschool matches. Any of the Jr. High schools having girls teams and who might be desirous of arranging two or three games this season, write, either Mr. B. Johnson or Miss Arria B. Jones.

The boys practice has been rather erratic for the past two weeks, due to the reorganization of our school program, the absence of several of the players, unfavorable weather, and other minor factors. We are hoping to be ready when the first gong is sounded the first week in December, for the opening of the County Jr. High School Basketball League. A new candidate was added to the list of ball players several days ago, in the person of Clinton Edson. Clinton hails from Mt. Pleasant, the school that trimmed every team in the county last season and then moved on in the county tourney and clipped off the championship honors there.

We deeply regret the loss of one of our beloved schoolmates, Mack Askins, who returns to Enterprise. Mack was a conscientious student and a fine, great prize, a great prize, a great prize for the ball club and won the friendship of many by his keen, scrappy attitude in playing the game. Again we say, we regret losing you, Mack, but our best regards for you, and we wish you a great season with your old team-mates of Enterprise.

The Thorsby Independents suffered the loss of two games last week. The first to the strong Mitchell Dam quint, and the latter to the Plantersville team. The loss of the first game was a one-sided affair after the third quarter began, and our boys found no little difficulty in netting the Mitchell Dam defense. They were badly off in shooting, consequently their beautiful passwork went for naught. On the other side, the Dammers were doing everything just about right. They executed some clever passing and apparently couldn't miss the hoop. The Plantersville game was a much closer fought game, from the standpoint of score. Only four points separated the two at the end. The Independents will go to Plantersville on Thursday night, December 2, for a return game, and we hope to arrange a game with our boys' Jr. High team with that of the Stanton team, on the same night, for a later announcement concerning the latter.

Junior Marcus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Marcus, was seriously injured last Saturday by falling from a wagon. It was at first thought that his skull was fractured, but fortunately, not true. He has returned home from the hospital and we trust that he will soon be back in school.

The Science Department has just received a new shipment of laboratory equipment. This will greatly facilitate the experimental work of the Jr. High classes.

Mrs. Dera Rowell Gentry of Detroit, Mich., who formerly taught in our school, has returned to Thorsby to live.

A Thanksgiving program will be given at the Thorsby Baptist Church on Thursday morning, November 25, at 10 o'clock. The public is cordially invited.

Coach Robert B. Johnson made a business trip to Birmingham last week end.

School will dismiss on Wednesday, November 24, for the holidays, resuming work the following Monday.

Two new members joined our Jr. 1 and 2 Classes Monday. They were Leroy and Elizabeth Barwick of Americus, Ga.

The Thorsby 4-H Club held its regular monthly meeting on last Wednesday at the school building. Miss Meta E. Grace conducted the 4-H Club girls. They discussed the topic of lunch planning. Mr. Ivey conducted the boys' program, electing new officers and shaping plans for the new year.

Attendance in Jr. High has been especially good the second month. An average of 94.6 per cent was established.

ern Star ladies met with Sister Piper in their regular spend-the-day social. They also did sewing for the needy children in the grammar school, as they always cooperate with the welfare of the P.T.A.

GREETINGS...

This year, The Leader has several very good reasons for saying "Thank You" at this Thanksgiving Season. We have enjoyed the confidence, support and patronage of thousands of customers. We believe we have that confidence and support, and to each of us we extend our warmest Thanksgiving Greetings. The Leader this year, is bringing to this section some of the biggest and most worthwhile values ever shown in clothing, shoes and ready-to-wear. It does not matter what the family needs in clothing, see The Leader first and be convinced of our statement that we "ways Lead In Values."

FAIRVIEW HOME DEM. CLUB

The Fairview Home Demonstration Club met November 16, with a splendid day meeting at the home of Mrs. Morris Keen of Clanton. Eleven members were present and two new members added to the roll. Each member brought a dish and a delicious lunch was enjoyed by all.

After lunch, all assembled in the living room. There was much business discussed; club dues, a price set to pay the expense for each trip to the leadership school and other trips made, and the program for next meeting. The club decided to let each member spend a few nickels for a gift. Bring it to the December meeting and then draw names. After the business a play, "Neighbors At The Grocery Store," was given by Miss Sallie Joe Cox, Mrs. S.E. Jones and Mrs. J.D. Williams. The demonstration was on Food Buying. Mrs. J.D. Williams gave points on how to buy more economical, the qualities, brands, grades and sizes of canned foods. Miss Grace brought two sizes of several different kinds of canned foods to show which would be cheaper to buy and the one you could get more for your money.

A much welcomed guest for the afternoon was Miss Mildred King, who writes for the Birmingham News. She gave us quite an encouraging and complimentary talk.

The club will meet next time with Mrs. Lela Culp on December 21, 1937. Everyone please make a special effort to come so that we may have as wonderful and enjoyable a meeting as our November meeting was.—Reporter, Sallie Joe Cox.

Mrs. W.J. White of Birmingham was the guest of Mrs. M.L. White last week.

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving Day. To grow we are to give thanks. Why grow? Why not every day? To grow is the date set for the annual celebration of a day in 1621, when our fathers, the Pilgrims, together with a few friendly Indians, met to ship and thank God for their plentiful harvest. They had, during the year, suffered great physical hardships. They were giving thanks on the first Thanksgiving Day in 1621 for good supplies of food. If they in our poverty, and in their fear of death, were able to give thanks, how thankful we should be! All they together with much more, in our day. We have comfort in food, in riches, and in homes—material comfort. We fear not death from poison, arrows or scalps. We have no governing our method of worship. We have everything for which to be thankful—our Savior, our God, our church, our friends, our work, our teacher, and innumerable other blessings. Quoting Paul, the apostle, in Romans 5:20, we find that we are commanded always to give thanks for all things. So, my friends, may we each count our blessings, be humbly thankful, not only during the whole day tomorrow, but every day.

Some departments of our Sunday School had an increased attendance last Sunday, but attendance in some departments was off quite a bit. Work for your department this week and have the attendance of your department above par next Sunday. A good message by Mr. John Vanderveer, Jr., was heard and appreciated last Sunday by a group composed of members of the Men's Bible Class, the Phillips Willing Workers, the Philadelp class, and the Wesley Fellowship Class.

As most of you know, we are rejoicing in the return of Dr. Truett as our pastor for another year. Last year Dr. Truett worked faithfully among us right kind of helper he needs of YQV and for us, and merited our every support. Now may each of us put forth his and her greatest efforts to be the right kind of helper he needs of us this year. Be a regular attendant at the preaching services at 11 o'clock A. M., and at 6:30 P. M. each Sunday, and tell him you're glad he is back with us another year.

A HAPPY BIRTHDAY

On Sunday morning, November 21, the children of Mrs. W. B. Salter gathered at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Smith, near Thorbury, to celebrate their mother's birthday.

All the children were present except one daughter, Mrs. O. B. Smith of Jemison, Route 1.

At twelve o'clock a bountiful dinner was spread and all seemed to enjoy the day. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Salter, Wetumpka; Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Salter, daughter, Ann, of Columbus, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Salter, daughters, Alice Lorie; Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Powell, daughter, Grace, all of Wetumpka, Route 1; Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Salter, daughter and son, Elizabeth and Ralph, Wetumpka; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Smith and children, Clara, Gordon, Morinbell and Verna, Clanton, route 4.

Other guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Bill Golden of Tuskegee, Ala.; Miss Ruth Burks of Montevallo, Ala.; Mr. Isaac Powell of Weeka, Ala.

Several nice presents were given. At about three o'clock all began to leave wishing their mother many more happy birthdays.

VALUABLE INFORMATION IS GIVEN IN RECENT BULLETIN

Complete information on how to build a Nichols terrace, the type used in the Soil Conservation Service area at Clanton, Alabama, is contained in the new Farmers' Bulletin just announced by the United States Department of Agriculture, according to Mr. James H. Wood.

The bulletin, "The Nichols Terrace", an Improved Channel-type Terrace for the Southeast, was written by Jerome J. Henry of the Department of Agriculture in collaboration with M. L. Nichols of the Soil Conservation Service, who originally designed the terrace.

Containing tables that can be used as guides for determining the proper distances to be allowed between terraces and for determining the correct terrace grade, as well as a diagram showing in detail the progressive steps in construction, the bulletin can be used as a practical handbook in building terraces of the Nichols type.

The author explains that Southeastern farmers have been experimenting with various types of terraces since Colonial days, yet until recently, met with only temporary success. Early efforts, he says, often did more harm than good.

More than century of experimentation by individual farmers and interested agricultural agencies has resulted in the gradual improvement of terrace design and led to the development and improvement of the Nichols terrace, which is widely accepted as the most effective and practical terrace ever designed to prevent soil erosion on sloping farm lands in the Southeast.

The new publication, Farmers' Bulletin No. 1790, may be obtained as long as the supply is available by writing to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

This is Thanksgiving Day!

In Spain, thousands of people are being killed by bullets, disease and starvation daily at the hands of their own brothers; father fights son, brother fights brother; an aviator dropping bombs on the helpless civilian population of some city under attack knows not but what his own mother may be among those whose life ends with that fatal explosion; all this in dispute over the political philosophy by which the people may be governed. Here in these United States we discuss our political philosophies in peace, without bloodshed, and in friendly debate.

For this, O Lord, we are duly thankful.

In Italy, separated from Spain only by the narrow width of an arm of the Mediterranean Ocean, a king is legally the monarch of the country, but a former blacksmith controls the newspapers, thereby telling the people what to read; he offers bonuses for babies, to increase his future armies; on slight pretext he sends thousands of good Italian citizens into the savage wilds of Africa to be slain for the gain of some small territory hardly worth the purchase. Here in these United States our young citizens live free of the necessity of fighting wars of hopeless conquest.

For this, O Lord, we are duly thankful.

In Germany, separated from Italy only by the narrow confines of Austria, a former paperhanger has gained control of a great nation; by his edicts, the so-called free German people may not worship in the way they have been taught to believe; they must deny Jesus because He was a Jew, and by the edicts of the paperhanger, the Jews are an inferior people; they may not eat what they wish, because by his edicts money must be saved to build a great army; they may not buy except at stores owned by members of his party. Here in these United States, we are at liberty to worship howsoever it may please us, and although we may disagree with our neighbor's religious beliefs, we will defend to the last his right to them.

For this, O Lord, we are duly thankful.

In Russia, separated from Germany only by the thin strip of the Polish Corridor, which once was Germany, a man nominally only the secretary of the party in power in a government theoretically even more democratic than our own, wields a power more autocratic than the most severe tyrants ever dreamed of; no man may own property and reap the benefits thereof; no man may rise to the heights of his ambitions for all men there are regarded equally; no man may deviate

A Sign of Wise Investment

Fortunate are the communities where a highway is closed for paving with concrete. Temporary inconvenience is quickly turned into lasting satisfaction.

This means the end of spring break-up ills—frost boils, mud and ruts. Seasonal load restrictions, dust and the inconvenience of constant road tinkering can be forgotten.

Concrete stands up under all legal loads in all weather. It permits speed with safety. It cuts driving costs to motorists. It reduces road maintenance costs.

AAA COMMITTEEMEN WILL BE ELECTED NEXT WEEK

Auburn, Ala.—Plans have been made for the election of community agricultural conservation committeemen and for discussions of current farm problems and outlook at local farm meetings throughout Alabama during the week of November 29-December 4, announces P. O. Davis, director, Alabama Extension Service.

"The new committeemen will be installed on or after January 1, 1938," he says. "They will be responsible for all work in connection with the 1938 AAA program."

All farmers actively taking part in the agricultural conservation program, or who take steps to participate in the 1938 program are automatically members of their county association and can vote in selecting their committeemen, says Walter L. Randolph, administrative officer in charge of AAA program in Alabama.

Strength During MIDDLE LIFE

Strength is extra-important for women going through the change of life. Then the body needs the very best nourishment to fortify it against the changes that are taking place.

In such cases, Cardul has proved helpful to many women. It increases the appetite and aids digestion, favoring more complete transformation of food into living tissue, resulting in improved nutrition and building up and strengthening of the whole system.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Now Brooklyn has another girl poet. It seems only like yesterday that little Nathalia Crane, who began writing at the age of nine, astonished experts with her book of verses about the janitor's boy and others. Miss Crane is grown up now but in her place comes Miss Katharine Carossa. Miss Carossa will not be fourteen for 12 days yet. But her second book of poems is just off the press. The book, "Crystal Arabesques," contains 70 poems. The imagery, smoothness and wording suggest maturity. Nevertheless Miss Carossa suggests Miss Crane. She's considerably darker and a little taller than Nathalia was back in those days when I went over to Brooklyn to interview her. But she's also shy, reserved and attractive. She started writing when she was in the fourth grade. A poem of hers so impressed a teacher that he encouraged her to continue. Now she's in her fourth term of the Brooklyn Girl's high school. She's usually first in all her studies. But she doesn't engage in athletics. She prefers to go home and write.

On her mother's side, Miss Carossa is Russian and on her father's, Spanish. Her father is a court interpreter and holds a Ph. D. degree from the University of Geneva. His library consists of 16,000 volumes. Miss Carossa spends much time among her father's books. When she isn't doing that and when she isn't writing, she is at her piano. For years, she has practiced three hours a day. Her favorite composers are Brahms, Beethoven and Chopin, and one of her poems is entitled "Chopin Valse." In fact, her love of music is such that it has placed her in something of a dilemma. At the moment, she cannot decide whether she will go to college and continue with her writing or to the Juillard school and perfect herself in music. However, at fourteen, even though she has written two books, there seems to be time for her to make up her mind.

A short time ago there was recorded in this space a piece about a black and white warbler that mothered an orphan starling in Robert J. Week's back yard in Old Greenwich. Writes Albert Stoll, Jr., conservation editor of the Detroit News:

"So far as I know, this is very unusual. I do know that in Michigan, the cowbird frequently lays its eggs in the nest of the chipping sparrow and although the bird and eggs are about half the size of the chipping sparrow, the latter will incubate the eggs and raise the mixed brood of cowbirds and sparrows to maturity. This is not at all unusual."

"The only experience I have had along this line was at one time when I had an injured yellow-billed cuckoo in a cage in which I placed a fledgling martin that had fallen out of its nest. The cuckoo did attempt to feed the martin but without any degree of success."

Speaking of birds, as I was shaving this morning, I heard a bird singing over in Central park. Maybe it was a wild canary or possibly a song sparrow. It's been so long since I've heard a bird sing that I couldn't make an identification. But be that as it may, that song of a little wild creature in the midst of intensely urban settings so thrilled me that I stood there motionless while the latter caked on my face. Tonight I'm going to a band concert right over there where that bird proclaimed its joy at being alive.

Then there was that sunset the other evening. The western sky seemed a mottled mass of deep reds. Across it scuttled clouds seemingly in a great hurry. Behind the tower of the Roerick museum, they massed in such formation that they looked like palm trees on a coral island. I wish I could put that scene on paper. But some way or other, it just won't go into mere words.

Humming Bird Halts Tunnel Construction

Los Angeles.—The little Dutch boy who saved Holland from sea inundation by sticking his finger in a leak in the dike has been matched here by a humming bird which has delayed the construction of an essential tunnel in the new metropolitan water district project.

The humming bird built its nest on the knot of a guy rope used in the tunnel construction and started in to raise a family of hummers. Work was ordered delayed on that part of the project until mother humming bird had hatched her brood.

New farm legislation, the control of monopolies, labor problems, foreign trade, monetary policies, and world peace will be the principal topics of discussion at the 19th annual Convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation to be held in Chicago, December 13-15, announces Edward A. O'Neal, Alabama farmer and president of the National organization.

"LET'S Talk Turkey NEIGHBOR"

CHANCES are, when you sit down to Thanksgiving dinner, a goodly part of all you survey has had a ride on the L & N.

Turkeys? Listen to their "gobbles" next time one of our freight trains rolls by. Likely, too, you'll hear some "quacks", "honks" and "cackles"—for our poultry shipments alone run into hundreds of carloads a year... Then there's butter, fresh vegetables, fruits... yes, a lot of cranberries, too. Not to mention beef and pork and lamb. Nearly two and a half million tons of farm products moved over the L & N last year, swiftly, inexpensively, with clock-like sureness.

Looking at it one way, you'd say that's a lot of freight. Looking at it another way—that's a lot of evidence of being a good neighbor.

OLD SMITHY IS RUN BY EIGHTH IN LINE

Stands Where Ancestor Built It 250 Years Ago.

Essex, Conn.—When John Pratt, with his wife and children and his household goods, moved to this village in 1678 and set himself up as a blacksmith, he scarcely would have imagined that 250 years later there would still be a blacksmith shop in operation on the same spot and that the proprietor would be his lineal descendant.

Hundreds of persons stop every summer to ask about what is said to be the oldest business in the country that has always been in the hands of one family and to talk to James Lord Pratt, the present owner and eighth generation from the founder.

Jim Pratt is not sure how many buildings the family has used in conducting the smithy business for two and a half centuries. The present shop, he knows, was built by his grandfather eighty years ago to take care of an iron business expanding with the building of clipper ships on the Connecticut river here.

"I shall have a shop which is large and light," said that John Pratt. "It shall have many windows and large ones. It shall be of brick and it shall be large enough for four forges."

Such a building was put up, and it is still sound. It had windows enough to permit work from day-break to dusk. It was large enough to hold the year's supply of iron, brought in by boat in the autumn, and once it did have four forges.

One was used for horse and ox shoeing, one for wagon repairing and two for making iron mast bands and other ship fittings.

Now modern machinery has been installed. An electric blower is concealed in the forge in place of the old bellows, and the smith uses a power hammer more often than the old anvil.

It is five or six years since he shed his last horse, and it is a quarter of a century since oxen were shod in the shop.

Luxurious Cow Barn Lets Animals Recline to Eat

Oakfield, N. Y.—Nothing has been left undone to provide the latest in cow comfort in a huge concrete building that looks more like an oversized bungalow than an old-fashioned barn. Its 28,900 feet of floor space makes it one of the largest cowbarns in New York state, according to owner, G. Sherwin Haxton, Rochester and Oakfield business man.

Twenty men will tend the wants of the 300 cows in a specially ventilated room with individual stalls for each cow. In each stall is a round iron drinking fountain. The concrete floor is well cushioned with hay for sleeping purposes and the feeding troughs are so low that each cow reclining in indolent ease and eat and drink at the same time.

Twice a day a short walk will break the monotony of the cow's life. At 4 a. m. and 4 p. m. she will trot through a long concrete chute to the washing room. Her attendants will give her a fine spray bath in preparation for milking. Both completed, a door will open and Bossy will walk into a glass-enclosed milking room, step into an iron stall where a mechanical milker will send the milk spinning upwards through a vacuum system to a storage tank, thence to a pasteurizing unit and then into cans.

No human hands will touch the milk en route from cow to bottle. Milking completed, Bossy can step from her stall and return to her quarters via the chute.

During the summer, the stalls are air-cooled and in the winter, fans will send warm air through the building.

Game With Paper Dolls Will Teach Deaf Pupils

New Orleans.—The lip-reading pupils in seven New Orleans public schools this fall will learn their lessons by a scientific paper-doll game. Miss Ruth Proctor, who teaches handicapped pupils from six years old to high school age, will illustrate a new lecture on how Jennie Germ can creep into milk and transmit tuberculosis.

In the game will be the milk sprites—Pat Protein, Sherman Sugar, Fred Phosphorus and Walter Water—who fight against Jennie Germ. The children will watch the teacher's lips as she tells the story and will watch the paper dolls enact a play.

The children also will see how the lighthouse of health is built, progressively, by the Exercise Rock, the Sunshine Stone, the Plenty-of Food Pebble and other components.

Getting germs in the Body Castle is part of the progressive game. Only two gates of entry are open to the germ—the Nose and Mouth Gates. Each child will have a game which will try to get by the gate. But the owner of the Body Castle can foil the germs, when carried in by the hand, by washing the hands! Another germ hidden in milk can be stopped by having the milk pasteurized, and so on.

Pictures will be used almost exclusively at first. The teacher will form the syllables of simple words with her lips, encouraging pupils to do likewise.

Auto Show Represents Annul Progress Report

In response to inquiries for a statement in connection with the National Automobile Show, K. T. Keller, President of Chrysler Corporation, has authorized the following:

"One of the unusual features of the automobile industry, as contrasted with most other industries, is that each year it brings to the public a tangible report of its progress in a form the public can readily see and understand.

"I do not refer to the financial reports of the companies to their stockholders; I mean the new cars and trucks which the manufacturers present to the public at the automobile shows. These represent an annual report which everybody can appreciate.

"For the most part, these new motor cars have been in preparation for at least a year. How much research, experimentation, testing and proving has gone before that, it is difficult to picture to the public as such. Each year's new products embody both the experience of the past and the improvements which the latest developments in the art have brought about. And thus each year you have practical, visual evidence of the industry's accomplishments.

"We in Chrysler Corporation believe that in the 1938 models of passenger cars, commercial vehicles and motor trucks which bear the name of Plymouth, Dodge, DeSoto and Chrysler, the men in the engineering laboratories and the men in the factories have produced a report to the public which will be recognized as real and substantial progress. I believe that in sound development, in improvement in design, in betterment of quality, in style, in economy, in safety, in comfort and in performance, the progress embodied in these new vehicles is very important to the car buyer. This is a significant fact for the purchaser of an automobile to realize.

"Chrysler Corporation looks forward to a good year in automobile sales in 1938. Orders for new cars have reached a greater pre-show volume than ever before, and I believe the public will find in these new cars and trucks sound evidence that automobile progress goes ahead."

RABBIT FEVER WARNING ISSUED ALABAMA FARMERS

Dr. J. N. Baker, Alabama State Health Officer, Montgomery, warns hunters and farmers to beware of tularemia, or rabbit fever. "Although tularemia is found in, and transmitted by raccoons, opossums, and other rodents, the wild rabbit is regarded as by far the main source of human infection," he says. "Apparently, domestic rabbits, raised in rabbitries, are entirely safe from this point of view."

The disease is usually transmitted to humans through the handling of infected rabbit carcasses, the eating of infected rabbit meat that has not been properly cooked, and exposure of the human skin to the bite of the infectious insects, such as rabbit tick, wood tick, deer fly or horsefly. "The vast majority of the cases are the result of skinning and cleaning wild rabbits," he says.

Dr. Baker advises that those who handle wild rabbits can shoot and dress these animals in perfect safety, as far as tularemia is concerned, if they will be careful to observe these simple precautions:

1. Use discrimination in shooting poor, weak rabbits. Rabbits that appear dazed and slow of movement are probably that way because they are

- victims of tularemia.
- 2. Always wear rubber gloves when handling rabbits.
- 3. Kill and bury all rabbits.
- 3. Keep hands away from face and eyes while handling rabbits.
- 4. Kill and bury all rabbits which seem slow of movement and sickly.

dred million dollars by the Public Works Program. "It is the first time that Alabama and the south have gotten back out of the Treasury, more than she had put in," he declared.

He discussed the law establishing the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the Farm Credit Administration.

Speaking of the TVA development and the Rural Electrification Program, the speaker said, "So far as I am concerned, I shall not stop until every farm house in the United States of America has an electric line running to that house."

Scoring the opposition, the speaker said, "What these Birmingham capitalists and Birmingham handpickers seek to do is to destroy the program."

"And we find these Liberty Leaguers these Birmingham handpickers, filling this State for months with all kinds of misleading statements, with all kinds of their hirelings, their paid agents, into the industrial centers, and they say to these industrial workers, 'We have any farm legislation... then those same Liberty League economic royalists and Birmingham handpickers send their agents and hirelings and propaganda shepherds out among the farmers of Alabama, 'Don't you know we... they put out all kinds of untrue and false and misleading statements the wage and hour legislation.'"

The speaker told how the "tailors of industry in Birmingham" out a few secret letters in order to a select group, to pick a man to run against and try to elect for the United States Senate; just happens that one of that list in that letter does so the handpickers got one candidate that they themselves and named."

W. B. Corley, well known resident of Clanton, is confined to his home due to serious illness.

Things We Think

 Things Others Think and What We Think of Things Others Think
—BILLY SMITH

Each week we are giving this column to an article that is far better than anything we could provide. The thought contained in the following article, written by the Lady of The Land, is more far-reaching than any thought we might have had and as we devote this column to Mrs. Roosevelt's article, we are sure that someone will follow her suggestion.

Christmas Spirit Cleaning

By Eleanor Roosevelt

In "The Reader's Digest" there is a new idea for those of us who are spreading Christmas cheer; why not make a week of the weeding out of our surplus?

Things which have ceased to be useful to us, things which are tired and begin life all over again in our neighbor's Christmas tree. Why not now, and make housecleaning joyful, generous, friendly activity?

Why should not this Christmas be a time when we should do this Christ-salvage work alone, however, a member of the household should go in a hunt through closets, drawers, the attic. All of them should be overhauled their books. If it is in the light of an opportunity for Christmas giving in which all members of the family can join, they will probably be surprised by the things which come up on the pile to be given away.

For instance, is an overcoat which father has treasured for years, being the time might come when would wear it again. But there shivering men walking the streets about any coats at all these days. There is an old quilt, preserved in the attic as a heirloom, that it is too good to part with, but remember that there are children who are cold.

Be very careful about one thing. Do not give rubbish. Rubbish is not to be salvaged. Clean and renovate what you can. What you are giving for gifts, something you can be proud to see someone else enjoy, and test of what to give is whether you would be glad to receive it yourself.

Collect and distribute these gifts. It should not be difficult, if person in each community makes it a job to provide leadership, and the rest of the community is willing to cooperate. A committee should be organized to work with the organization, which know who the needy are, and that the gifts may be properly apportioned and distributed.

Everyone who reads this appeal can push the campaign. The time organization is now. Take it up in your clubs and your churches, upon the energy and civic pride of the Kiwanis, and the Lions, and on the experience of the agencies.

One of the agencies best qualified to coordinate with your local committee of course, the Salvation Army, which has excellent facilities for collecting such gifts and responds quickly to a telephone call. There are many others. The volunteers of America distribute things to the families of men in prison. The social service departments of many hospitals dispose of things. The Goodwill Industries, in Maine to California, recondition clothes and household equipment in shops, and serve the double purpose of giving employment and salvaging discarded articles. Tuskegee Hampton Institute, the Penn School in South Carolina and the Calhoun School in Alabama know the needs of Negroes and are eager to receive all kinds of useful gifts. The American-Merchant Marine Library Association, the Seaman's Church Institute and the American Library Association have branches in many cities and welcome good books and magazines.

This movement could be made to go through every community in the United States. It would help to draw communities together, whether large or small; it would make them conscious of the needs of those who have little, and it would offer the chance of a real community Christmas. Ministers would surely be glad to announce this campaign from their pulpits; local radio stations and newspapers would give information about it. In every community firemen have for years generously helped similar campaigns. Merchants, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, would surely be helpful volunteers in the work of collecting the gifts.

On Christmas morning some attics would be empty, but some bare homes

FARM SECURITY LOANS WILL BE AVAILABLE HERE

Regulations Are Set Out

 By Local Supervisor
At Clanton

Clanton, Ala., Nov. 23.—Farm Security Administration tenant purchase loans will soon be available to residents of this county, according to a statement released today by Marvin Durbin, rehabilitation supervisor of the Farm Security Administration from his offices in Clanton.

Supervisor Durbin states that Clanton is one of the counties designated by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to be provided with funds this fiscal year for loans to low-income farm families as provided for in the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act.

The appropriation for the first year of $10,000,000 for the nation contemplated enabling these loans to be made in approximately 300 counties of the Nation. Of this first year's appropriation Alabama was allotted $615,531 to be distributed over the State among the 25 counties designated for this first year's program.

This county, as well as other counties designated, will be able to make

OFFICERS FOR CHILTON 4-H CLUBS NAMED

Some Clubs Organized With Much Interest Being Shown In Work

Cooper Club—Girls

On November 5, 1937, 4-H Club of Cooper met. A few new members were added to the roll, making a total of about thirty now enrolled.

Miss Grace gave us a very interesting talk on what we should eat. She suggested that we have some kind of flower to plant. We decided on Verbena. The president appointed a committee to tell the ones who decided to bring the flowers.

Those on the committee were: Ruth Vinson, Murrell Jones, and Mildred Todd.

We all enjoyed the meeting very much and are looking forward to our Christmas program next month.

Mapleville Club—Girls

The Mapleville 4-H Club was reorganized October 24. Forty-three members enrolled.

A very interesting talk was made by Miss Meta Grace, our Home Demonstration Agent, about her visit to Dr. C. W. Warburton in Washington.

Baptist Leaders To Hold Conference 10th

An important conference for all pastors, Sunday school officers and teachers, training union officers and leaders, and all associational officers, will be held at the Clanton Baptist Church on the night of December 10, at seven o'clock. All churches, Sunday schools and training unions of all churches in both the Unity and Chilton Associations are urged to have good delegations present. The speakers and conference leaders will be Mrs. Davis Cooper, Miss Martha Sconyers, Earl Trent, Chester L. Quarles and Davis Cooper, Jr.

Let the pastors, superintendents and training unions appoint good delegations next Sunday to attend this important conference.

FORMER THORSBY RESIDENTS RECENTLY MOVE TO CLANTON

C. R. Foss, well known throughout the county and formerly of Thorsby, and his family, have recently moved to Clanton where they will make their home in the future.

Mr. Foss has purchased the brick home about one-half mile out the Mapleville Highway near the Reagan home. He holds a position with the Taylor Wholesale Grocery Company. Citizens of Clanton extend this prominent family a cordial welcome into their midst.

It would be better furnished. Moths might have less food this winter, but many human beings would be warmer.

Here seems to me an idea which would be both far-reaching and good fun. Surely Americans have the organization, common sense and good will to carry it out successfully.

Christmas is the time of year when we ought to remember how much more blessed it is to give than it is to keep!

Warehouse Receipts Stolen In Maplesville

The Department of Agriculture advised by letter that cotton warehouse receipts, numbered from 1501 to 2000, inclusive were stolen recently from the Farmers Gin & Warehouse Co., at Maplesville, Ala.

The Maplesville ginners are anxious to recover these receipts and are seeking information toward their recovery, the News was advised.

YOUTHS NABBED AFTER ROBBERY LAST SUNDAY

$400 In Cash And Checks Taken From Home Near Jemison Recently

Three Chilton County youths were arrested and placed in the county jail at Clanton following a robbery of a home near Jemison in which approximately $400 in cash and checks were taken, according to reports from the sheriff's office and highway patrolmen.

Mrs. T. A. Haggard, operator of a store just north of Jemison, and the victim of the youthful robbers, had left her home Sunday afternoon for a visit in Jemison. On returning she noticed that some money was missing. Investigation showed that the money, receipts from her business, was missing.

Officers were notified, the sheriff's office and the state highway patrolmen went into action. Highway Patrolmen Waites and Henley investigated and determining a description of the youths believed implicated in the robbery, had it broadcast over the radio.

HOME OF H. T. OUSLEY WAS DESTROYED BY FIRE TUES.

The home of H. T. Ousley, son of Commissioner Ousley, was destroyed by fire early Tuesday morning of last week. Mr. Ousley stated that a small amount of insurance was carried on the dwelling and none on household goods.

Maplesville Youth Is Killed In Accident

Tomnie N. Headley, age 22, was almost instantly killed Saturday night near Maplesville, when the car in which he was driving alone, skidded off the Lawley road and struck a post. It is believed Headley's head was caught between the car and post.

He had been an employee of the T. U. Crumpton Co., and had just left the store to carry a friend home and was returning when the accident happened. It was stated.

Funeral services were held Monday morning at the Maplesville Baptist Church, services conducted by the Rev. G. G. Williams. Interment followed in the Maplesville cemetery with Martin & Sons of Clanton in charge.

Pallbearers were Henry Smithman, S. B. Rogers, J. V. Rogers, Horace Wallace, John Goff, and Clarence Gray.

Flower girls were Misses Ernestine Davis, Frances Rush, Betty Jo Carter and Mary Dyer.

Young Headley is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Headley, one brother, Oliver; two sisters, Louise and Eloise, all of Maplesville.

FARLEY-CALLOWAY MARRIAGE ANNOUNCED HERE RECENTLY

Mrs. Lula E. Calloway, of Clanton, has announced the marriage of her daughter, Leola, to Mr. B. W. Farley, of Clanton, on Saturday, November 20th.

Both the bride and groom are well known in Clanton. Their many friends extend to them best wishes and congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Tyus and daughter, Margaret Ann, had Thanksgiving dinner with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Tyus.

Orphanage Car To Be Here Soon

A railroad car for the Baptist Orphanage at Troy will be in Thorsby on Wednesday, December 8, all day and at Clanton on the following day.

All those wishing to make contributions of clothing, food, toys, etc., may be asked to bring them to the car on the above dates and places. Anything in the produce line, canned goods, syrup, etc., will be accepted.

J. Watts Moore is in charge of the car at Clanton and M. Lockhart will assist in loading the car at Thorsby and Clanton also.

PLANS TO SELL XMAS SEALS TO GET UNDERWAY

Appeal Is Made By County Health Department For Tuberculosis Aid

Plans for conducting the annual Christmas seal sale campaign were being drawn up today, according to a statement made by Dr. S. D. Sturkie, local County Health Officer. "Due to an unavoidable delay," said Dr. Sturkie, "but it is the hope of the local Tuberculosis Association that this will not prevent us from being as successful as we were last year."

A plea was made by the Health Officer that the people of Chilton County respond generously to the seal sale by purchasing a liberal amount of seals. "Funds," he stated, "for the fight against tuberculosis are sorely needed here. There is much that can be done to save lives from this dreaded disease if money can be made available with which to carry on the fight."

BILLINGSLEY TO SEE "THE CHOCOLATE WEDDING"

"The Chocolate Wedding" is the title of a play to be presented at the Billingsley school auditorium on Saturday night, December 4th by the Billingsley P. T. A.

This play will be brought to Billingsley by the Jones, Ala. O. E. S. It is full of laughs and the costumes are worth the price of admission which will be ten and twenty cents. The program opens at 7:30 p.m.

International Meet Is Kiwanis Program

The program for the Kiwanis Club tonight at the Thomason Hotel will be in charge of Luther Little, and will be in the form of an International Meeting.

Mr. Little announced that on the program would appear young ladies from England, Germany and Mexico, all students at Alabama College. Mell Martin, secretary of the club, stated that those members not present would certainly miss an outstanding program. So, fellows, you better be there. The time is 7:30 P. M. tonight.

FORMER CLANTON GIRL IS PARENT OF FINE BOY

The News received the following announcement this week: "Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Street of Washington, D. C., announce the birth of a fine baby boy on October 18th, 1937, whom they have named Ralph Wayne."

Mrs. Street is the former Miss Lurleen Minor, daughter of Mrs. Andrew Minor, of Clanton. She was one of Clanton's popular young ladies, a graduate of the local high school.

Heflin Pledges Himself To Help The Farmer

Former Senator J. Thomas Heflin told an audience composed largely of cotton farmers here Saturday that "if you will send me back to the United States Senate, I shall exert my every power to serve you just as well as I did when I was in Congress before."

This was Heflin's first appearance in Chilton County in the present campaign for the Black seat in the United States Senate.

"I have studied the cotton farmer's problem and I am in a position to serve you, whereas Congressman Lister Hill was born with a silver spoon in his mouth and seemingly doesn't know much about the farm or farm problems."

Special Notice To City Dog Owners

"I notice quite a number of dogs running around in Clanton city limits without vaccination tags. This is a last warning to people of Clanton who have such dogs running without tags to put their tags on the dogs if they have been vaccinated, and if not, have all dogs vaccinated at once that you want to save, and tag them."

"The inspector is in the county now on his check-up, and within a few days will make a special check on the city's dogs. It will be too inconvenient to run every dog down which is found without a tag, to find who it belongs to, so such dogs will be killed on sight."

"This is in line with the state law, as well as according to the wishes of citizens and officials of the city. Please take notice and comply, as all untaged dogs will be killed."

"This notice applies to citizens of Jemison, Thorsby, Maplesville, Cooper and Verbena as well."

W. L. PARRISH,
Rabies Inspector."

Clanton Stores Getting Ready For Christmas

Santa Making His Existence Known By The Large Stocks Of Xmas Merchandise

Local Stores Are Receiving

A visit to many of the stores in Clanton will spread the spirit of Christmas, while other stores are rapidly preparing for the annual visit of Santa Claus, by arranging new shipments of Christmas merchandise on their counters and shelves. Clerks are busy in some places arranging Xmas decorations while others are already enjoying the atmosphere created by Yuletide colors.

The astonishing, yet pleasing thing about the approaching Christmas season is that shoppers for gifts in Clanton will encounter some of the most unusual, economical gifts they have ever seen in local stores. The writer has made a visit through several of the leading places of business and found that gifts that will be most appreciated, are priced so low, he was almost dumfounded. And these are gifts for the smallest tot to grandpa or grandma.

Tax Collector To Be At Thorsby Dec. 7th

T. L. McKee, tax collector, advised Tuesday that he will be in Thorsby on Tuesday, December 7th for the purpose of giving residents there an opportunity to pay their city tax, thereby eliminating the necessity of their coming to Clanton.

Mr. McKee will set up temporary office in the city hall for the day and will be there from eight o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mrs. J. L. Ruffin Laid To Rest Last Tuesday

Funeral services for Mrs. Maude Darby Ruffin, of Clanton, were held last Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock at the Spigener Funeral Parlors, with Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the Clanton Baptist Church, officiating, and assisted by Rev. W. S. Cox.

Mrs. Ruffin succumbed at her home here on November 29th, following an extended illness. She was 53 years old, and a member of one of the county's well known families. Her death is said to have followed complications resulting from an operation on June 12th this year.

Surviving are the husband, J. L. Ruffin, well known merchant of Clanton; one son, Bronson, Clanton; her mother, Mrs. Anna Darby, of Titus; four brothers and two sisters. Interment was in the Clanton cemetery with Spigener in charge.

SINGING AT ENTERPRISE

There will be singing at Enterprise school house next Sunday afternoon, beginning at 1:30. Everybody come and bring your new books. We are expecting some good singers so be on time.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Begin now to make your plans to see the Christmas Pageant which is to be presented at the Clanton Methodist Church December 19, at five o'clock in the afternoon. Further details of the pageant will be announced in a later issue.

Mrs. George McCain and sons have returned from a visit with relatives in Rockford.

Pioneer Resident Of Thorsby Passed Away

Mrs. Anna Lee Soberg, age 76, and a pioneer resident of Thorsby, passed away at her home there last Friday night, following an extended illness. She was the wife of M. J. Soberg, mayor of Thorsby, and leading citizen of that section of the county.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at the Swedish Lutheran Church. Services were conducted by the Rev. L. L. Stanley, the Rev. E. W. Butler and the Rev. W. P. Lowery, in a beautiful and impressive manner. Interment followed in the Concord cemetery at Thorsby with Martin & Sons of Clanton in charge.

Surviving are the husband, M. J. Soberg; three sons, Karl of Sheboygan, Wis.; Edwin, of Chicago and Arnold of Birmingham. Two daughters, Mrs. Clara Henderson and Mrs. Olga Morgan, both of Washington, D. C.; also two brothers, two half-brothers, one half-sister and ten grandchildren. The deceased had been a resident of Thorsby for the past 38 years.

Active pallbearers were V. H. Sutlive, Ernie Hanson, Jimmy Nelson, Frank Nelson, Jr., Verner Carlson and Ragner Ekblad.

Honorary Pallbearers were J. L. Foss, J. O. Johnson, V. E. Wyatt, G. F. Harper, E. R. Piper and J. L. Mixson.

MISS DOROTHY WAITE GETS PLACED ON DEANS LIST

Huntingdon College, of Montgomery, announced this week that Miss Dorothy Waite, of Clanton had been placed on the Dean's List by reason that she is an outstanding student and above the average at the college. Miss Waite is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Waite, and one of Clanton's most attractive young ladies.

Health Officer Urges Shots For Diphtheria

Four cases of diphtheria were reported to the County Health Department during the last week according to a statement made by Dr. S. D. Sturkie, newly appointed County Health Officer. One occurred near Thorsby and one near Jemison, while there were two cases in one family in the vicinity of Collins Chapel.

Dr. Sturkie urged all parents to protect their children early against diphtheria by consulting their family physicians for an injection of diphtheria toxoid. "This agent," he added, "will stimulate the child's body to form a sufficient amount of toxin to avert the development of diphtheria in from 90 to 95 per cent of children to whom it is given. He further stated that the Health Department would render this service to children when parents are not financially able to pay for the protection and that the injection would be given at the Health Office on any Saturday from 8:30 A. M. to 5 P. M.

JEMISON HIGH SCHOOL TO HAVE HOT BASKET BALL GAME

"The Jemison High School Panthers will formally open the basketball season with an engagement with the Corner High School Yellowjackets on the night of December 3rd. The Panthers were beaten twice last year by the Yellowjackets and the game promises to be a good one.

The game will be played in the J. H. S. auditorium.

Servants---Not Masters

Speaking of government and bureaucracy an acquaintance explains by saying: "When a little man gets into the saddle he immediately wants to use the spurs." This epigrammatic remark, however, doesn't explain the insolence and disregard of public interest exhibited by many public servants.
So often these individuals who feel the tremendous importance of their positions are people who have never before in their lives had an opportunity to exercise any authority. And the taste for authority is like the taste for stimulants or fancy foods—most readily abused by those who have never had an opportunity to enjoy it.
We would suggest, in this connection, that public employes be given some instruction in public relations. Before all of our citizens are to show an unqualified faith in government, there must be some change in the attitude of public employees. They must realize that they are the servants and not the masters of the people.

Machinery Of Co-Operation

There is no lack of organization here in Clanton. There are service clubs which meet each week and consider subjects of local and general interest. There are organizations of former service men. There are active societies in which men and women participate. Each of these groups desires to contribute worth while service to our community.
But unfortunately there is a lack of unified effort, or co-operation if you will, among these various active groups. One goes one way, another pursues a different objective, while still another unit concerns itself principally with the interests of its own membership.
To unify all this community enthusiasm and effort and direct our community energies more effectively would be an accomplishment of considerable proportions.
We heard of a community not unlike Clanton in which this condition was recognized and where something was done about it. Two or three citizens realizing the enormous potentialities of effectively directed community effort conceived the idea of forming a council made up of representatives of all the organizations associations and societies in the community. After considering the matter carefully an invitation was drafted emphasizing the possibilities of a program of effective community co-operation. The overwhelming majority of organizations in the community responded by sending representatives to the meeting. From this effort a civic council was formed for the purpose of dealing with civic problems.

To detail what this effort accomplished is not necessary here. Sufficient to say it did secure the co-operation of almost all groups and classes in the community. An appreciable spurt in worth while community activity followed.
Would such a program operate effectively here? We believe it would, and furthermore we believe that the people of our community would respond readily to such a plan.
We invite comment or action from those among our readers who desire to promote the welfare of Clanton.
Apparently the height of worthlessness is a peace treaty signed when there is no international friction.
A friend observes that there will always be emergency legislation so long as politicians find emergencies good campaign material.
It has been said that money is referred to as dough because only the person with a lot of it can have a big loaf.

"A Gentleman's Job"

A rather foolish tradition persists in what is considered a "gentleman's job." It involves work at which one may wear a white collar, a well pressed business suit, and keep his hands and face clean.

Anything that calls for the use of overalls, and cannot be well done without the accumulation of grease and grime does not rate with the activities many people consider "gentlemen's work."
This standard, of course, can take no account of the exercise of brains or the value of one's contribution to society. For a little analysis and study should convince us all that a good machinist, a good electrician or a good farmer must use a very substantial amount of gray matter in his daily toil. If you think such work doesn't require brains just attempt to assemble a mass of gears and cams and eccentrics and make them operate in an efficient machine, or even better yet just go out on a modern farm and see where you come off without the exercise of initiative, imagination, and intelligence.

The truth is that a "gentleman's job" is any job that provides an honest living, that provides opportunity for self improvement and requires the exercise of brain power. If the young man exhibits scanty interest in literature or any of the other studies we classify as "book learning" but shows a lively desire to become a machinist or farmer or surveyor don't imagine that he is lacking in intelligence.
Many of the greatest careers in America at the present or in the past started at a work bench or in the field.

One Brother Went To Market

There is the parable of the two brothers who, living on an island in the Mississippi, built boats as a pastime.
The day came when they ran short of money and one of them decided something should be done about it. He proposed taking a neat little rowboat to a city some miles down-river and selling it.
"No," said his companion. "Our father would never sell a boat like that. It lacks in elements of design and is made of the wrong kind of wood."
"But," the first brother pleaded. "It is seaworthy and just the thing for an amateur fisherman."
"Go and sell it, then," was the answer. "I shall make a better boat."
So the first brother rowed off, spending his few pennies in the city on a classified ad, and in two days he had sold his boat for $25. Moreover, he met, through the ad, a manufacturer, who liked his boat and hired him to design more of them.
The other brother worked away at "the perfect boat" and nearly starved meanwhile. His thorough craftsmanship was to be admired. But he had no knowledge of salesmanship and while hundreds came to enjoy the product of his wise brother, he labored away, under-financed, disillusioned.
It takes salesmanship and advertising, even to market the finest piece of workmanship in the world. And an inferior product, if "seaworthy," sometimes brings greater blessings to mankind than a work of art that is "too good for the market."

All Laborers

There is something wrong in the application of the term "laborer." When we speak of the "laborer" why do we mean the man who earns his daily bread with a pick or shovel or before the open hearth of a steel mill?
What about the thousands of sales people in the stores of the land? What about the men behind the cages in the banks? What about the stenographers whose arms become weary pounding the keys of the typewriter? And what about even news writers who may not utilize much muscular energy but burn up a lot of nerve force in the course of a day?
All these people belong in the ranks of labor, and their welfare must be considered along with the welfare of those whom tradition terms "laborers." Our use of terms frequently seems to confuse our understanding.
Hoboes are being organized. They ought to make quite a success of a sit-down strike.
The only way a sucker can save his face is to laugh it off.
We always feel like quoting Shakespeare when we see an attractive lady walking by in a fine riding habit, that line you know, "A horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse."

D. W. Haskew
One of Alabama's leading newspapers had a column editorial on the subject, "Good Neighbors." It was a thoughtful utterance on the part of a good thinker. To be sure a good neighbor is a blessing from the Lord and a treasure to be prized above silver and gold. While in conversation with a business man I made this remark: "I understand that you are to have a whiskey store as a business neighbor." This man with an expression of alarm and disgust upon his face replied: "I have heard such talk myself and that means that I am moving. If that thing happens my business will be ruined, or else I will have to move to another part of town." Women will not buy groceries and dry goods from a store next door to a whiskey store. A bad neighbor in business, and a whiskey point, or a whiskey store are always bad neighbors, is never to be desired. If you do not want a whiskey store next door to your home, or business, then for goodness sake get on the side of things that will keep such things from being next door to any home or business.

At the close of a Vacation Bible School in my church the lady who had directed the study of the hundred psalm held up before them a great advertisement for the whiskey business. It read thus: "Wanted, one hundred boys and girls for new customers. The old ones are rapidly dropping out. Ten of them committed suicide last week; twenty more are in jail, eight were sent to the chain gang and can buy no more, fifteen were sent to the poor house in rags, one was hanged. Three were sent to the insane asylum and the most of all our old customers have spent about all of their money and they are not worth much to us. We must have fresh customers, fresh young blood, or we will have to close shop. It does not matter whose boy or girl you are, many of the foolish youths of today are applying for the job of drunks by beginning to take social drinks day after day. Mark my words, the business of selling these foolish young people will soon be casting them aside as rubbish. Who among you want to be fodder for the maw of the whiskey business?"

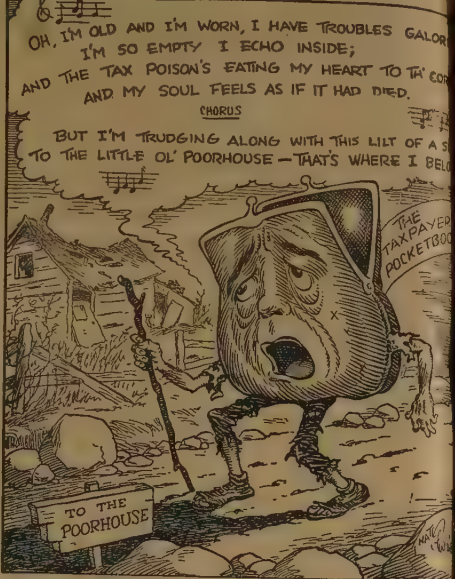

While reading my church paper I came across this statement that set me to thinking: "Dr. Jones of first church has just closed a revival and as a result of his efforts he received eight members into his church last Sunday." I knew that the typesetter had put a "u" where an "e" should have been, but the story was so true to form that I was not so certain that it was a mistake of spelling. Preachers are not called upon to receive "tight" members into their churches very often, yet I have seen this done, but we have to deal with many who are tight after they have joined. Some "tight-wads," while others will drink the fire of hell and get "tight" as a toper. Suppose that you look over your church register and see how many tight people are members with you.

Bishop Hoss often told of an old slave negro just over from Africa who was asked to get out of the way of a corn stalk and placed it over the fire place. He would come into his cabin at night and worship his idol and either commend it or abuse it according to the joys, or the sorrows of the day. All out of humor one night he worshipped his idol of the corn stalk and addressed it thus: "Sir, you do not seem to know who made you and I now is telling you that in case you am no more, to me tomorrow, I will give you to unmake you." We look on the ignorant African with pity, but how much better are some Americans than that poor old Negro. We make for ourselves idols out of pelasure, out of business and out of the things of this world and we sit them up and bow before them. As for me I had rather worship a corn stalk in ignorance than to worship silver and gold, classed as an intelligent being. Your idol is what occupies the first place in your heart and plan. If your idol is self made, you had better unmake it.

Robert E. Lee sent one of his quartermasters out to get beef for his army. The war had been in progress for four years and food supplies were scarce. After much riding the quartermaster succeeded in rounding up two hundred weakened, sassafrass bulls. With his herd of yearlings he started out for headquarters. After much hard driving and effort he arrived at the butcher pen with a few one-eyed, one-horned, half skinned yearlings. He presented himself before the general and reported the results of his journey for beef, and the general asked him how he started with so many and arrived with so few. The quartermaster replied: "I do not know General, unless there were too many leaders among them." This seems to be one of the outstanding faults of the world at this stage of the game. We have too many weakened, sassafrass leaders who are ready to fight among themselves and butcher up each other. It takes more to be a leader than the mere ambition to be one. One reason why we never arrive anywhere with much success is because we have too many people who are obsessed with the idea that they are born of God to lead.

COWPEAS PRODUCING MORE BUSHELS THAN EVER BEFORE
Cowpeas are turning out about 8-500,000 bushels, the biggest production of cowpeas ever reported by about 100,000 bushels.
Farmers in the South Atlantic and the South Central States report a considerable increase in this year's acreage of cowpeas planted with corn.
The quality of cowpeas from this year's crop is reported some better than the quality of last year's production.

THE POCKETBOOK'S LAMENT

CAMP

By Curtis Rice
In the State of California,
Three thousand miles from home;
If I were only back there,
No more I'd ever roam.
But I am in California,
The beauty of the West.
So I will make the most of it,
And I will do my best.
Out here in quiet Wawona,
With mountains all around,
Without my friends that fill the camp,
There would not be a sound.
The boys all talk about the camp,
In such an ugly tone,
But they will say quite different things
When they all get back home.
The falls of Chinauma,
A true friend and foe forget the past,
In nature's strong embrace.
At Glacier Point, four thousand feet,
Above the valley floor;
One step too far, would be your last,
You'd see your home no more.
The mountains stand around us,
Like some great giants of old;
They stand the same, year after year.
In heat and bitter cold,
Wawona with its mountains,
Its valleys and big trees,
Between myself and you, I'd say
'Tis one swell place to be.
The roads that lead to all these scenes
Go many other ways;
And one, they say, if we are smart,
Will lead us home some day.
So I am going to start right now,
And I'll go my very best;
Then I'll go back, and say to all,
'Here's one that stood the test.'

IN MEMORY

On Monday morning, November 1937, the death angel visited the of Clarence Cleckler and his loving wife away. We can't say why God took her but we do know her going has made heaven beautiful for us.
We have the blessed assurance, her own dear lips she was ready to meet God.
She leaves to mourn her loving husband, Mr. Clarence Cleckler, her mother, Mrs. Pairlee Wainwright, both of Verbena; three sisters, Luther Payton, Mrs. Clyde Brad, Mrs. R.E. Bradberry, all of Clanton and a host of relatives and friends who loved her.—A Friend.

Farmers May Apply For Price Payments

Cotton producers do not have to sell their 1937 cotton by July 1, 1938, to be eligible for Cotton Price Adjustment payments, I. W. Duggan, acting director, Southern Division, AAA, wires Walter L. Randolph, Administrative Officer in charge AA program in Alabama.

"Numerous reports reaching this division to effect that county agents and committees are under impression that producers to be eligible for CAP payments must sell entire 1937 cotton crop before July 1, 1937," says the telegram. "Publicize immediately that this information is not correct and that payments will be made on first sales in any amount up to 65 per cent of base production if other requirements are met."

"To be eligible for price adjustment payments, cotton under the 9c loan must be sold before July 1, 1938, to qualify for a payment," says Mr. Duggan in another statement. "If a grower could leave his cotton under the loan and still get a price adjustment payment, the amount of 1937 cotton going under Government loans would be greatly increased."

"The result might be a restriction in the free movement of American cotton in the channels of trade, and it is likely that exports and consumption would be curtailed on that account."

Mr. Duggan said that if farmers were encouraged to put so much of their cotton under loan, they might sell only 10 million bales from the 1937 crop and put the remaining 82 million bales in the loan. In the event this happened, the Government holdings, when added to 1.7 million bales of old cotton already under Government loans, would be increased to a total of about 9.9 million bales.

VALUE OF TIMBER SHOULD BE KNOWN PRIOR TO ANY SALE

Auburn, Ala.—Selling the stand of timber or the trees or any area for lump sum often is like selling a herd of cattle without counting them, says Lyle Brown, extension forester for the Alabama Extension Service.

Disposing of standing timber or stumps without knowing the number of board feet or cords of wood that can be cut or the price per thousand board feet or per cord is about the same as selling farm animals without knowing the number or the price per pound, Mr. Brown says.

The Forest Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture makes a number of recommendations to owners of timberland or farm woodlands who have timber or pulpwood for sale.

The first suggestion is that the timber owner get a reliable estimate on the cords of pulpwood, or the number of poles or posts, or the board feet of saw timber that is being sold. County agents can help obtain this service.

A second recommendation is that the seller find out the value of wood products being sold.

Culling out the poorer trees from 5 to 10 inches in diameter helps the better trees to grow faster, but cutting the smaller-sized better trees reduces the yield of the woodland.

LIQUOR STORE SALES GO TO NEW PEAK OF $950,000

Montgomery, Ala.—(Capitol News Service)—Agents of the Alabama Alcoholic Beverage Control Board were actively in the field this week citing alleged unlicensed liquor dealers. Orders for the citations followed an announcement by Chairman E. Roy Albright of Mobile, that the board has liquor stores established in wet counties on a revenue producing basis and that in the future more attention would be given to protecting dry counties as required under the repeal law.

An all-time peak of $950,000 was reported for October in state liquor store sales, beer tax and licenses.

A burglar entered the apartment of Joseph De Marco, Philadelphia undertaker, grabbed his embalmer's license, also $49 and fled without leaving any clues.

Funeral was held at the home Monday afternoon at two o'clock, and then a short service at the Lutheran Church at 2:30. Interment was in Thorsby cemetery, with Martin & Sons in charge. She is survived by her husband and two daughters and three sons. Active pallbearers were: Ernie Hanson, V. H. Suttive, Frank Nelson, Jimmy Nelson, Verna Carlson, Ragnar Ekblad. Honorary pallbearers were V. E. Wyatt, E. R. Poper, J. L. Foss, G. F. Harper, J. L. Mixson, J. O. Johnson.

The Congregational Ladies Aid Social will meet at the home of Mrs. E. R. Piper Thursday afternoon. Everybody is invited.

The following ladies from Thorsby Home Demonstration Club attended the Leadership school and also the County Council meeting held in Clanton on Monday: Mrs. J. H. Goddard, Mrs. Tom Lessley, Mrs. Jim Collins, Mrs. H. K. Christensen and Mrs. Frank Collins. A most worthwhile meeting was held pertaining to Christmas decorations and special suggestions on Christmas cooking. There were several gifts given away at this meeting, two of which were given to ladies of this club. Mrs. Tom Lessley received a portion of a dark fruit cake and Mrs. Jim Collins received some crystallized fruit peel.

Mrs. J. A. Hayes of Clanton and Miss Ruth Malcolm of Andalusia were the Monday afternoon visitors of Mrs. J. H. Goddard.

Sports News

The basket ball boys have played two games during the past two weeks. The first with the fast Mitchell Dam Cardinals, Wednesday night, November 18. The scores were: Mitchell Dam, 28; Enterprise, 25. The team went to Calera last Tuesday and played a very interesting game. The scores were: Calera, 15; Enterprise, 23. Good sportsmanship was shown throughout both games. The Enterprise team will go to Mitchell Dam Wednesday night, December 1, to play those fast-stepping Cardinals again.

The Stanton boys will play the Enterprise boys on the Enterprise court Friday of this week, December 3. The Enterprise girls are inviting the Stanton girls out to play them also on the same date. The first game will begin about two o'clock. Come out and see both games.

Enterprise boys will go to Thorsby to play Thorsby Wednesday night, December 8. Make arrangements to see this game.

Watch for the scores for Enterprise and their opponents each week in the Enterprise Highlights.

Jemison F.F.A. News

The Jemison Chapter of F.F.A. sponsored a turkey shooting contest Wednesday evening, November 24. The turkey weighed 16 pounds. The contest was a splendid success. There were many people in the community who took part. The turkey was won by Mr. L. H. Bean. The proceeds go to buy basketball suits for the F.F.A. team.

The Chapter is also sponsoring a popularity contest to select the prettiest girl and the ugliest boy in the school. The proceeds also go to buy athletic equipment.

On the night of December 17, 1937, this Chapter, in cooperation with the F.F.A., will hold a Christmas party. This party will take the place of a banquet which had been planned. The same program will be carried out at the party as was planned for the banquet, except for some group games and a Christmas tree.

The Chapter will attend the regular monthly district meeting which will be held at Birmingham, Monday night, December 6, 1937. We will have three or four candidates for the future farmer degree.

The American Red Cross was called upon to give assistance to victims following 128 disasters this past year. Millions of persons were helped by this great agency. Your Red Cross membership dollars makes this disaster service possible. Civic interest should inspire you to join the Red Cross between Armistice Day and Thanksgiving.

Missionary Societies Met In Jemison

On Monday, November 29, the Methodist and Baptist Societies of Jemison held their fifth Monday joint meeting at home of Mrs. A. C. Bratton. Presbyterian ladies were guests. The Baptist ladies presented the following program:

"How Christmas Came to Us," George Naish.

"Giving At Christmas"—Mrs. Peterson.

Christmas poem—Miss Mary ents.

Scripture lesson, Luke 2—Miss Rogers.

Christmas carols were enjoyed all.

After the program the Methodist ladies served a salad course to dames George Naish, J. A. Pugh, H. H. Denson, Seymour Reynolds, Duffie, W. S. Moore, Elizabeth Littlejohn, R. B. Johnson and Virginia Sistrunk. Nellie Mary Clements, Ola Rogers, Johnson and Charlotte Nichols.

F.H.A. HOLDS MEETING

The regular F.H.A. meeting of Clanton County High School was held Wednesday, November 24. The meeting was opened by roll call by secretary, Mildred Maddox.

Margaret Allen, chairman of program committee, gave a report on the programs and socials that F.H.A. is to give this year.

Several business matters were handled and then a Thanksgiving program was given. Thanksgiving poems and proclamations were given, and contests were carried out. All were very interesting. After the program was enjoyed by members, the meeting was closed.

PLENTY OF LIFE IN ARCTIC, RUSS SAY

Birds and Animals Seen by Soviet Scientists.

Moscow, U. S. S. R.—An intimate picture of what scientists, voluntarily marooned in the wastes of the arctic, do and how they feel has just been released by the official Soviet news agency in a report from Mazuruk, heading a group of explorers remaining with an airplane on Rudolf island, Franz Joseph land.

Mazuruk, one of the few holders of the Soviet's highest decoration, the Order of Lenin, for previous researches, has remained with a group of fellows designed to maintain contact with fellow Soviet explorers at the North pole. He reported:

"We established regular air communications between Rudolf island and the arctic station in Bay Tikaya. We already have made several flights there. We carry guests from one station to another, share the experience of our work, also exchange newspapers and literature."

Hold Chess Tournament.

"We have held a chess tournament in which the winterers of Rudolf island were the winners. At the eighty-second degree northern latitude we watched with keen interest the sound films 'Storm,' 'Duvinsky.' Now we await for the films 'Chapayev' and Guy de Maupassant's 'Ball of Suet.' Cinema pictures give us fresh vigor, awaken in new interests and deeply stir us. The characters, landscapes and the music of the films indissolubly bind us with the great land (the mainland)."

"Tikhaya bay is considered by us 'arctic Venice.' What beautiful natural scenery! Millions of birds, grass, numerous flowers, excellent hunting. The winterers of Bay Tikaya hunt walrus and bears. They have already killed 21 bears. myself killed two of them."

"We diligently work upon elaborating the map of the Franz Joseph archipelago. We have already photographed from the air a considerable section. We discovered 11 small islands which have not yet been marked on the map. We intend to present a more exact map upon our return to Moscow."

"We maintain regular radio communications with the North pole station. We speak about everything—trifles. Everything is in order here. The winterers have to work very hard, but they are experienced arctic explorers. Despite the very difficult conditions, they live well and work with meticulous precision."

Life at the Pole.

Through Mazuruk, the North pole party reported recently:

"The drift of our icefloes for the last ten days was rather peculiar. We made a loop and found ourselves in the same place where we were weeks ago. The open water space running parallel to our icefloes has been all the time free from ice. It has been accompanying us since our landing. In certain places its width exceeds 150 feet. Papanin and Shirshov made a long trip on a rubber canoe and photographed the picturesque steep ice shores."

"We noted three times with great satisfaction the appearance of a large seal. As we anticipated, life in the high northern latitudes, contrary to all theories, proved quite varied. Quite recently we noted the beginning of biological spring at great ocean depths."

"Down 9,000 feet a small medusa was caught. Seagulls and fangfish were quite frequently. To complete the general picture a she-bear with her young cubs lately visited us."

"We found the central arctic to be rather populated."

Prospector's Bullets Were Cast From Gold

St. Paul.—Back in the boom days of the gold rush, at least one of the lucky prospectors was so rich with gold that he used the precious metal to make bullets when he ran short of lead.

That is the story of Carl Worm, bootmaker, who roamed the Black Hills of the Dakotas when the gold rush was at its height. Worm says he owns the gun used by the prospector—known to the Indians as "Doc Suamico." The gun was charged with powder before the lead slug was inserted. It still is serviceable.

Old Age Is Often Mental, Iowa Professor Declares

Iowa City, Iowa.—"Premature old age is often an attitude of mind," says Charles McCloy, research professor in anthropology at the University of Iowa. "Persons possessed with feelings of inferiority attempt to become dignified as a compensation, and tend to develop the habit of thinking like the old." Regarding other causes of old age, Professor McCloy had this to say:

"It is partly a matter of inherited quality of our tissues and glands. Some persons wear out sooner than others. Others eat themselves into 'sleepy' aging."

That's What I Think

—O—O—O—

Saul M. Goldstein

In a few short weeks, the people of Alabama must go to the polls and elect a man to be the nominee of the Democratic Party for the seat in the United States Senate left vacant by the appointment of Hugo Black as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. It is a nomination by the Democratic Party in the State of Alabama amounts to elevation, their actual duty is to elect a Senator.

At the present writing, three men are in the field as candidates for that office. In choosing the one for which he will vote, the average man finds it best to weed out the least desirable by a process of elimination.

When we are sick, we call on a physician, whom we place our confidence because of his years of academic training and practical experience; when trouble pursues us in the courts, we place our affairs in the hands of an attorney whose years of education and practice have pronounced him an expert in his line. If the motor of our automobile develops trouble, we apply to a trained and experienced mechanic. There is no reason why this rule should not hold good in the selection of a representative to handle our affairs of government. Those affairs are just as serious in need of thorough education and experience as our physical bodies and our automobile motors.

Two of the candidates in the field have that education and experience, whereas the third has not proven such to be the case; therefore, no matter what his fine qualities as an individual and his character as a man may be, we cannot afford, particularly in these times of stress, to select an inexperienced man when we have those of training and experience from whom to choose. By this logic, we eliminate one candidate, and leave our choice between the other two, Thomas Heflin and Lister Hill.

Getting back to our original analogy, when we have to choose a doctor to treat our ailments, we endeavor to choose the best within our reach. Of two experienced doctors, we will choose the most accomplished—and particularly that one whose record has shown the best service to his clients. We will select an attorney who has a record of winning the most cases; and we will take our automobile to the mechanic whose reputation for good solid repair has withstood the test of time. We most certainly will avoid, if possible, the doctor who has buried too many mistakes; the lawyer whose clients languish in jail or pay heavy costs; and the mechanic whose engines run to stop again.

Thomas Heflin has served the State of Alabama as Senator, and certainly has the experience to qualify him for the office; but there is certainly little in his record as a Senator to show accomplishments worthy of a return to the post. On the other hand, Lister Hill has served fourteen years as a Representative from his district; the most severe complaint heard about him has been from other representatives from whom he has been more fortunate in securing federal favor for his district certain federal appointments and appropriations away from other districts in his state, is it not logical to assume that that man, placed in the Senate, can and will win for his state certain federal appointments and appropriations away from other states.

Such a man has demonstrated his worthiness of election to one of the highest posts a state can offer one of its citizens. If on no other basis, on this basis alone—that of his past record as a good and what is more important, efficient public servant, Lister Hill stands out head and shoulders among the candidates for the Democratic nomination to the Senate. At least, that's what I think.

Saturday Last Day For Applications For 40 Positions

University, Ala.—Saturday is the last day on which applications for some 40 positions with the Alabama Employment Service may be filed, Dr. R. C. Martin, special representative of the United States Employment Service said this week.

Dr. Martin, head of the political science department at the University of Alabama, has been placed in charge of the program to select men and women for these positions. The selection process will include written examinations to be given in seven Alabama cities December 17 and 18.

These cities are Birmingham, Dothan, Gadsden, Mobile, Montgomery, Sheffield and Tuscaloosa.

The jobs to be filled range from field supervisor to interviewer in the state employment service, and pay up to $2,750 a year.

Dr. Martin urges that all persons interested in applying do so immediately in order to beat the Saturday deadline. Information about the places may be obtained from any of the local employment offices or from Dr. Martin at the University.

Clanton Methodist Church

In the beginning of this our New Church Year, may we each and every one earnestly resolve many things. And when we resolve, may we heartily try to keep each good resolution. If we have not been attending each branch of the church services as we feel we should, may we resolve to be a better attendant. If we feel that we have not done just every bit of the work we could for our Church and Master, may we from this day in the beginning of this our Church year, begin to be a better worker. If we haven't supported the Church with our tithes and offerings as we might have, let us accept the challenge in Malachi 3:10 for this year and just see how much we can give to our church and our God—not just how little we can get by with, but how much we can return to the Giver of All. Have we prayed without ceasing for our Church? Have we spent much time in secret studying the Holy Word? Have we lived so that our lights would shine for our Lord and guide others in the straight and narrow way which is, after all, the happy way? May we, each, consider our lives and resolve to be just exactly the kind of fellow we'd like to be when we come to the end of the way. Then, above all things, let's keep those resolutions.

Our Sunday School last Sunday was right, but it could stand plenty of improvement. May each member of the Sunday School don his and her working habit and see that there is quite an improvement next Sunday. Friends, if you missed our church services last Sunday morning and night, how we'd like to tell you what a blessing you missed! Our hearts were stirred, our souls were warmed. We were made to think upon our ways and desire to live a new life in the service of the King. For your own sake, if for no other reason, don't miss next Sunday's services. Hear our preacher.

Methodists Condemn State's Liquor Law

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held in the City of Marianna, Florida, on this the 19th day of November, 1937, hereby adopts the following preamble and resolution.

It is the judgment and opinion of this body that the recently adopted temperance law for the State of Alabama has failed to promote temperance and that this law should be repealed at the earliest opportunity.

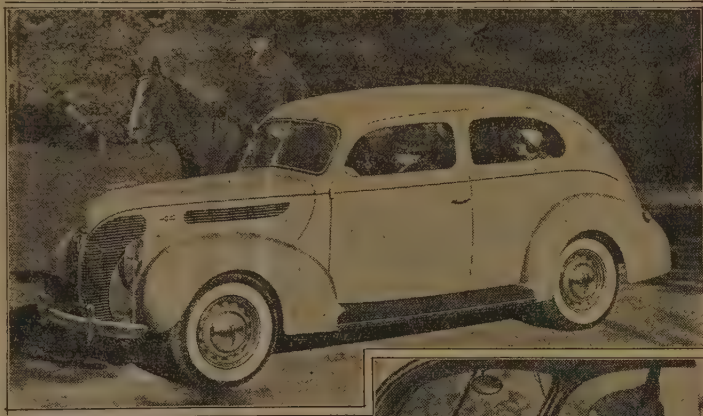

We deeply and sincerely deplore the fact that the State of Alabama is engaged in the business of buying and selling liquor to its citizenship; and it is no secret by now that this law passed to promote temperance and suppress the evils of intemperance, has increased the amount of drinking in Alabama in order that the revenue from liquor might be increased. We call the attention of the people to the inconsistency of the state selling whiskey to a young man or woman knowing and expecting that the whiskey will be drunk and knowing and expecting that in a great many instances the young man or woman will become drunk and commit crime and then for the State of Alabama to prosecute this person for having committed the very crime in which the state morally at least, aided and abetted; we cannot see the consistency of our state selling liquor to young people and others as well as allowing them to carry it in their automobiles and knowing that there is a likelihood of many of these traveling on the highway while intoxicated and endangering many lives and at the same time, establish a State Patrol system over the public highways of Alabama to protect the traveling public from violators of our traffic laws.

We call attention to the promises of the liquor interest in Alabama that, if Alabama would vote to legalize the sale of liquor that bootleggers and blind tigers would be put out of business. Have these promises been kept? The record shows that in many places that the police and sheriff forces are being increased and in spite of all our state roads being carefully patrolled, people are being killed and property destroyed due to liquor on our highways and yet notwithstanding that practically every state in the union is now legally wet yet driving while intoxicated and the toll it takes is an increasing problem to the thoughtful citizen of the land.

We feel that the liquor interest of Alabama and the officials of our State who stand for the liquor traffic should be brought into the open and their real motive exposed, the liquor interest and the officials favoring liquor never work for the cause of temperance, the more temperate the more revenue and it seems that our state is collecting double revenue on the liquor traffic; revenue from the sale of whiskey and revenue in cost and fines after the liquor is sold and a crime is committed. We call upon the people of Alabama to bend their efforts to make Alabama consistent on this ques-

TWO distinct lines of Ford V-8 cars are now being displayed in dealer showrooms. One is a newly-styled standard Ford line in three body types, the other a de luxe Ford line in eight body types. The de luxe Tudor sedan is pictured above. The de luxe sedans are larger in appearance, with longer hood and sweeping lines. The de luxe cars are powered with the 85 horsepower V-8 engine, the standard cars with either the 85 or the 60 horsepower engines. Newly-styled interiors are pictured at right. New instrument panel has instrument group in front of driver, grille by engine controls and cigar lighter, and glove compartment at right. In the de luxe cars, the compartment locks, and a clock is recessed in the compartment door.

A headlight beam control is fitted on the toe-board, a tell-tale light on instrument panel indicates whether the headlight beams are raised or depressed.

Hay Crops Help Control Erosion Farmers Find

Permanent strips of perennial vegetation are replacing red, galled areas in many cultivated fields in the erosion control area near Clanton, Alabama, according to James H. Wood, Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service.

Cooperating farmers have found that perennial hay crops planted on areas where a critical erosion problem exists within a cultivated field, simplify the control of erosion in the entire field, Mr. Wood said.

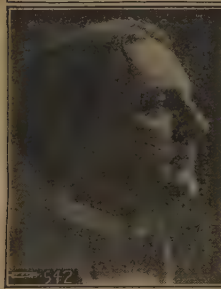

Usually these areas are already seriously eroded and are therefore the least productive portions of the field. Where perennial legumes are used in the permanent strips, they serve to build up the fertility of the soil, these areas as well as to control further washing of the land.

By slowing up run-off water from these eroded areas, the dense vegetation cover also reduces the erosion problem on lower lying cultivated land. Strips of annual close-growing crops such as cowpeas, soybeans are effectively used in rotations with strips of clean-tilled crops on the remainder of the field.

Types of perennial vegetation best suited to the control of erosion on critical areas in this section are kudzu, lespedeza. Their use provides continuous protection for portions of the field where the erosion problem is severe, Mr. Wood said.

To raise money for his wedding, Ray Slack, 22, of Brazil, Ind., sold four of his father's cows. His father was explained, and Ray was arrested, convicted, and now faces a jail term.

Results Of Feeding Peanuts To Chickens

The Alabama Agricultural Experiment Station announces the publication of a new bulletin on "The Value of Peanuts and Peanut Meal in Rations for Chickens."

It was prepared by D.F. King and G.J. Cottier of the poultry department of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute and can be obtained free from county agents or by writing Dean M. J. Funchess, Auburn.

In describing results obtained through experiments, the writers of the publication say:

"The protein supplied by peanuts did not give satisfactory results when fed in simple rations to hens or chicks unless supplemented with some other protein. Both buttermilk and skim milk were found to be very effective in supplementing peanuts. Fair results were obtained by using peanut meal as a protein supplement in rations for laying hens."

Each year farmers of Alabama produce approximately ten million bushels of peanuts, one-third of which is fed to livestock, principally to hogs. This bulletin reports two experiments: The first deals with the use of whole peanuts, ground peanuts with shells, ground peanuts without shells, and peanut meal in farm-flock rations for laying hens; whereas, the second gives the results of feeding peanuts and peanut products to baby chicks.

FACTS FROM THE RECORD

Written by F.G. Stephens, Publisher of The Southern Democrat, Oneonta

Meat Supplies For State Convicts

When the present Administration went into office the State was consuming in its Convict Department approximately a million pounds of meat annually. The State was not producing a pound of this meat. It was paying from nine to twenty cents a pound for it. To produce this meat would require 3,000 killing hogs weighing 200 pounds each, and 1,000 beef cattle weighing 400 pounds each.

The State Board of Administration is making an effort to produce on State owned farms all the meat required for its convicts. It now has 233 brood sows, 469 gilts and 454 pigs. It also has 365 meat hogs and 207 beef cattle ready to be killed. These hogs and cattle have been raised and fattened on feed produced on the State farms by convicts.

It is estimated that by the end of the next fiscal year the State will be producing all its hog meat requirements.

The State has been handicapped in producing its own meat requirements by not having a killing plant and a curing plant. These are now being built with convict labor and largely out of materials produced on State owned lands. Only the steel, cement and hardware have to be purchased.

The convicts are also producing the greater part of their other food requirements. They have produced the past year more than a half million pounds of rice, besides an ample supply of Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, syrup and various kinds of vegetables.

Mt. Carmel

The ladies met with Mrs. Nix Sunday night and reorganized the W. M. U. The following officers were elected. President, Mrs. Sims; vice-president, Mrs. Nix; Assistant vice-president, Mrs. J. C. Scott.

Secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Bill Foshee. The other officers to be elected at the next meeting on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 4th.

There were not so many at preaching Saturday but most everybody were at both services Sunday.

Mr. Cecil Elland united with the church Sunday night, and is a candidate for baptism. The church is very glad to receive him.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Higgins were visitors here last Sunday.

Miss Ruby Mae Higgins spent Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. Odell Higgins.

Miss Eula Sanders who is still suffering from the pneumonia she contracted in Selma last Thursday, her mother is with her for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Sewell were delighted to have as their guest part of last week, Mr. A. W. James, of Lamita, Calif., who is at his home at Jones on vacation. Mr. James and H. V. Sewell both are in the navy in Calif.

We are glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Tom Sims move into this community this week.

Bro. Paul Oden will be with us next Sunday afternoon at the ordination services.

Watch for the date and place of the quilting sponsored by the W. M. U. and if you haven't given your part you better do so within the next few days. Bring or send it to Mrs. Oden, or Mrs. Ben Higgins and be sure to be at the quilting.

Mrs. Sims took dinner with Mrs. Oden Monday.

J. D. Sanders was in the New Cedron community last Monday afternoon.

Bro. Nix and wife were the dinner guests the past Sunday of Mr. Elland.

For 13 years H. M. Guy and John Eyth of Topeka, Kan., had been taxed for the other's property. The error was discovered this year when Guy complained to the county treasurer that his taxes were too high.

STATE ADMINISTRATION HAS PASSED MANY NEW LAWS

Outstanding Legislation Passed During Graves Regime As Governor; Twenty-Three Of 26 Platform Planks Realized

A check-up of legislation for the state of Alabama during the present administration of Bibb Graves, as governor, shows that many outstanding changes and improvements have been made to meet changing conditions within the state.

It was also noted that as the present term of Governor Graves is nearing an end, twenty-three of the twenty-six "planks" in his campaign platform have been carried out. That, in the opinion of many, is a record.

Following is a list of the outstanding legislation put through during the present state administration, as shown by a careful check-up:

Homestead Exemption Law; Freeing Toll Bridges; Reducing and Refunding Bonded Debt; Reducing Interest Rates; Creating Public Welfare Department; Creating Department of Labor.

Enacting Unemployment Compensation Law; Creating the Office of People Public Service Attorney; Reducing the Price of Automobile Tags; Creating the State Board of Adjustment; Enacting the Minimum Program Law for Schools; Enacting the County Budget Law.

Enacting a Law for Uniform Accounting System for Counties; Passing Sales Tax Law; Passing Alcoholic Beverage Control Act; Law Providing for Old Age Pensions; Enacting a Law Requiring Examination of Books of County Officials Once Every Two Years.

Revised Revenue Code and Gave Farmers Additional Exemptions; Enacting Laws Enabling the State to Secure Additional Federal Funds; Enacting Laws Enabling the State to Build More Roads and Bridges; Enacting Laws Providing for Farm and Home Extension Work; Authorized the Creation of Rural Electrification Authority.

Enacted a Law Providing for Free Text Books for First Three Grades in Public Schools; Enacted a Law for Maintaining Health Unit in Every County; Enacted a Law Creating the State Armory Commission, Giving the State $1,500,000.00 Federal Money to Build Armories.

Enacted a Law Giving the Governor Power to Reduce Ad Valorem Taxes, When the Condition of the Treasury Would Permit; Enacted a Law Authorizing the Reorganization of the State Docks Commission; Enacted a Law Requiring all Dogs to be Vaccinated to Prevent Rabies; Amended the Law So As to Enable the State to Carry More of its own Insurance on State Property.

Passed a Law Providing for the Writing of a New Code of Alabama; Enacted a Law Creating the State Highway Patrol.

TREES SHOULD BE SET AS SOON AS RECEIVED

When trees, both fruit and forestry trees, are received from the nursery they should be planted as soon as possible, and under no condition should the roots be allowed to dry out, advises Lyle Brown, extension forester, Auburn.

"If they cannot be planted right away, or if the planting will take several days, the trees should be heeled-in in a trench dug deep enough so that the roots can be thoroughly covered," he says.

"The string around each bundle should be cut so that the seedlings can be spread out along the trench. At least one foot of trench should be allowed for each 100 trees."

W.M. ODEN ENJOYS 75TH BIRTHDAY RECENTLY

The birthday dinner was prepared at the home of his children and carried as a surprise to his home, him not knowing of the occasion until the children began to gather in Sunday, November 21.

The day was rather cold for the occasion. All his children were there except Thomas Oden of Rhode Island and Silas Oden of Mt. Carmel.

A bountiful dinner was served and a birthday cake of pink and white was placed in the center of the table. He received several nice and useful gifts.

Those enjoying the occasion were H.

R. Oden and family, Fred Oden and family, both of Isabella, J.F. Bowden and family of Birmingham, W.M. Kelley and family of Maplesville, Ira Kelley and family, Crit Oden and family, Raymond Oden and family, Walter Lawley and family, Paul Oden, Pete Oden and Mrs. Lucia Oden all of Shoultz. Also several young people of Shoultz. Several other friends called during the day. There was about 50 who spent the entire day enjoying this happy occasion. We are hoping Mr. Oden may enjoy many more happy birthdays.

60 OR 85 HORSEPOWER

STANDARD FORD V-8... 112" wheelbase; 85 or 60 horsepower engine; Improved Easy-Action Safety Brakes; Center-Poise Ride; All-steel body; Broadcloth or Mohair upholstery; Mohair extra in "60"; Mahogany-finished trim; One tail light, sun visor; Twin horns; 3 body types; 3 colors.

FORD offers two new cars for 1938—the standard Ford V-8 and the De Luxe Ford V-8. They are different in appearance—but built to the same high standard of mechanical excellence—on the same chassis.

Because people liked our 1937 car so well, they bought more than of any other make. They liked its looks, its smooth performance, and the way it handled. We have improved on that car in the newly styled Standard Ford V-8.

But some folks wanted still more size and style, with the same Ford advantages. For them, we designed a new De Luxe line. The De Luxe Ford V-8 Sedans are longer with more room, larger luggage space, and finer appointments all around.

De Luxe cars are equipped with the 85-horsepower engine only.

The Standard is even lower priced than the De Luxe. It has graceful new lines and well-tailored interiors—with a choice of engine sizes—85 or 60 horsepower.

Before Ford made V-type 8-cylinder engines available to every one, they were used only in expensive cars. Since then, four million Ford owners have learned the genuine enjoyment of driving an eight-cylinder car with all-around economy. The thrifty "60" engine, especially, makes possible in Standard models a very low first cost and equally low operating cost. With two distinct designs, two engine sizes and two price ranges, you'll find a 1938 Ford car to fit your needs exactly.

PRICES FOR CARS DELIVERED IN DETROIT—TAXES EXTRA

Standard Ford V-8 (60 hp.)—Coupe, $599; Tudor, $644; Fordor, $689. Standard Ford V-8 (85 hp.)—Coupe, $629; Tudor, $669; Fordor, $714. De Luxe Ford V-8 (85 hp. only)—Coupe, $689; Tudor, $729; Fordor, $774; Convertible Coupe, $774; Club Coupe, $749; Convertible Club Coupe, $804; Phaeton, $824; Convertible Sedan, $904.

Standard and De Luxe cars equipped with bumpers, bumper guards, spare wheel, tire, tube, tire lock and band, cigar lighter, twin horns, and headlight beam indicator on instrument panel, at no extra charge.

In addition, De Luxe cars are equipped with extra tail light, windshield wiper, sun visor; also de luxe steering wheel, glove compartment lock, clock, and chrome wheel bands, at no extra charge.

FARM LOANS

loans to not less than five and to not more than ten farm families according to land costs and as approved by the local Farm Security Advisory Committee.

The Bankhead-Jones legislation provides that applications for loans to acquire farms will be accepted by the local county offices of the Rehabilitation Supervisor who will act as secretary to the advisory committee. The Farm Security Advisory committee, appointed by Secretary Wallace, will pass on all purchase propositions certifying to the Farm Security Administration as to the applicant's qualifications, and as to the economic possibilities and value of the lands desired purchased. No action can be taken on any application until this local committee has been established in the county and are ready to consider the propositions submitted. A supply of necessary forms will be rushed to this office in a few days and the business of accepting applications will be started.

The tenant purchase program will be administered in the designated counties in connection with other services provided all counties by the rehabilitation division of the Farm Security Administration. These services include rehabilitation loans to finance crop-making, improvements to farm and home, group loans to provide needed equipment or services to farm groups in communities, farm debt adjustment for assistance to families with debt burdens beyond their ability to pay guidance in farm and home management practices to improve standards of living and provide additional cash revenues and accumulation of net worth.

Under title one of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Act, the persons eligible to apply for loans to acquire farms is set forth as follows:

"Only farm tenants, farm laborers, sharecroppers, and other individuals who obtain, or who recently obtained, the major portion of their income from farming operations shall be eligible to receive the benefits of this title. In making available the benefits of this title, the Secretary shall give preference to persons who are married, or who have dependent families, or wherever practicable, to persons who are able to make an initial down payment, or who are owners of livestock and farm implements necessary successfully to carry on farming operations. No person shall be eligible who is not a citizen of the United States."

"No loan shall be made for the acquisition of any farm unless it is of such size as the Secretary determines to be sufficient to constitute an efficient farm-management unit and to enable a diligent farm family to carry on successful farming of a type which the Secretary deems can be successfully carried on in the locality in which the farm is situated."

Guests on Thanksgiving Day of Mr. and Mrs. Parker Taylor were Mr. Taylor's sister, Mrs. Homer Burke, Mr. Burke and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Burke of Birmingham.

Congressman Hill to help get it out of the House committee. He failed to do so and the bill died.

"I again introduced it at the next session and it passed the Senate unanimously and again Congressman Hill failed to call for a vote on it after it was reported out of the committee and placed on the House calendar. This bill would have eliminated 700,000 bales of undeveloped cotton fibres in green bolls which was and still is counted in the cotton supply. Yet he tells you he will help the cotton farmer."

Heflin also assailed Congressman Hill for his support of the wages and hours bill, charging that if the bill were enacted into law it would result in an increased cost for farm necessities and would force many Alabama industries to close doors and drive labor from employment. He also said a fertilizer manufacturer told him that if the bill passed the cost of fertilizer would be increased from $2.00 to $4.00 per ton.

three highway patrol radio stations. With the cooperation of Sheriff Hardy and deputy, one youth was nabbed at his home near Jemison, following a report from the highway patrol in Montgomery that two youths were being held there, answering the description. A fourth was said to have been in the crowd later, but no charge had been placed against him as it was believed he had no part in the actual crime.

Highway patrolman Waites stated that one of the youths had returned to his home during Sunday night and had returned when they found him. He was turned over to the sheriff. The two caught in or near Montgomery were brought to Clanton Monday. All three were awaiting action of the grand jury Tuesday.

Information stated that the youths' ages ranged from about 14 up to 18 years of age. Only about $116 of the loot was recovered. One of the youths stated that the checks had been destroyed.

Other arrests reported in the county in which officers of the sheriff's office and Patrolmen Waites and Henley figured, were 1 for removing mortgaged property; 1 assault to murder; 1 petit larceny; 1 driving while intoxicated; 1 reckless driving; 3 public drunkenness; and 1 violating Section 82 of Rules of the Road.

Things We Think

Others Think What Think of Things Others Think
—BILLY SMITH

It seems strange that some Americans should have apprehensions as to the kind of national economic affairs we have in our midst so many of us know the answers to all questions.

According to one group the circumstance that everything has not been due to the errors of the first trust. Therefore all that is to be done is to send stocks up, end unemployment, balance the budget and a few things is for the President in a few newspaper columns, radio commentators, who have nothing to do but to do it for a long time.

The interest of economy, the interest might call in two or three well known and oft-printed words of the lot, and let the job. It is most unfortunate that some of these United States did not come to Chilton to secure the man for the place. Executive of the country, some of the heads of government departments might have better fitted for the job, had come from Chilton County.

Have in mind those writers who have even come in their barns to sit in their smokehouses, yet know how to run the government even dare say so without any sign of modesty, through the columns of the Republican newspaper.

The most disgusting thing to this paper now is to hear some petty politician begin to set out and elaborate that the President should do and the President and the present administration is doing that is wrong to remedy any situation that is particularly pleasing to them.

These people, most of whom are awakened to the fact that the Republican party has no hope to come to be so interested in the running of the state and nation's affairs as appear to be from their newspaper writings, why don't they get to what is going on and get into political party that has the power to correct any mistakes that are made by office holders—the party that is all the way to Washington.

There was a time when the people of this county were not being informed, but that day has past with the advent of radio and better newspaper coverage. Now, the people of Chilton County have realized long ago that interests lie much more than in the mere boundaries of this county.

The greater percentage of citizens who at one time or another voted a Republican ticket in county have realized that the and patriotic thing to do was to change their political affiliations to a Democratic ticket where have a voice in the selection of men and women who must handle the government affairs of the state and nation.

Through better educational facilities and more sources of direct information, the farmers of this county become enlightened and are given a loud chuckle up their sleeve some petty politician who can't defeat, attempts to influence with a lot of prattle about what is with the country—if anything is. Some newspaper writers don't realize when their own party is even a flip of the finger them nor what they have to say.

Of course, if it is a matter of filling in a newspaper, week after week some people may think that the criticism is the thing—and even like to read it. But, if our leaders are opponents of the Republic party in Chilton County, their official newspaper organ, their ideas of how to run the government brought to the attention of higher-ups, they will have to see their times before the citizens of Chilton County will heed their out-and-tiresome cry of "Wolf!"

Inference of all the writings of local "quack" economic doctors at if they had charge of the agricultural program instead of Secretary Wallace, crops would never have and prices would never diminish, instead of Harry Hopkins, had entrusted with relief, the unemployed would all now be economic; had they, instead of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, had been of government, such things as balanced budgets would by this

CLANTON ALL SET FOR XMAS BUYING RUSH

Stores Stocked; Prices Are Down Meeting Prices Of All Outsiders

The initial Christmas shopping period for 1937 which began last week already has produced substantial and convincing evidence that Clanton will find itself in a much greater Yuletide spirit and better position from an economic standpoint than it was last year or the years immediately preceding.

Most all the larger stores and advertisers in the city reported measurably greater business Saturday this year than for the first few days of last December, and in some of the stores last Saturday's business was characterized as almost phenomenal.

Probably never in the history of the stores of Clanton has there ever been such a more determined effort to provide the most attractively-priced merchandise in such complete lines, according to consensus of merchants.

While the active buying period has just started to set in, Clanton stores are fully prepared to take care of any shopping rush that may come with the latest in merchandise that will be wanted in this section. Merchants are this week expecting a wave of buying that all indications point to will occur, and they also state they have

RAILROAD PAYS SCHOOL TAXES AHEAD OF TIME

Purpose Is To Aid Counties In Meeting Payrolls Of School Teachers

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company will come to the aid of the schools of Alabama in a financial way this year, according to an announcement made this week by G. C. Wendling, superintendent, through D. Hogan, agent at Clanton.

This announcement stated that: "Under the laws of Alabama, we have until December 31 to pay State and County Taxes, before penalty accrues. The L & N R R Co. pays in Alabama to the various collecting districts about $800,000.00 per year.

"In order that the school teachers and others who depend largely upon railroad taxes for money for Christmas may be paid, I have been authorized by President J. B. Hill, of this Company.

CHRISTMAS PAGEANT AT MULBERRY BAPTIST CHURCH

There will be a Christmas pageant at Mulberry Baptist church the fourth Sunday night, December 26, beginning at 6:00 o'clock P.M.

"The Adoration" is a beautiful and full portrayal of the birth of Christ.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Prepare your gifts now for the White Christmas at the Clanton Methodist Church December 19th. The gifts are to be sent to the children at the orphanage. Do unto our children in the orphanage as you would desire others to do unto your child if he were dependent. Think kindly of the children and give to them accordingly. Boxes will be ready to receive the gifts at the church on the date mentioned, December 19th.

time be only an expression of history.

This leads to the very natural deduction that the only way to avoid dictatorship, price dropping, crop failures, and unemployment would be to take some of our die-hard, would-be political leaders and writers of Chilton County, whose own party failed to recognize them at the polls, and turn the government over to them beginning with Chilton County and on up to Washington. Then they would have a reasonably wide field for their wonderful ideas about how to run the government, yet cannot make themselves absolutely self-sustaining.

So, we consider it most unfortunate that this idea of selecting government executives from some of our county's political editorial writers did not occur to us before now.

Special Program For 4-H Clubs To Be Presented

THREE SHOWS TO BE GIVEN OVER COUNTY

Public Invited To See Shows On Wednesday, December 15th In This County

Those young people of Chilton County who are members of the famous 4-H Clubs are in for one of the biggest treats in the way of entertainment, instruction, information and profit making, according to an announcement made here this week by B. N. Ivey, assistant county agent in charge of 4-H Club work, in this county that they have ever had.

A real entertainment in the form of a talking motion picture will be presented at three different places in the county on Wednesday, December 15th. The program, which is given in this article will be shown in Clanton at the Wadesonian Theater on Wednesday morning at eight-thirty; at the Maplesville school auditorium at twelve-thirty P.M.; and at the Jemison High School auditorium at seven o'clock at night, all on Wednesday, December 15th. There will be no charge for admission for members, their friends and families.

$2,000 In Prizes

Here's the contest: $2,000 in awards. This talking picture program will be shown in most of the 2,300 counties of the United States. The attendance contest for $2,000 is for county 4-H organizations. The award of prizes will be based on attendance at the showing in proportion to the rural population of the county. After the tour is over the county

26 TRUE BILLS ARE RETURNED BY GRAND JURY

Woodfin Littleton Indicted In Death Of Forrest Littleton Here

Thirty-four cases were considered and ninety-two witnesses questioned by the special session of the Chilton County grand jury empaneled for four days here last week, according to the report turned in to Judge Arthur Glover, who called the special session. Twenty-six true bills were returned by the investigating body.

Among the indictments was one against Woodfin Littleton, of near Thorshy. The indictment read a first degree murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Forrest Littleton on Sunday, November 14th. John Caver, negro, was arrested at the time for the shooting. He was also indicted by the grand jury on the same charge.

Joel Chapman, negro, was indicted for first degree manslaughter in connection with the death of Forrest Littleton.

CHRISTMAS PAGEANT AT BAPTIST CHURCH HERE 19TH

"The Enchanted Candle, a Christmas pageant, will be presented at the Baptist Church Sunday evening, December 19, at 6:30 o'clock.

Special music for the occasion is under the direction of Miss Kathryn Foss, assisted by Mrs. Arthur Willis and Mrs. John Deramus. The cast for the pageant is being coached by Mrs. L. C. Ross and Mrs. Grady Hefflin. Mrs. Luther Little is in charge of decorations.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gore and Mrs. Marion Gore spent Sunday in Birmingham.

Mrs. W. H. Bachelor, Mrs. Joe Sanford and Miss Jean Sanford of Wetumpka were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Smith Sunday.

Greensboro, Ala., and Miss Edna Hayes, Asheville, Ala. The latter two were piano accompanist and dancing partner. All these young ladies are students at Alabama College.

One of the features of the program was the singing of "Ranoma" by four of the young ladies, at the same time in their native languages, English, German, French and Spanish. Each of those from the foreign countries made short talks and told of what they thought of Americans, their customs, etc., and each sang one song in her own language.

Patterson Hicks, president of the club presided. Invocation was by Claude Lawrence and Ralph Grant, a guest of the club sang "Sweetheart" dedicated to the visiting young ladies.

Big Continued Swing To Hill Is Noted Over The Entire State

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 4.—That rank and file of organized labor in Alabama is strongly in favor of Congressman Lister Hill for the United States Senate was a matter of record today following a rally here last night at which J. Thomas Hefflin was denounced as an opponent of the President and a foe of the farmer and working man.

Participating in the rally, which was broadcast, were more than a dozen Alabama State Federation of Labor leaders, including President S. E. Roper, who presided and introduced the speakers; Vice-president Hush Brown and Mrs. Will Denmore State Vice-president for Women.

Speaker after speaker compared Congressman Hill and Hefflin from the standpoint of their records and unhesitatingly recommended Hill after setting up strong claims that Hefflin has the backing of the Liberty League and other opponents of President Roosevelt and the national Democratic administration.

ROCKETT WILL PUT ON HUGE SALE DEC. 10TH

Both Large Stores Join In Huge Christmas Event To Open Friday

Tomorrow, Friday, December 10, will be a red letter day for this section and also for the two Rockett stores in Clanton, the Clanton Building Supply Company and the Rockett Dry Goods Company for tomorrow these two large stores open a huge Christmas event in the way of a special sale.

The two join hands this week and are announcing this event in the News with two pages of advertising in a special colored section. This event is one of the few these stores have pulled in such a big manner in some time and this announcement will be of wide interest.

The two pages of advertising in this issue of the News from these two popular stores lists only a few of the hundreds of values to be found in the stores. But, those that are listed are excellent examples of what one may expect when visiting either of the two stores, the Rockett Dry Goods Company or the Clanton Building Supply Co.

ONLY 14 SHOPPING DAYS UNTIL XMAS

Believe it or not, there remain only fourteen more shopping days until Christmas, counting today. If you don't believe Santa is practically through loading his sleigh for Christmas, 1937, just count the days on your calendar.

Fourteen days will pass off mighty quick. Especially to those who have a lot of Christmas shopping to do and the age-old plea of "Shop Early" has never had such a more sincere ring than this year. So, get busy and get that gift shopping well underway. That last-minute rush will catch you if you don't watch out. Means whereby Alabama, within a few years, could more than double its peak agricultural income of $172,000,000 in 1929, with subsequent economic gains in all lines of endeavor, were said yesterday by R. J. Goode, commissioner of agriculture and industries to be at hand.

In an address before the Rotary Club, at the Gay-Teague Hotel, Commissioner Goode said only the practical application of information and facts already developed by the Agricultural Experiment Stations stood between Alabama farmers and income of at least twice that of 1929.

If all knowledge at hand could be applied, he said, the State's cash agricultural income would be quadrupled. This, however, he admitted to be virtually an impossibility—at least for the present.

Commissioner Goode cited what he said, in his belief, were the greatest deterrents to application of the program suggested—the "archaic system of farm financing, which is on a one-crop short note basis," and "the lack of adequate marketing facilities." The speaker said only two stable markets provided ready cash in Alabama throughout the year—cotton and livestock—with peanuts a stable crop in a smaller portion of the State.

COOPERATION OF CITIZENS ON FIRE ASKED

Mayor Jones Asks Citizens To Try To Eliminate Fire and Expense

Due to an apparent epidemic of fire alarms during the past week or more in the city, Mayor Jones made the following statement, asking for the cooperation of citizens in this:

"We paid the fire boys $128.00 for putting fires during the month of November, and in addition to this cost there is gas and oil and the upkeep of the fire equipment. I was glad to pay the boys this money for the reasons they earned it, and much more, when one considers the value of the property saved by these splendid fellows, and the getting out of a warmed these cold nights and race to the fire engine room and later when the fire is reached they are often drenched with cold water.

"But these facts are not all I wish to call the attention of the public to. Judging by the reports I received on some of these fires they were caused by gross carelessness on the part of the property owner, or those in charge of the property, and could have been prevented by just a little precaution.

"I respectfully ask, and I hope, the people will be more careful with fire. Fire is a heavy drain on the city treasury, as you will see by this report, so let's stop the expense by preventing the fires and save the property also. The boys are paid $17.00 for each fire, and if there are no fires, no pay."

C. FENN JONES, Mayor, City of Clanton.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Mullins of Mobile spent the week end here with Mrs. W. I. Mullins.

Stop Another Depression

There is a grave danger, pointed out by many responsible economists, that the country may sing into another depression—unless corrective steps are quickly taken. The same experts are generally agreed that two of the outstanding causes of the recent drop in business production and the collapse in security values are the Capital Gains Tax and the Undistributed Profits Tax.

The Capital Gains Tax, by heavily penalizing persons who sell securities at a profit, dams up the normal flow of private capital into productive industry. A man who makes such an investment must take all the risks of loss—but if he makes a profit instead, the tax deprives him of a large part of it. Under this condition, who can blame capital for staying in "hiding"?

The Undistributed Profits Tax prevents corporations from using funds to build up necessary reserves against bad times, for expanding inventories, for rehabilitating plant and equipment, etc. To quote a National Industrial Conference Board Survey, "The tax penalizes thrift and introduces tendencies contrary to conservative financial practice.... The tax involves the application of a new and unsubstantiated theory of taxation. It is uneconomic because of its effects on corporate policies and practices and not because of the burdens imposed. The tax is deficient as a regulatory device. The law assumes a degree of uniformity among corporations that does not exist and the tax is inequitable primarily because of this assumed uniformity."

Two bills have been introduced in Congress by Representative Emanuel Celler, Democrat of New York, to correct these taxes. In support of these bills is the practically united sentiment of economists, financial journalists, industrial leaders, and many men high in the government service. There is no qualified opposition worthy of the name.

The passage of these two bills should stop another depression and bring the recovery movement back to life.

Our Modern Life

Modern civilization, it is very wonderful. It has brought us up by a lot of fluff and it has brought us up by a lot of fluff. It has brought us up by a lot of fluff and it has brought us up by a lot of fluff. It has brought us up by a lot of fluff and it has brought us up by a lot of fluff.

We must make ourselves uncomfortable in ridiculous clothing; we must become identified with enterprises in which we have no interest; we must pretend to enjoy things we loathe; we must submit to being bored stiff by tiresome people; we must bow to the decrees of self-constituted dictators in matters of etiquette—or be classed as barbarians.

Our actions are largely governed by inhibitions, many of them trivial and without any bearing upon true character or morality, but nevertheless considered binding upon all who would appear civilized. Were these rules and regulations established by leaders possessed of superior morals or intellect, they might be observed with better grace. But if such were the case the rules would probably be quite different from what they are.

In the eyes of some of our arbiters, it appears that a breach of table manners is a more heinous offense than a violation of the moral code; to wear out-of-style clothes is more reprehensible than defrauding a creditor.

But most of us lack the courage to rebel because we must be regular and standardized if we would be classed among the "best people."

Many a romance between movie stars is born and dies in the studio's press agency den.

An Illusion

Not long ago we heard a local citizen commending a neighboring city. "Why can't we do things the way they do things the way they do them over there," was the tenor of his observations.

Later in the day it happened that an intelligent citizen from that community dropped in to visit the editor. We began to discuss community activities, and found that he was holding our city up as an example. "The citizens of your town seem to go at things in a sensible, intelligent manner. Our people get too hysterical," he said; "they do things, but some of the things that they do are not right. We suffer from much mis-directed activity."

So it goes, the distant city always appears best. We are close to this town and see only its defects. We are some distant from other places and see and hear only about their virtues. We mistake activity for achievement, hysteria for community spirit.

This is one reason why the writer is always a bit amused when he hears local citizens condemn our community because it is not as enterprising as some neighboring city. Distance is the thing that creates the illusion of difference.

Long and careful study of communities will convince one that all small cities are much the same—all make mistakes—all are made up of people who are not sufficiently interested in the welfare of their home town—all have unusual individualists who cannot see the advantage of harmony and co-operation.

The notion that our town is different and is not as good as other cities of the same size and class, is an illusion.

Safety Education: Job No. 1

The role of education in the efforts toward solution of the traffic accident problem, is ably discussed by Albert W. Whitney, consulting director of the National Conservation Bureau.

Mr. Whitney goes back to the early days of the industrial safety movement for an analogy which is vital to his discussion. He recalls that on the one hand there were those who believed that the only way to make industry safe was through so-called engineering projects needed to achieve traffic control and safety. He refers particularly to the enormously expensive job of rebuilding our streets and highways. However, he points out, we must meanwhile be carrying on the necessary work of preparing individuals, ordinary citizens and public servants alike, for proper adjustment to their motor age environment. That means education.

We now have a similar situation in the traffic field, Mr. Whitney says. "The state is in the same position as the employer, for the state cannot consistently insist on good driving and good pedestrianism unless it is also doing its part in making the physical and mechanical conditions right." He emphasizes that we must not lose time in carrying forward the necessarily long-term engineering projects needed to achieve traffic control and safety. He refers particularly to the enormously expensive job of rebuilding our streets and highways. However, he points out, we must meanwhile be carrying on the necessary work of preparing individuals, ordinary citizens and public servants alike, for proper adjustment to their motor age environment. That means education.

As he says, "The people of the United States must be educated to an understanding of the fact that the traffic accident problem can be solved. We have sufficient proof that solution is possible. If the man in the street can be educated to the belief that we do not have to have traffic accidents the back of the traffic accident problem will be broken. To do this is educational job number one."

MORALECHOS

O. W. Haskew

Alabama opened a State owned whiskey store in a thriving inland town of seven thousand peaceful citizens. On the first Saturday after the opening of that store farmers and city people met on the streets and together they pushed into the coffers of the State one thousand dollars for whiskey. The sight was enough to make angels weep. A farmer was seen to drive his team in front of the store and leave his little daughter sitting in that wagon, having on just one thin garment, and go into the store and come out with a package of whiskey under his arm. Money that should have been spent in the purchase of clothing for the little girl went for whiskey. A workman in the town, whose family was in dire need was seen to draw his check and make for the whiskey store. What he had made went for whiskey and his family went without food. Can a civilized country allow this to go on? Every dollar spent for whiskey is wasted and more than wasted. If the evil stopped at buying the whiskey it would only be money, but it does not stop there. Whiskey makes demons out of men and women. May the good Lord hasten the time when we will come to ourselves and drive this demon from the land. It makes me blush with shame to know that my state is in the whiskey business. In the business of producing want, shame and death.

A young man with a good face called to see a good woman who had been like a mother to him. They were glad to see each other. In the run of the conversation this good woman asked, "Tom, What are you doing now?" She was anxious to know if this boy had a job. The boy hung his head and was silent for some moments. Then with shame on his face he replied, "I am ashamed to tell you, I'm working in a whiskey store." About all the good woman was able to say was, "Why, Tom, I'm ashamed of you." She thought back of that fine, promising young man. The boy did not try to defend himself but confessed that he was not where he belonged. Mothers, are you raising your boy to be a clerk in a whiskey store? It matters not who sells whiskey—in a boot-leg form or in a legal store. There is sure to be a tragic murder of the inside fineness. No man can sell whiskey to his fellow men and be the man that he should be. A mother said to me, Doctor, I had rather follow my son to the grave than to follow him into the whiskey business. It is better to be dead than to deal damnation to our fellowmen.

Some American tourists desired to travel through the jungles of Africa. They were in great haste as all Americans are. After engaging some natives at the seaport they plunged into the wilderness with all possible speed. Three days passed with the same pushing travel on the part of the Americans. On the fourth morning the natives were found squatting under the trees and no amount of persuasion would induce them to move. The bewildered Americans ventured to ask them why they would not travel. They simply replied, "We shall rest today and wait for our souls to catch up with our bodies." It is a fact that we Americans are in too much of a hurry to live. We are in such a rush to get places that we do not need to go, that we have left our souls far behind. We are in too big of a hurry to live. We have refused to stop on the Sabbath Day long enough for our souls to catch up with our bodies.

A sales manager was faced with the problem of a decline in sales through a part of his territory on the account of some men not being able to keep up the record of the company. He called his men together for a conference and presented before them a large sheet of paper with one large black dot on it. He asked his men what they could see on that paper. In unison they replied, "One black dot!" He asked if that was all they could see and again they affirmed that they saw nothing but the black dot. Then the sales manager proceeded to place his finger on the trouble spot in the matter of sales. Said he, "Some of you men go out over your territory and you see nothing but the discouraging things, you see the black dot and you never see the large face of the white, the hopeful, that is before you. If you will go back to your territory and look for the bright side of the trade, you will be able to bring up your sales." They took the hint and he was troubled no more about the sales. Let me say unto you—If you go out and see nothing in the world but the dark, your life too will be a failure. There is more brightness in the world than there is darkness. More to make life a success than there is to make it a failure. Look for the beautiful and live. There is more whiteness on the page of life than darkness.

When the World War broke out in such a fury the German armies thought to rush through the Belgian nation without permission. King Albert lifted his arm in protest. He fought with all strength to keep back an invading army. After his country had been invaded and his cities left in ruins by the German army, the Kaiser said to him, "Now you see what your opposition has brought upon you. What have you gained? What has your life left?" King Albert turned to him with a flash of the eye and replied, "Sir, I have my soul left." If you have a character that is worth anything, if you have ideals that stand for something, you may be assured that

FARMERS ARE REPAYING

THEIR LAND BANK

Auburn, Ala.—For the first time several years farmers are now paying the Federal land bank principal money that the amount of new loans, according to F. F. Administration.
Repayments exceeded new loans more than $1,350,000 during September. In the first nine months of the year loans paid in full and installment principal aggregated $49,313,000, which was only slightly less than the $51,000,000 loaned during the same period.

"Many farmers have used surplus money to retire their loans a year about 10,000 have repaid their land bank loans in full," Hill said. "About $20,000,000 consisted of stallments and special payments."
Approximately 10,000 miles of terracing was done on Alabama farms last year.

"WASP" PLANES FOR ARMY WIN APPROVAL

Success of Craft in Spain
Convinces Officials.

San Diego, Calif.—Spain is a fiery laboratory in which modern military tactics—especially as regards aircraft—are being tested.

Army air corps officers stationed here have revealed that one of the first lessons learned from the Spanish revolution is the extreme value of pursuit planes.

"In the United States many strategists have been inclined for the last few years to discount the value of the pursuit type of fighting plane," one officer of the One Hundred Fifty-fourth observation squadron, who refused to permit his name to be used, told the United Press.
"But the pursuit planes definitely have come into their own in Spain."

Reports on Air Strategy.

Officers stationed here said for months the War department has been compiling confidential reports evaluating certain types of strategy used by both insurgents and loyalists.

Among the findings based on those reports were said to be several of a startling nature insofar as aircraft is concerned.

It was said the Spanish war also has given military officials a chance to observe the performance of fighting aircraft designed and built by the great powers of the world, and to compare the efficiency of design, armament and speed with similar American craft.

The tiny, darting pursuit planes have demonstrated, in the Spanish civil war, time and time again, it was said, their ability to overcome the heavier, but potent bombing craft.

Carrying small sized bombs and machine guns the little ships are able to perform deceptive maneuvers around the more cumbersome "flying fortresses" and evade the heavier armament while disabling the larger craft with sprays of machine-gun fire and the small bombs.
Then, too, it was pointed out, the pursuit planes are particularly valuable in harassing concentrations of troops on the ground by demoralizing them with machine-gun fire.

Army Orders Fast Ships.

Army officers here said the lessons of the Spanish war already are being put to use in this country, with the army having placed orders for what were described here as the "fastest pursuit planes in the world."

Eighty-five of these little fighters already are under construction at the Seversky Aircraft corporation in the East, it was said.

Then, too, the army, according to officers here, has developed what is known in military circles as the XFM-1. This plane, the officers say, is capable of "overhauling any air target thus far constructed."

This new XFM-1 carries a crew of five men. It is operated by pusher rather than tractor propellers—a decided innovation in modern fighting planes. This plane, the top speed of which is a secret, is capable of fighting at an altitude of 30,000 feet or more. At least five, and possibly more, heavy-caliber machine-guns are mounted on this craft, it is said.

War in Spain Opening

New Industry in Africa

Johannesburg.—Civil war in Spain may bring into existence another important industry in South Africa, if certain negotiations being handled by the union department of mines are successful.

Hematite ore, for which northern Spain has hitherto been the principal source, soon will be going forward to overseas blast furnaces, which are unable to obtain adequate supplies owing to the present blockade of Bilbao and other export centers.

Since hostilities began between the insurgents and the Spanish government, British and Continental ironmasters have been searching for new sources of supplies. The geological survey at Pretoria localized vast fields of similar hematite in the Union. More than one-quarter of the imports into the United Kingdom for 1935, the last available year, was derived from Spain, namely, 1,122,949 tons out of 4,547, 436 tons.

Working Girl Is Best as

Wife, Cornell Discovers

Ithaca, N. Y.—To assure a successful marriage, marry a girl who has been a bride, Cornell university's department of rural social organization advises potential husbands.

Girls who, before marriage, were active in community affairs, or who were responsible housekeepers in their own homes, are also "good bets."

"The poorest bet of all," according to the department, "is the girl who, after finishing school, stays at home with no responsibility either in a home, or on a job, or in a community."

Future husbands were also discussed by the department. Husbands with a record of regular employment and a lively interest in their jobs are one and one-half times more likely to have a well-adjusted marriage.

Joint Orphanage Offering Will Be Made Over State

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 4.—(Special) —An appeal has gone out to all Abbott, Methodist, and Presbyterian churches, Sunday Schools, young people's organizations and other church organizations of Alabama to get ready for the "White Christmas" offering in behalf of the Alabama Baptist Orphanage at Troy, the Methodist Orphanage at Selma, and the Presbyterian Home at Talladega, to be made in all departments on Sunday, December 19th.

The call is issued by E.F. Dunbar of Troy, chairman of the Board of the Baptist Home, represented by R.A.
Porter of Birmingham, jointly with K.
E. Cooper of Birmingham, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Presbyterian Home. They call attention to the fact that it is proposed to raise a minimum quota of $35,000.00 for each of these institutions to meet absolute needs during the coming year, and urge the fullest cooperation.

Appeal headquarters are located at 314 First National Bank Building here, but all offerings, contributions and gifts should be sent and checks made payable to each of the respective institutions, according to the preference of the givers, and the general public is also invited to participate.

Sunday School children are urged to begin saving their pennies and nickels now for their "White Christmas" gift, and their teachers are urged to send to the respective orphanages for cards with slots for coins, which will help the children save these counts. All adult classes are urged to hold a joint service on December 19th, at which service Santa Claus will hand gifts to everyone present, and as each recipient comes to the front to get the gift, he or she will make their contributions.

For churches holding a White Christmas service in the afternoon, it is suggested that all classes and organizations who have gotten up funds for their representatives present their offerings, and also have the members of the congregation at large make their contribution at this service.

bor's cat again.

cuffed a robber while a policeman sat

CONSERVATION BRIEFS

Places To Hunt

The Department of Conservation now has on record nearly two score private hunting preserves in Alabama whose owners or operators are prepared to provide board, lodging, dogs and guides to persons hunting on their lands. The large number of requests received from sportsmen in and out of Alabama for places to hunt prompted the department to compile the list, and the information is available to the public.

The places range from a few hundred acres to as much as 50,000 acres. If the owner or operator can furnish dogs, guides or horses, that fact is recorded, along with the type of game to be found. The cost of the above accommodations per day also is given and a prospective hunter can figure out in advance how much it will cost him for a trip.

Some of the finest hunting lands in all parts of Alabama are included in the records and the game available ranges from deer, turkey, quail to dove, wild duck and squirrel. An inquiry addressed to the Department of Conservation, Montgomery, will bring a prompt reply, giving the location of the nearest preserve to the writer, together with approximate costs.

More Wild Ducks

With opening of the 30-day season on wild ducks on Nov. 27, hunters are finding an increased number of the migratory and native wild ducks, according to reports. Results of a survey conducted by the Conservation Department and published in the Dec-1 issue of the Game and Fish News, indicated a substantial increase in the wild duck population this year. The Tennessee Valley area, including Wheeler and Wilson Lakes, and the coastal counties of Mobile and Baldwin constitute the main duck concentrating areas of this state. A slow but steady return of the wild duck has resulted from conservation and enforcement measures, and in a few years Alabama may have some of the best duck shooting territory in the country.

Next to Railroad

He tried to move. He drew the and up and pushed with it. He turned one knee, straining to shove his hips upward then slumped back while the canoe rocked alarmingly. The shift raised the one end still higher. The tops of the trees were going to a steady breeze, now the breeze found more purchase on the drifting craft, speeding its progress. Shaw, however, did not stir again. The blood stain showed bright with fresh wetting . . .

There! Little Duck was done, now he had branches enough to warm her when night came and before she crawled into her robes. She stood panting, resting, muttering that it was not good for the old to be left alone.

She stared hard up the river. A canoe, unpaddled, floating in a crazy trim, with someone in it . . . two shots; a canoe, floating idly, a man lying in the bottom.

She was beyond concern for others, this old woman. So many things had happened that she did not care much what happened further, except that it was not good to be alone when rum is doled out. She could not have been alone, either, and she a canoe, but the others had taken them all. She could not talk far with the withered leg, or she would have followed by land. But here was a canoe, a gift from Euchi Manidou!

The lodge pole, though it was dry and light, was a burden for her, especially when she tried to extend it far. But she got the large end against her and grasped it at arm's length and waded into the stream and let it drop across the canoe. She drew the craft in and, panting, grasped the rail, letting the pole go. She did not look closely at Shaw until she had the canoe safely grounded in the shallows. Then she stooped and peered at him and asked:

"What is done to you?" He did not answer and she leaned over, touching his cheek. She began to nod. The flesh was cold; his heart was punctured; blood was over and in the canoe bottom. He had been shot. He was dead.

Well, death does not matter. She had seen much of death; it had come close to her many times. But she does not wait for a trader who measures his liquor by the drop. He thinks only of the rum and what here is a canoe.

She moved around the end of the raft to be outside and began lifting it.

Little Duck rocked the canoe many times, but could not turn it over. She dragged it afloat, moved a short distance downstream and tied again. The bottom now rose, a log, which made rocking easier. The log was close to shore, and an arm's length away. She rocked and rocked, rolling the canoe in wider arcs and, finally, putting all her strength into one great heave, she had it on its beam's end.

The trader rolled out, all in a heap, with his feet across the rail, head and shoulders in the grass. She let the canoe down again and his feet fell with a heavy splash into the river. He lay there, face to the sun, eyes closed. He looked dead . . .

Zheshehense tickled her lips with her tongue. Her eyes were bright and she took hold of the withered log with one hand and lifted the log, after many grunts, inside. She fell into the canoe after the foot and it rocked violently but did not capsize. She got onto the middle cross piece and picked up the paddle. Her breath was quick, and her eyes bright as trader's. She had a canoe and a fair wind down the lake. They had left her behind, but she had a canoe now! The trader was dead but that did not matter. She had a canoe and whiskey was down there at the medicine lodge . . .

An odd sort of consciousness came from that buzzing void out yonder Rodney Shaw. It was a throbbing, coming-and-going recognition of heat and cold and pain, surging forward, swinging backward, coming again; a rhythm of agony . . . He moaned from the torment of the sun in his half closed eyes. He could not bring the lids together. The glaring light beat into his brain and other agonies assailed them. He attempted to shut those eyes wholly and failed. He knew, then, that he must turn his head. Tremendous task! He tried to think readily about it, but could not; the buzzing all about got in the way of thought. "He braced himself," he tried, and tried. The effort made him pant and moan, but he achieved

The sun no longer beat into his brain. Instead of torturing him, it was comforting with its warmth. His back, his shoulder, one whole half of his torso burned and throbbed and stung. His throat was dry and clogged. His head seemed pressed about with a metal band, drawn tight against the skull, and his feet ached with cold. In truth, they did not feel like his feet at all; they seemed to be nothing . . . another end of existence, the pole of cold as against the pole of heat. A realization that half of him lay in water beat its way through the confused roaring that had been only a buzz. He tried to shove himself to a sitting posture and could not. He coughed and moaned from the coughing. He felt his breast with one hand, worked it through the front of his shirt and started to tear the leather away from where it stuck to the flesh, but that was such exquisite agony that the fingers went limp, as did the rest of him. Quickly, consciousness faded. The sun was lowered when sense returned in that surging-retreating rhythm. He was cold, trembling. He rolled his eyes to see all that was possible: A lodge, a clearing in birches.

He Was Cold, Trembling.

"Zheshehense!" he gasped, remembering the old woman. "Zheshehense!" But his voice failed.

He tried to concern himself with wonder as to what had happened, why he was here. But it was difficult to concentrate on wonder. What had happened did not matter so much, anyhow. Nothing mattered much, except cold and pain. If he had a fire, now, he might . . .

He got himself over to his belly and, after an age of struggle, to his hands and knees. Dry brush was there, by the ashes of a fire; probably the ashes covered coals. If he could blow them up and get blaze licking into that fuel . . . But he crashed down, like a wounded bear, and lay shuddering while the ability to know about surroundings and try to help himself went drifting away into a vague noisy disturbance which came close and pressed about him . . .

The burial of a chief's son swung into its full ceremony. The rough coffin which Basile had constructed was daubed vermilion and on either side, done crudely in black, was a figure of a crane, the Flat Mouth's totem.

The youth's body lay in its finest clothing; soft, yellow deeskins, embroidered with beads and quills. About the throat was a necklace of bear claws and the head rested on a medicine sack. Beside him reposed gun, powder and shot and new flint. Eagle feathers had been placed upon his breast and at his feet were six beaver traps.

Waiting was unbroken, even while old men made talks. Many had spoken high praise for the departed hunter and now a young man, a friend of Flat Mouth, stood beside the bier and recounted the virtues of the dead and slashed his own breast with his knife to make known how deep was his grief.

And so, in the midst of all this interest centering about the painful box none noticed the canoe that came down the lake, bearing a single, slight figure who paddled first on this side, then on that, risking disaster in the growing seas, but keeping on, eyes avid and mouth open in expectation.

The ceremony was down wind; Little Duck could not hear the wailing. But she could see a crowd

RULES FOR HUNTERS

While the following admonitions to hunters embrace only simple rules which every intelligent person should intuitively observe, the fact remains that a failure to observe them is the direct cause of numerous deaths and injuries every year. Read them over.

1. Do not load your gun until you reach your hunting grounds.
2. Always unload before climbing a fence and never lean a loaded gun against anything.
3. Never carry your gun with the safety catch off.
4. Never put your hand on the muzzle of your gun.
5. Never rest the muzzle on the ground.
6. Never jump a ditch with a loaded gun.
7. Do not load your gun in the house.
8. Do not carry a loaded gun in an automobile or on a horse.
9. Unload your gun before entering a boat and never load in a moving boat.
10. Never point a gun at anyone.
11. Never point your gun at any object unless you expect to shoot.
12. Never shoot at question mark—it might be a man or a woman.

Empire Construction Company Will Erect Two Schools In Bibb

News was received here last week to the effect that the Empire Construction Company, of Mountain Creek, Ala., had been awarded the contract to erect two large school buildings in Bibb County. The Empire Construction Co., is headed by Chas. Cooper and B.B. Cooper, two of the county's widely known builders and contractors.

The two school buildings will be erected through funds from the government's PWA, with the larger job being in Centerville, county seat of Bibb County and the other at Camp High.

Last year the Empire Construction Company erected seven school buildings in Marshall County, on Sand Mountain, and it will be remembered that they were given the contract to erect the beautiful Isabella High School building in Chilton County, and that they handled the job of remodeling the attractive new Peoples Savings Bank Building in Clanton. A short time ago they completed a PWA school building in Houston County.

The Billingsley High School was also among those erected by the Empire Construction Co., and it was also learned by the writer that this company is the only licensed contractor in central Alabama. The large Holtville school in Elmore County is also among those erected by the Cooper Brothers of this county.

Teh Messrs. Cooper stated that in the construction of the two buildings in Bibb County, all labor available from that county will be used, but that in case they are unable to secure sufficient labor there, they would turn to their home county. They also announced that F.M. Chambers, of Clanton, and T.L. Baker, of Mountain Creek would be in charge of the construction of the two Bibb County buildings.

The W.M.U. met last Saturday evening for a business meeting. Only six were present on account of rain. The next meeting will be on Tuesday, afternoon December 20, at the home of Mrs. Watley. A Christmas program will be rendered and refreshments served. Please be there.

We regret Mr. Tom Foshee is very ill again.

Mr. Crayton Lenoir seems to be improving some.

Miss Eula Sanders, at King's Hospital in Selma, is reported to be somewhat better than last week. She will undergo an operation within the next few days.

Mrs. Odis Sewell will return to her home in Clanton this week from Wood-

What's RIGHT With ALABAMA

A LAND OF PERPETUAL PROMISE

RECENTLY the author of an article, critical of an Alabama city, paid it an unwitting compliment by calling it a "city of perpetual promise." Perhaps he should have been more liberal with his compliment—and included all of Alabama.

From Biblical days, a land of promise has always been one looked toward with longing and hope. What joy would there be in living in a land without promise—without hope? What thrill of achievement could you expect to find in a section where all possibilities of development and progress had been exhausted—where the only end to look forward to would be stagnation? What pleasure might there be in the knowledge that there was no opportunity—no promise in Alabama, because she had reached the state of perfection?

If Alabama were not a land of promise, farmers from other sections would not come to settle in her rich agricultural territory to coax abundant crops from her soil; if she were a land barren of opportunity industrialists would not bring their millions into the state to establish offices, plants and warehouses (thus meeting one of her greatest present needs); if there were no promise of the future, then there would indeed be little need or reason for efforts toward self-improvement.

Let us rejoice that Alabama is a land of perpetual promise—let us hope that she will ever be!

Winter Driving Hints Given By Chevrolet

Motorists who want to derive maximum satisfaction from the winter operation of their cars are taking time now, at the approach of cold weather, to have all lubricants changed. Increased demands imposed by cold weather make the step most important. It is one of the first things that should be done when winter makes itself felt.

Lubricants should be changed at three points, the crankcase, the transmission housing, and the rear axle housing. Motorists who understand the reason for this will give the job the attention in merits. And that reason is simple.

Lubricants tend to become thin and lose their lubricating quality under extreme heat, and to thicken under extreme cold. For this reason, summer grade lubricants are made heavier-bodied than winter grade, because they must withstand, without excessive thinning, not only the heat developed in operation but high outside temperatures as well. Winter lubricants on the other hand, are thinner at normal temperatures than summer lubricants, so that not even very cold weather will make them too thick to results must be of the right consistency.

Christmas Windows Wear Sunrose Shades!
By Jane Rogers

CERTAINLY you want to make your home as gay and fresh as possible for Christmas. Remember all the guests who will be popping in and out. You'll use your lovely Christmas wreaths—I'm sure you'll have fresh curtains at the windows—but will you have sparkling new cloth shades? They're the eyes of your home you know, and my, how your neighbors judge you and your excellence as a housekeeper just by looking at your windows!

If you're the clever person we think you are, you will choose only good quality cloth shades, for they don't crumple up from a thorough drenching—nor do they tear or crack.

Do look at Sunrose. It's a grand coral tone that harmonizes with almost every color curtain and drapery you can imagine, the nice part about it is that you can use Sunrose for every room in the house. Make your windows look as gay and festive as the holiday season! Sunrose actually seems to bring the sunshine indoors on gray days—and if you buy a good cloth shade—not only your rooms, but your windows will look brighter!

Santa's Message To You!

LISTER HILL IN WASHINGTON ON THE JOB

Lister Hill is in Washington fighting the battle for the farmers in an effort to secure a good farm relief bill

He is fighting against five-cent cotton, fifteen-cent corn, and miserably low farm prices.

Lister Hill is waging a battle against mortgaged home liens, poverty, distress, and failures that go with low farm prices to farmers, merchants, workers, and people in all walks of life.

He is standing upon the Democratic platform fighting side by side with the chosen leader, FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, SENATOR JOHN H. BANKHEAD, and other friends of the farmer.

While he is in Washington looking after the interests of the people of the State he respectfully requests his friends in Alabama to fight his battles in the campaign for United States Senator in the coming election January 4, 1938.

GOVERNMENT PLANS AID FOR FISHERIES

Important Industry at Last to Get Attention.

Washington.—The vast Atlantic coastal fishing industry, worth hundreds of millions of dollars, at last is to get a share of the federal government's protective attention.

Commerce and State department officials are making plans to negotiate important fish treaties with Canada, Mexico and several additional Latin-American countries, for the protection of the existing schools of migratory fish in the Atlantic.

On the basis of this treaty it was learned, congress probably will be asked to enact some migratory fish control legislation for interstate as well as international application.

Proponents of the treaty pointed out that constitutional limitations made it impossible for congress to enact any migratory bird legislation until the bird treaty with Canada was negotiated and ratified, but a Supreme court ruling held that this treaty made it incumbent upon congress to pass legislation to effect the treaty.

The same system is being followed in the case of migratory fish. Most important among the migratory fish, from a commercial as well as sporting point of view, are the striped bass and the bluefish.

The latter are particularly important, in that they spend most of their existence either moving from north to south along the coastal banks or vice versa.

While some states have highly protective legislation, others have little or none.

Huge Graveyard Marks Scene of Bison Drive

McIntosh, S. D.—Because a group of Cheyenne Indians chose late summer instead of fall for the great bison drive, a "buffalo graveyard" exists near here today which is so large it recently was mined for material for bone markets.

Mrs. Joseph E. Waggoner, of Keldron, whose mother was a member of Sitting Bull's famous command, tells the story of the mass of bones and traces it to the years 1825 to 1835.

At that time the Cheyenne, having driven other tribes from the Dakota region only to be themselves forced westward by more powerful tribes, decided on one last hunt. Accordingly, they scattered and started driving herds of bison toward a high bluff on the Grand river.

When the animals were milling near the bluff they were driven over, the wounded dispatched and great quantities of meat removed from the carcasses. The stacks of bones slowly settled and consolidated, making the bed which appears today in the cut bank of the river. The state stopped the mining when it learned the "graveyard" was on publicly owned land.

Average American Pays $2.50 a Week for Food

Washington.—The average American family spends about $2.50 a week on food, according to a survey by the bureau of economics of the Department of Commerce. The weekly food bill for a family of four is $7 a week, or about 30.000 families in all parts of the country, the bureau reported. The survey showed that in all parts of the country, and families tend to spend more money for food than in other regions, the survey showed. Southeastern families, largely because of the number of negroes, spend the least. Pacific coast food budgets are more likely to provide adequate diets than in other regions of the country, largely because of lower food costs, the bureau said.

Three-fourths of the small city and village families in New England spent less than $3.55 per capita weekly for food during 1936, the survey showed. The bulk of this group spent between $2.30 and $3.65 a week. In contrast with New England, negro families in the small cities and villages of the Southeast spend the least for food of any group covered by the study.

Dove Tree Is Found in Three-Year Hunt

Honolulu.—The first "dove" tree ever seen here has arrived via Pan-American Clipper from China. While the tree figured prominently in ancient Chinese literature, it required a three-year search to find the present specimen in the Yangtze valley. It has been planted on the island of Kaula. Blossoms are similar in shape and color to a dove.

Hill Is Invited To Join Roosevelt

Washington, Dec. 3.—(Special)—Representative Lister Hill has been invited to join President Roosevelt at Warm Springs and accompany the President to the Federal building dedication ceremonies at Gainesville.

In the campaign for the United States Senatorial nomination in Alabama, in which Congressman Hill is a candidate, the issue of Presidential favor has been raised. The invitation from President Roosevelt to Congressman Hill would appear to settle any question as to whom President Roosevelt favors among the candidates in the Senatorial campaign. The invitation to Congressman Hill to visit and accompany the President emphasizes Mr. Hill's closeness to the Chief Executive. The Second District Member of Congress is Chairman of the powerful Committee on Military Affairs of the House and is a member of the important House Steering Committee for the Democratic administration.

If legislative duties do not interfere, Congressman Hill will accept the invitation which reached him in Washington Thursday.

Alabama Photographs Are Needed Badly

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 10.—Special—Who has a good photograph of an interesting scene in Alabama?

A tree, forest of trees, a bend in the river, livestock, cotton fields of snowy white, steamboat on the river, plantation scenes—anything at all that has interesting details which pictures life in Alabama?

If you have such a picture, will you please send them to Perkins J. Prentiss, care of Birmingham Chamber of Commerce, at once, for possible use in the Alabama Rose Bowl Souvenir Book.

This, in brief, was the appeal made today by Governor Graves who has approved plans of the All Alabama Committee for a beautiful picture book of Alabama to be distributed free during the Tournament of Roses at Pasadena New Year's Day, when the football teams of the University of Alabama and the University of California meet in the Rose Bowl classic.

There are 33,500 rural mail carriers in the United States, and the total distance traveled daily by them is 1,400,000 miles.

LARGE CROP IS BRINGING LESS THAN SMALLER ONE

Auburn, Ala.—Alabama's present 1,520,000-bale crop is bringing 10 million dollars less than the 1,200,000-bale crop of 1936.

Based upon present prices of about $40 per bale of lint and $18 per ton for seed, the present crop is bringing about 73 million dollars. Last year cotton sold for an average of about $61.50 per bale and the seed brought about $30 per ton. The total value of the crop was over 82 million dollars.

Alleging that her husband annoyed her by eating his meals standing, Mrs. Helen O. Grab of Los Angeles sued for a divorce.

J. R. MULLINS & SONS

—CLANTON—

R. J. GOODE

pointed to what he termed alarming aspects of agricultural legislation pending before Congress. Chief among these were provisions which would "completely throttle any possibility of a well-balanced farm program in Alabama," through "eliminating diversion of cotton acres to production of food, feed and forage crops necessary to the further expansion of our livestock and dairy industries," and the "continued application of the allotment on the basis of acreage and production of cotton, which would destroy the incentive to produce economically."

The extent of danger, to Alabama, in a measure that would bar diversion of cotton acres to production of food could be realized, the Rotarians were told, when it was considered that Alabama now produced only 66 per cent of its meat, 54 per cent of its milk, 46 per cent of its corn, 10 per cent of its oats, 33 per cent of its hay, and 43 per cent of its eggs.

Related Factors

Commissioner Goode said that prosperity absolutely depended upon increased cash agricultural income since agriculture was one of the only three things that created new wealth and since, in the Montgomery area, it had been shown that 74 per cent of the "new wealth" came from agriculture.

Mr. Goode said that Alabama had the opportunity within itself to make the greatest possible strides toward economic prosperity, though it was impossible to divorce its activities from the national policy.

"To understand thoroughly the importance of agriculture in our economy," he said, "it is only necessary to determine those businesses or activities which provide new wealth, because it is from the production of new wealth that incomes are derived and better income is the only thing which can bring increased prosperity. In Alabama a survey showed that 74 per cent of the new wealth created in nine counties, comprising the trade territory of Montgomery, came directly from agriculture."

"After understanding the comparative importance of agriculture as a producer of new wealth, it is of equal importance to understand the effect of agricultural income upon business as a whole. A 10 per cent change in the national farm income will be reflected by a 10 per cent change in total pay rolls of the Nation; in a 25 per cent increase in the gross profits of all reporting corporations and, probably most remarkable of all, a 10 per cent change, up or down, will be reflected within a 12-month period in an equal change, up or down, in the value of all stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange, and this relationship has not changed as much as two per cent since 1923."

Comparatively Easy

"Since there is this definite relationship, our first concern should be to provide better agricultural incomes in Alabama. The primary trouble with our State is our extremely low per capita income, being next to the lowest in the Union. This immediately suggests how we may increase the agricultural income and thereby raise the per capita income of Alabama. While there are many complexities connected with the problem, it seems to me to be comparatively simple and easy to bring about a quite material increase. To do so, it is only necessary to put into practical application the information and facts which have already been developed by our Agricultural Experiment Stations, which facts are being rapidly supplemented each year. The best agricultural income which Alabama has ever enjoyed was in 1929 when the cash agricultural income amounted to $172,000,000. This represented the money which agriculture had to spend with the business people. We were all prosperous. In 1932 this cash income had dropped to $58,000,000, or about one-third of the 1929 figure, and the purchasing power of the farmers' dollar being only 50 cents, agriculture in Alabama had in 1932 about one-sixth of the 1929 purchasing power. A comparable condition existed throughout the Nation, which resulted in our economic collapse."

RAILROAD TAXES

pany, to see that all taxes the L & N owes to the State, County, City and other taxing districts be paid shortly after December 1; all of them to be paid in order that the school teachers and others may have their money a sufficient time before Christmas to be spent as they desire."

G. C. WELDING, Superintendent.

Chilton County will receive this announcement with a great deal of appreciation and interest, and the L & N railroad is to be commended on this action, as it will no doubt be of material aid to the local Board of Education in meeting its obligations to teachers of the county.

XMAS BUYING

noticed a greater inclination to "Shop Early" this year than was shown last year, or in several years. Many stores are already wrapping gift packages and laying them aside to be held until Christmas. This indicates wise and careful buying and that next week will find the stores extremely busy. And that should be proof to anyone that it would be wise this year to really heed the usual warning to "Shop Early" for the best prices and best selections.

Such Low Prices

It is amazing to find that such low prices prevail this year on merchandise one would expect to pay almost double the amount being asked.

Dry goods stores, hardware stores, toy stores and the drug stores are displaying new Christmas merchandise with prices so low everyone could purchase useful and practical gifts and at the same time stay within even a limited budget.

This week the News carries a large number of advertisements from leading stores in Clanton in which are listed hundreds of the items referred to and the prices shown in the advertisements and in the stores bear out the statement made by the News that prices are amazingly low on Christmas merchandise this year.

4-H PROGRAM

whose attendance at the show is great, in proportion to the county's rural population will receive a check for $1,000 to be used in its 4-H activities.

Other awards in this contest are: Second, $250; third, $100; five prizes of $50 each; sixteen prizes of $25 each. Remember: For your county to stand a chance of winning one of these cash prizes, all who attend the showing must register before leaving the hall. Registration blanks will be provided at the place of showing.

Here's The Program

Nothing like this two hour program has ever been produced. It comes to you free of charge. It is asked in return by its sponsors except your goodwill and a quickened interest in the program of the greatest youth movement in the world—America's 4-H Clubs.

There are four units on the program. Let's look briefly at each one: First—the feature picture—"Under The 4-H Flag". This celebrated novel of 4-H life, written by John F. Case, who is editor of the Missouri Ruralist and ex-president of the Missouri State Board of Agriculture, has been called the finest 4-H book ever written.

It is the story of young Bob Barton and his father and mother and little sister and brother—a discouraged and ineffectual farm family who have moved for years from one rented acreage to another—but who are inspired to a new vision of the dignity and happiness that is inherent in agriculture through 4-H.

As the picture unfolds there sweeps before you a panorama of farm and 4-H Club life—the enthusiastic meetings, the projects, the fairs, the camps, the fierce competitions... corn hoeing itself made glamorous with a musical obligato—the ultimate triumph of 4-H ideals.

But between the dismal country road where the story starts and the joyous fireside where it ends are conflict and drama:

Mysterious and menacing painted signs which say "Move or Die"—a sister who whistles without warning through the dense woods... a crucial baseball game with its last-inning base hit... the shy, wholesome affection of a boy and a girl... a song drifting over a campfire into the darkness... a sinister cave hidden in the underbrush on the river's bank where lurks... well, that would be telling.

The main thing is that the picture has its thrills and thrills—its humor and its pathos—its real entertainment along with sound, constructive hinking about 4-H and American agriculture.

Second—the 4-H News Reel. The big, spectacular events in the 4-H calendar flash in this buoyant news reel which leaps from St. Louis County, Minnesota, where the massive County Community building won by the log community 4-H clubs in the National County Progress Contest is dedicated to the excitement of auction day at the International Livestock Exposition; to—the bovine beaux and prima donas of the National Dairy Show; to—the dogged, muscular frenzy of the National Corn Husking Contest.

Third—an educational film, "Hidden Values." This instructive picture takes you behind the scenes of a great mercantile testing laboratory where all kinds of merchandise are put through the torture chambers of modern science.

Fourth—"School Days" a cartoon comedy. We haven't the heart to tell you much about this heart-rending "Drama"—about what happens when Esmeralda, the romantic elephant, comes tripping along to school and learns she is late. You couldn't stand to hear the outlandish and inexcusable details... but you can't be criticised if you split your sides laughing.

were the following who said: W. O. Hare, secretary-treasurer, State Federation of Labor: "I like to hear a man tell a joke, but I think a senator should stand for something worthwhile. I'm for Hill."

Hugh Brown: "Tom Heflin says he is a good friend of the farmer and the working man, yet we know the expenses of his campaign are being paid by Liberty Leaguers and others who are not our friends. I know Hill can be trusted."

Mrs. Desmore: "A man is known by his friends. Tom Heflin's friends are not the friends of President Roosevelt, the farmer or the laborer. Let's vote for Lister Hill."

J. P. Moore, an officer in the Structural Iron Workers Union No. 92: "Tom Heflin has no real views on any question."

John W. Carlton, Secretary Machine Local: "Alabama is entitled to two senators. I'm going to vote for Lister Hill not because of his record, but because his election will give our state two senators—not one senator and a joker."

George W. Lee, business manager for the Painters Local: "When I ask for a job I expect to get what I can do and have done. And before I vote for a man I expect him to tell me what he has done and will do. What has Tom Heflin done in his 27 years in office except endeavor to split the Democratic Party?"

J. D. Bumgardner, Secretary Tarrant Labor Council: "Tom Heflin has been in Congress 27 years. I can't find what he has ever done for the farmer or the working man. Lister Hill has championed many measures for the betterment of all."

C. P. Thiemgoe, Secretary, Birmingham Trades Council: "Heflin claims he is for Franklin D. Roosevelt 'when he is right' but it strikes me as strange indeed that he is today opposing the one plank in the Democratic platform that protects the working man. I'm for Hill for many reasons, among them because he is a loyal supporter of the President and a good friend of the farmer and working man."

Hill's record as the grandson of a Methodist minister, a member of the Methodist Church and as a World War Veteran also was brought out at the Rally.

GRAND JURY

nection with the death of Thomas Simms, well known young white man of Clanton. Simms was killed when struck by an automobile said to have been driven by Chapman.

Dixie DeJarnette, another negro, was also among those indicted. His charge was that of assault with intent to murder in connection with an attack recently on Mollie Guldge, well known white man of near Verbon. Other indictments were mostly for selling whiskey or otherwise violating the prohibition laws.

4-H Club Meeting The Enterprise 4-H Club girls met with Miss Grace last Friday, and enjoyed a very interesting Christmas program. At the opening of the meeting we sang several Christmas carols. Then we were entertained by some Christmas readings which were enjoyed by all. Since the boys did not have a program planned, we invited them in to hear our program.

We are all looking forward to December 15, when we are going to get to see "Under The 4-H Flag" presented at the New Wadeson Theater. Mr. Ivey explained to us about the show and about the prizes that are going to be given to the county that has the largest number attending this show. We are going to try to win the first prize for our county.

Miss Grace and Mr. Ivey gave each of us a lovely Christmas card. Miss Grace gave us our monthly bulletin of "Alabama 4-H Club Work" and a 1938 4-H calendar. She gave us some ideas for wrapping Christmas gifts.

We then adjourned until January when we will have our first meeting of the new year.

Christmas Seal Sale Campaign Started

The annual Christmas Seal Sale Campaign sponsored by the local County Tuberculosis Association had begun early this week, it was announced by Dr. S. D. Sturkie, local county health officer. Seals are being distributed among Chilton County's 7,000 school children by workers from the County Health Office and County Board of Education.

"The fact is that there are no facilities locally for the hospitalization of cases of tuberculosis creates a very special need for a successful seal sale here," it was stated by Dr. Sturkie. "With the money obtained from the sale of seals, it is possible that a plan might be developed to assist local physicians in providing the newer more modern form of treatment of tuberculosis known as pneumothorax. This latter device is probably the most effective weapon in the fight against tuberculosis which we possess today," he added. Sputum cups, chest x-rays for needy cases, cod-liver oil for tuberculous children are other valuable items which might be made available with seal money, it was pointed out by the local health official.

Seals may be purchased locally at either office of the County Health Department or County Board of Education.

Billingsley Is Showing New Automatic Radios

"The newest thing in radios is now being shown in Clanton by the well known Billingsley Service Station, local dealers for the Westinghouse radio. This new radio, known as the automatic tuning set, is truly automatic, and is one of the first to be shown here.

W. C. Billingsley, popular operator of the Billingsley Service Station, is making demonstrations of this electric tuning radio and invites the public to see it. A large advertisement of Westinghouse radios appears in this issue of the News.

Hardy Nolen, representative of the Alabama Appliance Co., of Birmingham distributor of these radios, was in Clanton Tuesday. Mr. Nolen is most enthusiastic about the new automatic sets and reminded his many friends here that Westinghouse built the first broadcasting station, located at Pittsburgh and known as KDKA.

LETTER OF THANKS

Plantersville, Ala., Dec. 6, 1937 Dear Editor of Chilton County News: Will you please give us a space in your paper to offer thanks to our relatives, neighbors and many friends.

First of all we are thankful for your kindness and friendship and there we send you our thanks for the many things that have been given to us since our home burned November 23. We expect to build again and we say to all "you are welcome" to visit us any time. Again we say, "Thank You" and may God's blessings be on everyone in our prayer.

ARNOLD MAY RETURN TO FARM RANKS

Of Absence Granted Extension Director To End On Jan. 1

Montgomery, Ala.—Under fire on at two major fronts in the current of farm forces, the Alabama Extension Service within the next weeks will likely see its ranks depleted by the return to active duty of P. O. Davis, director of personnel, who has been on leave of absence of a year.

Davis' leave of absence granted to him to work with the American Farm Bureau Federation, will expire and thus far no extension has been granted. Unless some change is made in his status with the Extension Service, Davis will revert to his old position as director of personnel of the Alabama Extension Service.

Arnold, who has been a storm in the Extension Service for years, would be virtually first in line to take over the program of the Extension Service. Under his supervision, the 67 county agents, a number of home demonstration agents and the assistants of these agents, are working on the field personnel of the Extension Service in the raging farm campaign.

Gov. Graves also failed to say what, inasmuch as he is through running for office, he will do when his gubernatorial term expires one year and one month hence. There have been guesses that he will get or take some job with President Roosevelt, but this is not what some close friends of the governor believe he wants.

Baptist Leaders To Hold Conference 10th

An important conference for all pastors, Sunday school officers and teachers, training union officers and leaders, and all Associational officers, will be held at the Clanton Baptist Church on the night of December 10, at seven o'clock. All churches, Sunday schools and training unions of all churches in both the Unity and Chilton Associations are urged to have good delegations present. The speakers and conference leaders will be Mrs. Davis Cooper, Miss Martha Sconyers, Earl Trent, Chester L. Quarles and Davis Cooper, Jr.

Let the pastors, superintendents and training unions appoint good delegations next Sunday to attend this important conference.

GOVERNOR SAYS HE WILL NOT RUN FOR ANY OFFICE

But Graves Remains Silent On Political Ambitions Of His Wife

Montgomery, Ala.—"I'm not running for anything, and never will again," Gov. Graves told a group in his office Friday.

But the governor didn't say that applied to Mrs. Graves. He just didn't mention her, or what she might do. And there are leaders in the retinue who are convinced Mrs. Graves is to be launched as a candidate for governor or for the U. S. Senate. They believe her chances would be better for the latter. However, some of these closest friends of the governor declare they would have to part with him on the general principle of being against a woman for any such high office.

Gov. Graves also failed to say what, inasmuch as he is through running for office, he will do when his gubernatorial term expires one year and one month hence. There have been guesses that he will get or take some job with President Roosevelt, but this is not what some close friends of the governor believe he wants.

P. T. A. Of Clanton Grammar School To Meet

Members of the Clanton Grammar School P. T. A. are urged to be present at the regular monthly meeting to be held Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the school building.

At this meeting a president will be elected to take the place of Mrs. John Kimney, who recently moved to Anniston, Ala., to make her home. All mothers are urged to be present. Refreshments will be served in the lunch room.

WILL BE PRESENTED ON BRILLIANT PROGRAM OF MUSIC HERE TUESDAY

MRS. FLORENCE GOLSONG-BATEMAN

Alabama composer of note who will sing two groups of songs on the Music Appreciation Club of Clanton program, to be presented at the city hall auditorium on next Tuesday afternoon. The public is cordially invited.

Fine Program Will Be Presented Next Tuesday Afternoon By Music Appreciation Club For Alabama Day Observance

The Music Appreciation Club of Clanton will include in its annual Alabama Day celebration, two other important observances, Federation Day, and the U. S. Constitution Sesqui-Centennial celebration.

The event will take place on December 14th at 3:15 P. M., in the auditorium of the City Hall. The club members cordially invite the people of Clanton to enjoy this program with them.

Mrs. Billy Smith, who is in charge of the program, has most appropriately planned the commemoration of Alabama Day by bringing Mrs. Florence Golsong-Bateman of Wetumpka, an Alabama composer of note, to sing two groups of songs. Mrs. A. G. Ruffin will be the accompanist.

Miss Louise Rogers of Spigner will give two groups of piano solos.

Mrs. Arthur Willis will speak on the commemoration of Federation Day and the Sesqui-Centennial observance. This is the third meeting open to the public in the program of the Music Appreciation Club this year. The club is striving to bring enrichment and inspiration into our daily lives. Let us show our appreciation by attending this meeting next Tuesday afternoon.

JOHN W. PIERCE, AGE 85, DIED AT HIS HOME SAT.

John W. Pierce, age 85, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Viola Wyatt, Route 2, Saturday morning at 11 o'clock. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Floyd Baptist Church. Interment was in the adjoining cemetery. The Rev. Robinson conducted the funeral with Spigner Funeral Home in charge of burial.

Mr. Pierce is survived by five daughters, Mrs. Viola Wyatt, Mrs. Ella Wilson, Verbera; Mrs. Victoria Bryant Verbera; Mrs. Emma Williams, Billingsley. Three sons, Clyde and Arthur, of Vida; Willie of Clanton. Sixty grand children and forty-four great grand children.

Funeral bearers were Charlie Pierce, Leon Pierce, Wilbert Pierce, Wallace Wilson, Odell Sewell, John Wyatt.

"Let Us Have Peace"

By Bert Henderson, Whitley Hotel, Montgomery, Ala.

O God, must nations cut with bristling steel,
Imaginary lines of demarcation,
And grind beneath a ruthless iron heel,
The subject of a weaker sister nation?

How can a land feel peaceful and secure
With dread of war impaling every heart,
Or civilization hope to long endure,
When lust for blood tears every soul apart?

Perhaps some day a warlike world will turn
From dark intrigue and selfish lust
For power,

To spreading peace where fires of hatred burn—

To stand united in a final hour,
With bayonet dipped in blood one can but write

A fallacy of war: that might is right.

Routes Rabbits In Fair Foot Race

Pell City, Ala.—Annoyed over the increasing impudence of rabbits near his place in Mays Bend, near here, J. F. Abernethy, 30, decided he would do something about the matter. Visiting Pell City, he acquired 51 shells for his single-barrel shotgun. He came again to Pell City yesterday and displayed to the curious and amazed populace no less than 75 rabbits from a few hours round and about the Coosa River bottom.

To interested friends the hunters explained he had 10 shells of his original 51 still on hand. That he did not hunt with dogs and that he had 75 rabbits. It appears that he became tired of using good shells on his impish woodland friends so he chased some down in a fair foot race while he pelted others with handy rocks bringing them into tow quite as effectively as with a shotgun.

In one of the races friends of the Mays Bend resident said Mr. Abernethy gained on a very masculine rabbit to such an extent that he outran the rabbit and came near landing in the muddy Coosa for his pains. As to the rock throwing, Mr. Abernethy said he chucked the devastating pellets with the long drawn back swing which caused the rocks to perfect a skipping effect which sent by the intended victim, Brer Rabbit, made him dodge in one direction only to be given a rebounding tap and thus ending the rabbit's precarious existence in St. Clair County.

Mr. Abernethy left word in Pell City that if he becomes annoyed again with the cotton tails he would perhaps bring in a substantial "mess" of rabbits the next time.

REPORTER SEES CLOTHES ARE XMAS WANTS

Survey Shows Great Many Prefer Wearing Apparel For Christmas

By William Ennis in The Birmingham News

After conversing at great length with approximately 90 members of the family of Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public, we have found that for a Christmas gift 40 per cent of them would rather have clothing than anything else.

Of this 40 per cent the female of the species takes up more than two-thirds. This is only natural, for after all, clothing always has and probably always will be the nearest thing to a woman's heart. So, all good ladies far, give her something to wear.

Two sides of the fur coat question were considered. First, we asked what the ladies wanted, then we contacted their husbands to see how they stood on the situation, and there are certainly a lot of women who are going to be disappointed Christmas morning. It seems that few bank rolls could stand the beating a fur coat would demand.

None of the women wanted candy, and surprisingly few wanted household articles, such as odd furniture, beds and all that.

The men, bless them, who are forever being reminded of their heavy beards, are heartily in favor of the electric razor. This is easily understood, for what is more disconcerting to a well-meaning male than to have some girl say, "Oh, what a heavy beard you have, grandpa!"

There's another thing that lots of people want, too—a new automobile.

The old standbys—perfume, flowers, cigars, neckties and pipes—are definitely out.

High up on the list of wants is jewelry and candid cameras. And the ever popular books still continue to rock along in their category.

For the kids, toys always lead the list. That is up until a certain age. Over 1, the general run is for clothes, and a select few wanted books, but it all gets back to the toy, we find.

Little girls, of course, put their dolls before anything else.

So you men and women who have serious doubts of what would be the most ethical thing for Christmas can easily solve the problem by merely buying clothes, and if you have any doubts as to the color, always get blue. It's safe as safe can be.

A CHEERFUL goodbye wave—the vestibule door swings shut—and the family's away—visiting on the L. & N. And as their Home Sweet Home on Rails glides off, you know the most precious of all your valuables are safe in a treasure chest of steel.

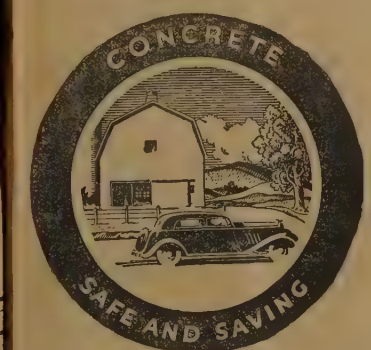

Along the right-of-way and on the train itself, millions of dollars worth of automatic signals and safety devices guard them. Thousands of efficient employees are always on the job—alert to extend the 20-year record of no passenger fatalities in a train accident. This peace of mind for you—this safety for them—isn't it the greatest of all transportation bargains at 2 to 3 cents a mile?

Every foot of the way, Friendly Service surrounds them. They relax in air-conditioned comfort, sleep in deep restful berths, dine on foods so tempting that our Southern Chefs are asked how they are prepared.

DOLLARS WASTED ON UPKEEP CAN'T BUY NEW ROADS

Old roads seem cheap and to build. They stretch a long fund so that it covers a lot of territory. But after a year or two, the trouble begins. Maintenance costs go up. Soon all your paving money is spent on upkeep. . . . no more new roads are built.

Concrete lasts! It requires almost no upkeep. Each year, the paving fund builds more miles of concrete until the whole job is done—for keeps.

Concrete's smooth, non-skid surface is safe and satisfactory to drive on. It speeds up traffic. . . . reduces accidents. . . . saves gas, tires and repairs.

Get concrete. Insist on it—for safety, comfort and economy.

Mrs. James Wade Hostess To Thursday Contract Club

Members of the Thursday Bridge Club were delightfully entertained last week by Mrs. James Wade.

Three tables were arranged for bridge in the newly decorated living rooms which were decorated in baskets of yellow flowers.

High score prize was awarded Mrs. J.C. Page. Guest prize fell to Mrs. J. Hance Alred. Second high score prize a shampoo and finger wave given by Goodman Beauty Parlor, was awarded Mrs. Marjorie Nelson of Ft. Meyers, Fla.

Delicious refreshments were served to the following members and guests: Mrs. J. Hance Alred, Mrs. Frank Callen, Mrs. Hugh Jones, Mrs. J.W. Hayes, Mrs. Jack Hayes, Mrs. Grady Reynolds, Mrs. Claude C. Craig, Mrs. Marjorie Nelson, Mrs. Joe Mullins, Mrs. J. C. Page, Mrs. L.F. Gerald, Mrs. John Deramus.

Mrs. J.P. Hayes was a tea guest.

Clanton Study Club Meets

Miss Mason F. Jones was hostess to members of the Clanton Study Club on last Friday at 3 o'clock.

In the absence of the club president, Mrs. Joe Mullins, the meeting was called to order by Mrs. J.E. Gowan. Mrs. John VanDerveer read the minutes in the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Omar Reynolds.

The club collect was read in unison after which a short business meeting was held.

The subject of the program for the afternoon was "Alabama Day." Mrs. J. P. Hayes gave a short sketch of "The Origin of Alabama Day."

Mrs. Horton Walker sketched the History of Alabama.

"The Historic Alabama Homes" was the subject of Mrs. M.L. White's paper which was read by Mrs. N.S. Johnson.

Miss Margaret Floyd gave a reading "Hello" by an Alabama poet.

The blind goods articles were displayed by Mrs. N.S. Johnson and several sales were made.

Mrs. Jones served tempting refreshments to her guests, who were:

Mrs. J. Watts Moore, Mrs. L.S. Ross, Mrs. John Mullins, Mrs. Grady Hefflin, Mrs. J.W. Hayes, Mrs. J.F. Hayes, Mrs. M.C. Hayes, Mrs. C.C. Craig, Mrs. J.E. Gowan, Mrs. Hugh Jones, Mrs. N.S. MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER

A miscellaneous shower honoring Miss Mary Frank Smith of Clanton, who was a bride of December 8, to Mr. Mayfield Ezekiel Slaughter. The home of Mrs. Reuben Lowe was the scene of this lovely shower on December 2. Mesdames Reuben Lowe and Turner Mitchell Dennis received from 3:30 P.M. to 5:30 P.M. assisted by relatives and former schoolmates of Miss Smith whose home is now in Birmingham. Her spacious home was beautiful with southern smilax. Holley and mistletoe, orchid chrysanthemums and valley lilies with long tapers of white on mantles and tables, adorned the room.

Mesdames J. Lee Smith and Oliver Reid Mullins received at the door, ushering the guests to the drawing room. Mrs. Reuben Lowe was in pink taffeta and introduced the guests to Miss Mary Frank Smith, who wore claret taffeta. Mrs. Turner Dennis, a sister, was in dotted blue net. Mrs. Caldwell M. Roper was in black chiffon velvet with jade accessories. Mrs. Evan J. Downs was in orchid chiffon and was next in line. Mrs. A.C. Smith was in black velvet. Miss Frances Moore wore black Marie taffeta and Miss Vivian Kendrick metallic taffeta. Miss Kendrick passed the guests to Mrs. Bill Inzer, who ushered them to the bride's book, which was presided over by Mrs. Woodrow Ingram.

It is interesting to note that the bride's book was of white satin and lace, the book being hand-made and hand-painted, and made of the material of the honoree's wedding dress.

Mrs. Inzer ushered the guests to the gift rooms and introduced them to Miss Ruth Sessions, Miss Dorothy Manning, Miss Julia Ruth Hester, Mrs. John Moon and Mrs. Aaron Dennis. The dining room was presided over by Misses Bernice Lowe, Malinda Dennis, Juanita Miller and Ann Ross. The chandelier was a large bell of smilax, valley lilies, white bells of miniature size and drop ribbons with cluster of lilies. The table was covered with an exquisite lace cloth and lighted by cathedral tapers with additional tapers on the mantle and buffet. The large table mirror carried a beautiful bride and was edged with smilax and mistletoe.

Miss Grace Ezell rendered beautiful musical selections throughout the afternoon.

About seventy-five guests called during the afternoon.

Mr. M.D. Foshee and Mr. Jesse Frank Foshee spent last week in South Alabama hunting. Jesse Frank returned to the University of Alabama Sunday.

The friends of Mr. P.D. Wilson regret to know he is ill at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Mullins.

Mr. Tom Sessions of Atlanta, Ga., spent the week end here with Mr. and Mrs. B.J. Sessions.

Mr. and Mrs. S.D. Brooks and daughter, Barbara Lane, of Andalusia, were the week end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hayes.

Miss Newell Given Pre-Nuptial Party

Mrs. Omar Reynolds was hostess for a tea-shower on Friday afternoon honoring Miss Helen Patricia Kinstry whose marriage to Mr. John Kinstry will take place on December 17.

Bowls and urns of snapdragons chrysanthemums in pastel adorned the rooms. In the dining room the tea table covered by a silver cloth was centered with a silver bowl of Briarcliff roses with lily of the valley, encircled by ivory tapers burning in silver candleabra. Nuts and mints in silver cases and bowls were in bridal tones.

Mrs. Grady Reynolds and Mr. Julius Burnett greeted the guests at the door and receiving with Mrs. Reynolds, were Miss Helen Kinstry, Mrs. John Otis Newell, Mrs. McKinty, mother of the groom, Mrs. L.H. Reynolds, Mrs. J.A. Kinstry, Mrs. James McKinty, and Mrs. Newell.

The guests were conducted by W.E. Huddleston, Jr., and George McCain to the bride's room, which was presided over by Miss Gray and Miss Elizabeth Hogan.

The tea table was presided over by Mrs. C.H. Pipes and Mrs. Jane Wood, assisted by Miss Celia C. Pauline Hogan, Ruth Gowan, Mrs. Mullins and Miss Jane Pitts.

The gifts were displayed by Mrs. Hance Alred and Mrs. John H. Kinstry the guests who called during the noon.

Mrs. Frank Scott of Huntsville spent several days here last week with parents, Mr. and Mrs. J.R. Scott, and Mrs. Scott will return December 24 to make their home here.

going to the polls in a party primary, the voters concerned must not interest themselves in choosing a candidate who will serve the best interests of city, county, state and nation, thereby proving an able public servant, but inasmuch as the ballot is a strictly party affair, they are dealt with the extra responsibility of choosing an official who shall be the greatest benefit to the party. It has long been a Republican saying that they did not have to fight hard to gain power in the national administration because it is rare that the Democrats will stick together enough to win an election; and they should for some reason rally around one candidate or one issue and together, winning the campaign, insure that they can remain solid enough to retain that power. A comparison of Republican and Democratic political campaigns is enough to say this.

The State of Alabama has been so prone to the Democratic column that are prone to sit back and feel that things need not worry us; that we can always carry the State of Alabama for the Democratic party; we do. But—and it is a very important "but"—if our elected representatives, carrying the Democratic banner, and other elected representatives, carrying that banner fail to work in hand with the party leaders, during a campaign or during administration which the party has needed in putting into power, that the only break for which the Republicans have been waiting. Dissension among the Democrats mean election to the Republicans.

So it is, although we can always assure the party leaders that we can put Alabama safely in the Democratic column, we cannot always assure them of the cooperation and solidarity in administration policy which is vitally necessary to the gaining of political strength. And so, for that reason, that I am convinced that the only logical candidate for the Democratic party in the primary for the election of a candidate to the Senate is Representative Frank Hill. There has never at any time been any question of his party; while on the other hand, there only has been a question on the part of his leading opponent, ex-Senator Heflin, but he is even now conducting his campaign on an issue in which he takes a side opposed to the interests of the party!

What is this issue, this wage-and-hour legislation that it causes so much trouble? Can we strip it of its political tinge and bring it down to terms of you and I, as private citizens, interested only in the welfare of the country, can understand and pass judgment upon? As I understand it, it is a move to increase employment, raise the living standards of those at the lowest economic level in the country, the working people and the cultural people.

Wage-and-hour legislation could easily be devised which would, as

NEW product called orange butter is being manufactured and already winning national popularity. Orange butter is classified the grocer as a preserve. The orange and pulp of the orange are mixed with sugar to give a finished product that is of a natural orange color about the same texture and consistency of apple butter. Use has been made of the natural pectin of orange in order to secure the desired consistency and a slight amount of lemon juice is added to give firmness. The result is one of the most delicious orange products to make its appearance on the market.

The orange butter which comes packaged in glass jars is sealed under the nationally famous process used by many leading food manufacturers technically known as "vacuum sealing." This unique sealing process insures the freshness of the product by hermetically sealing out air—worst enemy of freshness and flavor in food. Glass sealed foods that are "Vacu-Sealed" are much approved by the housewife for the cap is easily removed by lifting with the edge of a table knife.

some of the present opponents try to indicate, force a farmer to pay high wages and limit working hours; but it would go into industry and by limiting the number of hours per week per worker, it would automatically increase the number of workers needed in any particular industry; and by putting a minimum wage on that work-week, it would raise the purchasing power of those actually working. By increasing the number of workers and raising their pay, you provide an extra market for farm products, and manufactured products made of farm products. This would do away with the pitiful situation which now exists; that in a land where huge surpluses of cotton keep cotton prices down, thousands and perhaps millions do not have proper clothing, and in a land where surpluses bulk high on foodstuffs, millions are improperly nourished. It is known axiom that while the higher income levels do not spend all their income, you increase the spending, make, the lower income brackets invariably do; and if you increase that thereby creating a bigger market and reducing surpluses, which comes back to the farmer in higher prices for his

Madison County Citizens Protest Use Of Free Mail Against Administration

Huntsville, Ala., Dec. 2.—(Special)—The Madison County Democratic Executive Committee in session here today went on record by a unanimous vote denouncing the entry into the Alabama Senatorial primary of Congressman and Republican National Committeeman J. Will Taylor of Tennessee who has permitted the use of his Congressional Frank to send free through the mails his speech attacking President Roosevelt and the Democratic National Administration out of Birmingham to Democratic voters of Alabama.

The action of the committee followed a speech of Judge Leon McCord, Democratic National Committeeman of farm products.

This wage-and-hour legislation, therefore, isn't quite the bugaboo some politicians would have you think it is. At least, that's what I think.

Alabama in which the effort of the Republican party to sway the Democratic primary in Alabama was condemned. The franked speech of the Republican Congressman and Republican National Committeeman is being sent out of Birmingham by friends of Senator J. Thomas Heflin who is opposing Congressman Lister Hill, the friend of the President and a supporter of the National Democratic Administration.

A number of county Democratic Committee chairmen from adjoining counties were present at the meeting of the Madison County and the movement to denounce the entry of the Republican party into Alabama's Democratic primary is expected to spread to other counties. Tennessee Valley Democrats are indignant over the Republican movement because of the fact that President Roosevelt and the Democratic National Administration have been instrumental in giving new life to the section through the development of the TVA which Congressman Hill sponsored in Congress. The following is the resolution adopted by the Madison County Democratic Executive Committee:

RESOLUTION

WHEREAS, it has come to our notice that a Republican National Committeeman of Tennessee is using the United States mails in Alabama at great expense to the Government by the use of his postage free franking privilege and a Congressman of Tennessee to discredit our great President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and the National Democratic Administration before the eyes of the nation and seeking to influence Democratic voters in a Democratic primary, and

WHEREAS, the Madison County Democratic Executive Committee has invited Judge Leon McCord, our Democratic National Committeeman for Alabama, to meet with us today to discuss and advise with us in connection with this most vital Democratic party matter, and, therefore

BE IT RESOLVED, that the Madison County Democratic Executive

Committee duly called and assembled does hereby go on record condemning the effort of Republican Committeeman Taylor of Tennessee which seeks to meddle in a Democratic primary in Alabama, and we call upon the Democratic voters of Madison County to join with us and demonstrate our gratitude and unflinching faith in the Democratic platform; The National Democratic Administration and our chosen and inspiring leader, Franklin D. Roosevelt, by an overwhelming vote of confidence on January 4th, 1938.

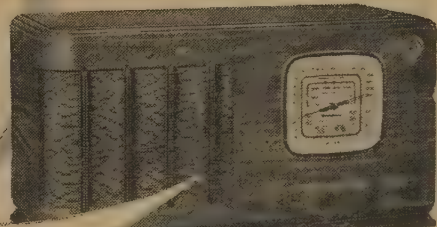

BE IT RESOLVED FURTHER, that the Madison County Democratic Executive Committee does hereby express our thanks to our Democratic National Committeeman, Judge Leon McCord, and that the chairman and secretary be requested to furnish a copy of this resolution to the press and to the members of the other sixty-six county Democratic Executive Committees.

Adopted by unanimous vote.

Attest: W. R. Humphrey, Secretary.

LEVINE BROTHERS ACCUSED

Customers Claim Store Selling Goods Below CATALOG PRICE STORE ALSO FOUND STOCKED WITH COMPLETE LINES

VISITORS ASTOUNDED AT SUCH AMAZING VALUES

Last week a small ad featuring one of their many values brought many people who usually order their goods to this up-to-the-minute dry goods and variety store. Few realized that they could buy first class goods at such low prices. You will not find any seconds or shady goods in any department of this establishment. Both Messrs. Sol and I. S. Levine are particular in the selection of goods they buy for their store.

Mr. Levine was asked: "Frankly, Mr. Levine, can you compete with the large mail order houses?" His answer was, "Why, certainly." Through an act passed in Congress small merchants if they buy according to the scale prices set forth for quantity users, can sell their goods not only as cheap but cheaper, and we are proving to the public that it can be done and is being done right here in Clanton at our store.

Take for instance, at Levine Brothers, a single blanket 70 x 80, for only 59c. By the time a customer mails an order, money order, and pays the parcel post, this item will cost them much more. Also, boys' lined jumpers at 98c, ladies felt hats, some with veils and in the latest styles, at 49c. These are only a few of the hundreds of items that can be found at such low prices at Levine Brothers.

A little over a year ago these two men opened Levine Brothers with a small stock of goods and a low price policy. Today there isn't another store in Clanton that carries the variety of goods that this store has. If you want a pair of nationally advertised

Fortune shoes for men and you can find a large stock to select from and if you want a pair of shoes as low as 98c, they have these too. If you want nice high-grade ladies' coats or expensive ones, you can feel sure they have them. Just think of going in and buying a nice child's coat with fur collar at $1.29 and at the same time finding others that sell up to $8.95. These $8.95 coats are regular $12.95 values elsewhere.

For expert shoe fitting you could go to no better place in the county. These boys know the foot from A to Z and already have a steady line of customers who can speak for them. They are this week running as a new customer drive the steel arch line of black, brown and green suedes, a regular to $2.45, $2.98, $3.98 values at $1.98. It will certainly pay anyone who needs a pair of ladies or Misses shoes to avail themselves of this opportunity.

Toys! Toys! Toys!
We have never seen prettier selection of toys since Hecter was a pup. Just anything and everything. Gifts for anyone in the family. From a hat for Grandma to a wagon for Junior, and the prices are surprisingly low, on all items. You can find in this large stock all types of wearing apparel, dolls, tricycles, wagons, toys guns and rifles, mechanical toys, games inside and outside, tree lights, all kinds of decorations, Christmas cards, etc.

We were surprised to see the beautiful line of Mickey Mouse children's dresses and suits. Just think of a dress with three and four wide hems! Also one that is guaranteed fast color and to give entire satisfaction. These dresses are in dainty material and wait until you see the gourd skirts and pleated numbers, and you can buy these from 49c up. You won't go wrong in having one of the girls show them to you.

Just remember, "It pays to trade at home," especially when you can beat the price by NOT ORDERING.

They have been accused of selling good cheap and once you trade with them you will continue.
Levine Brothers are truly gift headquarters for Chilton County and the men folks will be happy with a special on men's to $1.49 shirts in all sizes at 94c.

the ledger when we tripped the Cooper team 27-13.
The fast Enterprise team will invade our court tonight (Thursday) for the third game of the League series. They have bowled us over twice in practice games thus far, but we hope to swing tide our way this time. We urge you to see this game, for the Enterprise boys have a record of genuine hustling to win, so you may expect a real contest when they present themselves. Be there pulling for your favorite team. The admission will be ten cents for everybody.

Two other games will be played tonight also. One between the Thorsby Independents and the Enterprise Independents. This game will have plenty of action. The third game will be between Collins Chapel Jr. High and Maplesville High Schools. The Collins Chapel Juniors plastered a defeat on the Maplesville Varsity squad several days ago. So see this game in which the latter team will struggle to offset their loss; and the former team battling to pin another defeat on Coach Porch's dashing quint.

Attendance for the second month was good. Very little illness prevails in the community at present.

The girls basketball team will play Collins Chapel tomorrow night, Friday, December 10, in our auditorium. This will be the first game of the current season, so come out and give the lasses a good send-off. This promises to be a contest.

School will be in session next Saturday, December 11, in order that we may be out on Thursday, December 23, for holidays.

The Athletic Department has bought warm-up suits for the boys.

Christian Endeavor News
Cold weather did not prevent the executive committee of the Christian Endeavor from meeting Sunday afternoon, December 5, to discuss its accomplishments of the past month and to plan for the coming one. Although Christmas is hardly three weeks away plans are being made to provide a Christmas program for Sunday night, December 19.

An interesting and lively discussion was held on "Personality" Sunday night at the regular Christian Endeavor meeting. Credit is given to Ruby Leigh Wilkes, Miss Townsley and others who took part for providing such a stimulating as well as helpful program. The Christian Endeavor wishes to remind everyone that there will be a social in the Fellowship Room of the Congregational Church, Saturday night at seven o'clock, December 11.

Things We Think

Things Others Think and What We Think of Things Others Think
—BILLY SMITH

We are indeed grateful for the comments we received on the contents in the column last week and the thoughts expressed regarding political writings. It is in the minds of the people there was a certain distaste for the style of editorializing in politics, and it is pleasing to realize we are of the opinion of so many of this county in this column week.

A Little Christmas season approaches and we are not immune from thoughts that will be in our midst many families without the first orange to denote Christmas is here. We remember Christmas, not so long ago, we were part in delivering baskets of fruits, and toys for the Kiwanis Club. The scenes we ran into at several homes we visited on Christmas morning have instilled into us what a small home looks like Christmas morning—bare of any decorations that the two or three little boys hugging their mother near a fire, have even the first piece candy. These statements are not new to our part. We have seen, have talked with the parents and the glow of the little fellows' eyes as they saw the large basket of candies, food and rebuilt toys left at the homes. Yes, it will bring to the eyes of the most hardened.

And, when we know there are so many men and women in Clanton who are financially able to spend a few dollars to make Christmas what it could be, we cannot understand why they give some little something to give some little something to give up the spirit of those children who right it is to enjoy their early Christmas.

A little boy at our house will have some toys, some apples oranges and little things that go to make a happy Christmas. But, along with them there are a few others who are going to have some fruits and candies, too. We know would not have a Christmas unless some person visited homes on Christmas morning. If have never visited a needy home Christmas morning when your own is cheery, then you can't truly appreciate Christmas and the feeling goes to make someone happy—even a small child. Try it this Christmas. You will feel within you a warmth having done a good deed.

Mr. Leaving We learn from the Thorsby News in this issue that our good friend, the Rev. E.W. Butler, will be returning to New York. It is difficult to realize. We have known Mr. Butler since the years we were old enough to know anyone. We remember that in our old homeplace Thorsby, Mr. Butler was one of the citizens we were taught to respect. His feeling has never changed. His efforts in building up the Thorsby State have been noticeable and his churches have felt his religious influence during his residence in that town. To you, Mr. Butler, we wish you and yours the best in your new location.

MISS BILLIE SIMS CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

Miss Billie Sims celebrated her birthday last Wednesday afternoon with a party at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W.L. Sims. Christmas ideas with colors of red, green and white were carried out with favors and refreshments. The thrill of the afternoon was the arrival of Santa Claus who passed out favors from his bag to the little girls.

Those helping Billie celebrate her birthday were her sister, Fay, James, Walter, John Will Pitts, James McFarley, Buddie Pope, Peggy Wade, Lou Wade, Jimmy Bell Polly, Janette Ross, Carolyn Klinner, Nell Wyatt, Jimmy Easterling, Stanfield Edward Robinson and Ma Sturkie.

Christmas Shopping Gets Well Underway

LAST MINUTE RUSH IS HOPED TO BE MISSED

Shoppers Finding It Easy To Complete Lists Right At Home

Merchants of Clanton and elsewhere are looking forward to a possible avoidance of the usual last minute buying rush this Christmas, according to several of the leading places of business in this city. This optimistic feeling is due, possibly, to the fact that heavy Christmas buying is already well under way and stocks are moving rapidly.

Eight Days Left

Stores in Clanton are doing a brisk business in Christmas gift purchases and their "hold until Christmas" departments are being well filled with merchandise to be called for later.

The shoppers availing themselves of this accommodation on the part of the stores are acting most wisely as they are assuring themselves of the best selections from complete stocks.

Toys Are Cheap

While it seems this year that all Xmas merchandise, suitable for gifts, is priced lower than the writer ever remembers seeing, the lines of toys are most complete and the prices are amazing. The (Continued to back page)

SCHOOL HEALTH PROGRAM FOR COUNTY FINE

Over 3,000 Children Have Been Examined By Health Unit

3,182 elementary grade children of the Chilton County schools had been inspected today by members of the county health department, according to a report made by Dr. S.D. Sturkie, County Health Officer. "These inspections are being made," stated the health officer, "for the purpose of discovering children with any contagious skin conditions such as scabies, pediculosis and impetigo. Such cases are excluded from school until cured. Parents are showing excellent cooperation with local school and health authorities in keeping infected children out of the classrooms."

Upon the completion of the tour of inspections, the local health unit will enter into its regular annual program of conducting health examinations, reports of the physical defects found in each child being made directly to parents. It was stated by Dr. Sturkie, "The main object of this program," said the local health officer, "is to stimulate parents to carry children to physicians and dentists for correction of these defects. Such conditions as enlarged or diseased tonsils, decayed teeth, underweight, poor vision and hearing, not only retard the progress of the child, but render him more susceptible to such diseases as tuberculosis, rheumatism, etc."

The cooperation of parents with the health department in this matter was strongly urged by the health officer.

Sheriff's Men Bring In Still Last Tuesday

A seventy-five gallon whiskey still and two men were nabbed in a surprise raid four miles east of Maplesville last Monday morning when three deputy sheriffs caught the outfit in operation. The still, an oil drum outfit was destroyed along with about one barrel of mash. The officers stated that the two operators had just started to make a run when they were raided. Deputies Nivens, Crowe and McCary made the raid.

SEVENTY-TWO YEAR OLD NEWSPAPER ON DISPLAY AT NEWS OFFICE WITH OTHER OLD ONES CARRYING BIG NEWS

Six old copies of newspapers tucked to the wall in the office of the Chilton County News, have been attracting much attention during the past few days, due to their age and the news items they carry.

One, the oldest, is a copy of the New York Herald of New York City, dated April 15, 1865. On the front page appears the story of the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln.

A copy of The Kansas City Times, dated April 19th, 1912, carried headlines on the first report of the tragic sinking of the "Titanic" when over one thousand lives were lost at sea.

Another copy of The Kansas City Times dated September 6th, 1901, and a copy of The Kansas City Star of the same date, carry stories of the shooting of President McKinley.

These old newspapers are the property of John M. VanDerveer, Jr., an employee of the Chilton County News, whose family had been saving them. They will remain on display at the News office for several days yet.

BILLINGSLEY TAKES ON TWO NEW MACHINES

Electrolux Refrigerators And Maytag Washers Added To Growing Business

Adding to an already growing business establishment, the well known Billingsley Service Station, of Clanton, announces this week that they have secured the dealership of the "Electrolux" kerosene-burning refrigerator and the popular "Maytag" washing machines.

Two crack salesmen have been added to the sales force of this dealer and are giving excellent demonstrations over the entire section on the "Electrolux," the "Maytag" and the Westinghouse radios.

These two men are J.R. Tucker and G.W. Scott, both experienced men in the electrical and kerosene appliance lines.

W.C. Billingsley, owner of the Billingsley Service Station, is most enthusiastic over the two newly acquired lines. His two salesmen are anxious to give demonstrations anywhere in their district.

In commenting on the "Maytag" washing machine, Mr. Tucker stated "the machine doesn't sell itself, then don't keep it. We have already been convinced by our customers that these machines are more than worth their price. They can be secured either with electric motor or with a gasoline multi-motor, a small motor, with noise eliminated."

EIGHTEEN ARRESTS REPORTED DURING PAST WEEK IN COUNTY

Eighteen arrests were reported at the office of the sheriff as having been made during the past week in this county.

These included four for violating internal revenue laws; 7 for public drunkenness; 1 reckless driving; 1 assault to murder; 3 violating prohibition law; 2 for manufacturing whiskey and possession of a still. County officers and highway patrolmen made the arrests.

Warning Is Issued Regarding Shooting Fireworks In City

(Those who would shoot fireworks within the business district of Clanton are given a warning that it is a violation of the law, according to Chief of Police H.M. Simpson.)

Mr. Simpson stated that the cooperation of everyone in this will be appreciated and that the law would be upheld. The fire limit of Clanton takes in the immediate business district, but does not include the residential sections.

Payton D. Wilson Is Laid To Rest Friday

Funeral services for Payton D. Wilson, age 75, who died at the hospital in Clanton Thursday night, were held Friday afternoon at three o'clock at the Clanton Methodist Church. The Rev. J.M. Truett, conducted the services. Martin & Sons were in charge of burial which followed in the Clanton cemetery. Mr. Wilson's death followed complications resulting from injuries received while on a visit in Centerville recently.

A native of Chilton County, Mr. Wilson was one of the most widely known citizens of Clanton. He was the remaining charter member of the Clanton Methodist Church, served for a number of years as chairman of the County Democratic Executive Committee taking an active part in local affairs as long as his health permitted.

In 1917 he was married to Mrs. Roberta Wilson, a member of another of the county's prominent families. She preceded him in death about a year ago and left two children, Joseph J. Mullins, well known attorney of Clanton and Mrs. Sophia Mullins Nelson, of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mr. Wilson is also survived by three brothers, Andrew J., Enoch and Wash, all of near Clanton; a nephew, Dr. W.S. Wilson, well known dentist of Birmingham, and several other relatives.

YELLOW FRONT STORE MAKES A REAL XMAS BUDGET PLAN

The well known Yellow Front Store, of Clanton, is announcing a method whereby shoppers may keep within their Christmas budget this year. The plan, Mr. Blacketter, manager of the store stated, is simple. "We do it by offering Christmas food articles and other items at lowest possible prices. A large advertisement in this issue from the Yellow Front Store, tells more of these values."

CHRISTMAS PAGEANT AT METHODIST CHURCH SUN.

Next Sunday, December 19, at 5:00 o'clock P.M., we have our Christmas Pageant at the Clanton Methodist Church. The cast includes Miss Meta Grace, Mr. Ed Glasscock, Mr. H. Pinkerson, Mrs. Ed Glasscock, Orin Lawrence, Pugh Truett, Wilbur Pierce, Miss Mary Love Ward, Mr. Omar L. Reynolds, Mr. K.V. Lowery, Mr. George Parr Mr. John VanDerveer, Jr. and members of the choir.

We hope each reader of this notice will attend and prayerfully worship with us during the presentation of this, our pageant, the setting of which is laid in the home of a young priest of the town of Obendorf; in the streets of the same town; and at a midnight Christmas Eve Service in the Parish Church of the same town.

APPLICANTS ARE URGED TO ACT AT ONCE

Advisory Committee Will Meet Sometime Next Month, Report

Clanton, Ala., Dec. 13.—County residents who wish to apply for federal assistance in purchasing farms under the opportunity provided by the legislation known as the "Bank and Farm Tenant Act" must act without delay, says Marvin Durbin, Rehabilitation Supervisor in charge of the Farm Security program in this county.

Consideration of all applications submitted will be commenced as soon as the local Farm Security Advisory Committee is established and ready for service. This Committee, appointed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, is composed of three farmer citizens of this county who will consider the qualifications of the applicant as well as the economic possibilities of farm lands desired purchased. Applicants who are found to have the character, ability, and experience deemed necessary for successful farm ownership will be recommended by this Committee. The lands desired purchased will be appraised and if found of sufficient fertility to promise a satisfactory return on human labor and reasonably priced according to other lands in the immediate neighborhood, the purchase plan will be approved.

Rockett Continues Big Sale At Two Stores

A full page announcement in this issue of the News announces the continuation of the huge sale event opened last week by the two large Rockett stores, the Clanton Building Supply Co., and the Rockett Dry Goods Co. Both stores are enjoying a brisk trade for Christmas and the hardware store is showing a nice line of toys. Turn to the full page announcement and read more of these bargains.

J.D. Cooper, well known citizen of Jenison, was a visitor in Clanton last Tuesday. While in town, Mr. Cooper called at the News office.

Campaign Expenses

One of the perplexing political problems is that of campaign expenditures. How much should a candidate for office be permitted to spend in behalf of his candidacy.

Some of the amounts expended by candidates seem unreasonably large, and in some cases investigations of campaign funds have resulted in the barring of successful candidates.

With our ever growing number of voters it takes a lot of money to reach every voter in the larger states with even one piece of campaign literature. In New York state there are about five million voters. If a single piece of literature were sent to each of these, and the cost of each piece, including postage, printing and addressing, were only five cents, it would take a quarter of a million dollars to do the job. This sum would leave little margin for the expense of compiling lists, travel for speechmaking, newspaper advertising or other expenditures inseparable from an aggressive campaign.

In Illinois and Pennsylvania the number of voters is approximately one-third less than in New York, so it would take about $200,000 to reach each voter with one piece of campaign literature and leave a small amount for other expenses in either of these great states.

These figures would only cover primary expenses, while in all three states mentioned there would be additional outlays necessary incident to the general elections.

All of which illustrates how futile it is, generally speaking, for a poor man without rich supporters to aspire to high office.

Building Codes To Prevent Fire Risks

An essential step in fire control for any community, large or small, is a modern, inclusive, rigorously enforced building code. It is better to prevent a fire than to have to put one out after it has started.

During the past year or two, there has been a pronounced revival of interest in building code formulation, especially in some of the smaller communities of the country. Yet few codes have been enacted into law, and most of them are still in the "proposed" stage. Red tape seems to be holding up their enactment in many cases.

This red tape should be cut as quickly as possible. Communities for which codes have been prepared should immediately legalize them. And communities where nothing has been done to create codes should at once set to work and draft them. A first-class code, as experience in hundreds of towns has shown, can lead to astonishing reductions in the local fire loss.

Furthermore, communities which have codes many years old should examine them in the light of possible revision. During recent years, new building materials of varying degrees of fire-resistiveness have been developed. There have been changes in home and industrial design which have a direct influence on fire hazards. It is possible to build more safely today than ever before.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters has prepared a model code which has been adopted by many communities, and use as the basis for codes by many more. It is distributed free, and the National Board will likewise give invaluable advice on any fire problems to towns which apply. Do away with fire traps—make certain that new building attains a high standard of fire-resistance. Then watch fire loss drop.

Suing her husband for divorce, Mrs. Helen Meyers of Springfield, Mo., said he wasn't happy at a bridge game unless he won, and when she had good cards she had to play them poorly just to keep peace.

Training Farm Boys

More extended instruction in the handling of machinery, and particularly in the use of electricity, is advocated for farm boys by the Federal Board for Vocational Education, according to a southern regional agent.

He declares that electricity is rapidly becoming used to a greater extent on farms, particularly in the South and in other sections where waterpower is available. For this reason he urges the necessity for requiring vocational agricultural teachers to study the operation of electrical equipment so that they may teach the boys under their charge to employ it in practical farming.

Recently a specialist in the Department of Agriculture pointed out that mechanical power can be produced at less than half the cost of animal power. The increased cost of man power is also an important factor in hastening the employment of a greater number and a larger variety of labor-saving machines.

The farmer of the future must have a certain amount of mechanical knowledge, hence the farm boy should begin as early as possible to master the practical operation of power-driven machinery, which he must inevitably use if he hopes to be a successful farmer in the future.

Publishing Risks

Starting a new periodical of any kind is always a risky business, especially in a field already amply supplied. The amount of money that can be sunk in an unsuccessful publishing venture is seldom realized by any except those who hold the bag.

A striking case in point was brought to light a few days ago, when it was announced that the news-magazine News-Week, and the weekly Today were to be merged and the management taken over by the McCall Company.

In the four years of its existence it is stated that News-Week, backed by a number of wealthy men, has lost $2,250,000. In considerably less time Today, backed by Vincent Astor, has lost about $1,000,000.

Seeking to salvage something from their investments, the backers of the two periodicals will put up another million or more, while the McCall Company will risk $1,000,000 in the combined enterprise, which now have a more experienced publisher than either News-Week or Today has had heretofore.

The experience of these periodicals has been duplicated hundreds of times on a smaller scale, when men untrained in the publishing business start superfluous newspapers or magazines. Even an old established and profitable publishing enterprise is easy to wreck when it falls into inexperienced hands.

Easy For The Quacks

The ease with which charlatans of all kinds, particularly medical quacks, defraud the public would be incredible were it not for the evidences to be seen on every hand. A few of the schemes whereby the gullible and superstitious have been separated from their money by these swindlers are mentioned in an article by Dr. Morris Fishbein.

Soon after Franklin made his famous kite demonstration in electricity, everyone was discussing the wonderful new force. A doctor named Elisha Perkins manufactured a lot of short metal rods, which he claimed were charged with electricity and therefore capable of drawing disease from the human body. He sold many of the rods—one pair to George Washington.

Electric belts and similar appliances have been sold by the millions, not one of which, of course, had any curative value whatever. A few years ago a widely advertised product called Sanatogen had an enormous sale, and testimonials were obtained from many persons of prominence. The stuff was composed of 95 per cent cottage cheese and the remainder glycerine phosphates, neither of any medical value.

One promoter acknowledged making $45,600 profit in a year from the sale of a "chemical ring" supposed to cure diseases of the blood, but in reality no more efficacious than a twine string tied around one's finger.

But we can hardly wonder at the success of quackery in a state of civilization which still accepts a mass of medical superstition as gospel truth.

A writer maintains that women have no sense of humor. It would be very fortunate for most men if he were right.

We have come to the conclusion that the door of opportunity would be more frequently opened if it weren't labeled hard work.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

I was standing by a parrot perched on her roost and was talking to her in an affectionate way. She would chatter away in parrot language and to express her admiration for me she would take my finger in her bill and would gently press upon it with her jaws. She had no desire to hurt or to injure me. A little lad of five years was standing beside me and he saw the kindness of the bird and extended his finger for her to use as a toy with which to play. No sooner had the child's finger come within reach of the bird than she seized it with all fury and tore the flesh from the bone. The parrot screamed and the child screamed and both went down on the floor together. When I had them separated the little boy said: "I saw Dr. Haskew playing with Polly and I thought that I could play with her too. The little boy was following my example and got into trouble. How careful we should be when children are watching us. Many a child is injured because he followed the example of an older person.

It is rather strange how people will act. I have written hundreds of little human interest stories and they have been read by thousands of people. As long as I write helpful things and things that please I never hear a word, but the very moment I use a word or make a questionable statement, not one but many are ready to hop upon me and peck me all over. I notice this about my 'Fan Mail.' When I have commendable letters they are always signed, but when people want to 'chew me up' they leave their letters unsigned. It just seems impossible for everybody to be honest and fair. It grieves me to make a mistake or to shock the finer part of anyone. It seems to me that we as human beings should be willing to commend virtues more readily than we are to criticize faults and mistakes. "Let your rocks fly when you are sure you are without fault; until then, be fair calm and sweet.

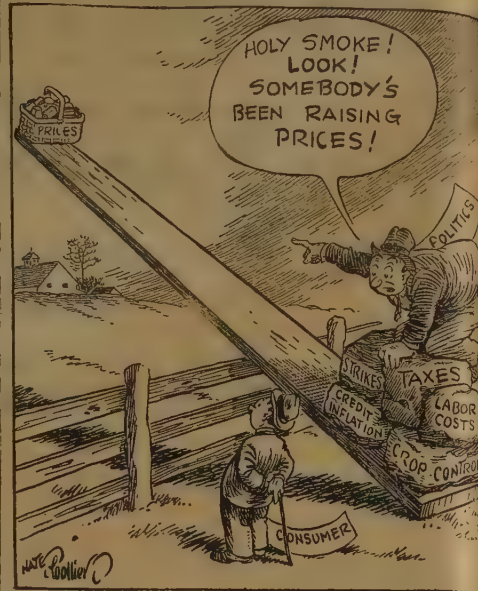

We have all heard about the charming story of the old scotchman whose habit it was to leave his sheep and climb to the top of the hill at the early morning hour so that he might see the sun climb out from behind the distant plains. He would stand reverently gazing out toward the East and just before the ball of fire lifted itself into the air he would remove his bonnet and remain bareheaded and silent for some time. One day a neighbor asked him why he did it. His reply was worthy of his great spirit "Because I like to go out the first thing in the morning and take off my bonnet to the beauty of the world and then let my spirit in worship to the one who made the world. Most everyone today believes in God, but many of us take much interest in Him. We know that God is in existence but we refuse to take off our hats in reverence and then bow in devotion to Him. Every day we should pause and like Isaiah reverently repeat, "Wonderful, Counsellor, Prince of Peace, Mighty God, Everlasting Father." God can get along without you but you can not get along without Him.

I know a preacher who had a good library. There were hundreds of rare volumes and they were all loved by this man of God. They had been his daily companions for many years. They had helped him to grow and they had inspired him to preach many a helpful sermon but one day that preacher looked at those books an often remembered other young men who were trying to get a start in the ministry. He called four young preachers into his study and divided among them the books that had meant so much to him. When the boys had gone away with his books this pastor wept like a child. His heart ached because he had parted with his friends, but his soul was singing because he could help another to preach the gospel of Christ. I know a little woman who goes to her Sunday School class with her arms full of good books to be offered to any one who is willing to read. If you have a good book why not lend it to someone. What has helped you will most likely help someone else.

There had been an accident and the sunlight of the parsonage had gone out. Many little things had been left to the pastor that spoke the language of sacred memory. The powers that be said that this pastor must move and now he was faced with the matter of carrying these little things with him or giving them away to friends who loved and understood. For several days neighbors and friends came in and each wanted a little token that might be kept in memory of the one whom they loved. The pastor was moving and he knew that he could not carry all of these things away with him and so he wept and gave away. More and more am I impressed with the idea that shrouds have no pockets. Whether you know it or not we are all going to move. No one doubts but that you love what you have but friends you can not carry these things to the next world with you. The only things that you can carry into the next world are the things that you have given away. "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven"

Many Alabama farm boys and girls are paying their way through college this year with money earned from 4-H club projects and in addition they gained knowledge and experience that will be of value to them in future years

WILL OPEN HOUSING PROJECT IN SUBURB

Operation Will Be Studied by Government Experts.

Washington.—The government is prepared to open Greenbelt, its suburban town at Berwyn, Md., to study its operation to determine policies for similar projects which soon will open within a few miles at Milwaukee and Cleveland.

The new farm security administration, falling heir to the $14,327,000 apartment and group house community on rolling, wooded terrain near Washington, promptly found itself involved in experimental nonprofit operation of a model little business district.

All three of the low-rent housing developments were begun by the settlement administration, target of much anti-New Deal criticism. Recently the FSA replaced Resettlement and assumed the duty of administering the new farm tenancy program.

A ten-year lease had been signed with the Consumer Distribution Corporation. To operate of Greenbelt's commercial establishments, including a moving picture theater, when the development receives its first tenants in a few weeks. The corporation was headed by Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant, to encourage cooperative department stores.

Robert Evans, vice president, Percy Brown, secretary-treasurer, announced after conferring with the Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace on details of the program that "we are ready to be as soon as Greenbelt opens."

He explained that the organization had been "drafted" to undertake the operation of the Greenbelt settlements until co-operative committees at the settlement can take over.

"We are performing merely a service," Evans explained. "We are glad to help. But I doubt we will continue for the full years because the resident committees should be able to be in full charge long before then."

Town's Women Officials Say Men Loafed on Job

Friendly, W. Va.—The women are in the driver's seat in this little town of 175 because "the men didn't do anything but play checkers and gossip." It was this alleged lack that permitted the women to take over the town government. The mayor, council, recorder, all the town's officers are women. The women were swept into office by a 3-to-1 vote—a victory that would not have been possible without support from the men, because there are as many men as women in the town.

The only office still held by a man is that of town marshal, and the women expect to take over that position within a short time, because Marshal J. Mack Doty is eighty-four years old.

But there is at least one man who is decidedly in favor of the change. He is K. D. Doak, good-natured operator of the town's gasoline station and restaurant.

"This ought to put Friendly on the map," he said. "It's the first time in West Virginia's history that all women have been elected."

Map 50 Years of Ocean Weather to Guide Planes

New Orleans.—Use of weather observations made by ship captains during the last half century to determine the safest air lanes for regular trans-oceanic flights is foreseen by W. F. McDonald, chief of the United States weather bureau here.

Composite maps showing the weather tendencies at any point in the seven seas would be used by pilots to chart their routes, McDonald said.

From nearly 6,000,000 observations turned into the weather bureau at Washington, he has worked out charts, maps and other data to show the general weather tendencies all over the world.

A burglar who stole $125 from the home of Rev. Alan Ramsey of New Orleans sent the money back several days later.

Cyril Porter of New York was fined $25 for boring a hole in the partition of a railroad coach to spy on people in an adjoining compartment.

4-H CLUB NEWS

Maplesville Jr. Club
The Junior 4-H Club boys of Maplesville, Ala., went on an opossum hunt Friday night, December 3. Mr. Ivey, the Assistant County Agent in 4-H club work, Mr. Wallace of Maplesville the local leader for the community, and Mr. Wingard, a friend of Mr. Ivey, were leaders of the hunt.

Seventeen of the members met at Mr. Wallace's and the hunt began at 6:30 and lasted until 9:30. While the dog was hunting a fire was built and sandwiches were eaten that had been prepared by Mr. Wallace. Games were played afterwards and everyone enjoyed the evening of fun.

Maplesville Jr. 4-H Club
Today we organized a 4-H Club. We have forty on roll, and we elected new officers. They are as follows:

President, Tommie Lee Sexton.
Vice President, Hazel Rogers.
Secretary, Pattie Nix.
Treasurer, Howard Nell Smith.
Leaders, Helen McGee, Grey Hicks, Mildred Roper and Eloise Headley.
Miss Grace taught us some new songs.

For the next meeting we will have a Christmas program. We will make gifts to exchange at this meeting.

We hope that the people present at this meeting will report that they have tried the new recipes that Miss Grace gave them.

—Tommie Lee Sexton, Reporter.

Maplesville Jr. Club Met
Song and yells opened Maplesville's new 4-H Club season November 18th. After the songs the house was called to order and new officers were elected:

President, Thomas Gaddy.
Vice President, W. E. Coburn.
Secretary & Treasurer, Lewis Gandy.
Reporter, Glenn Latham.
Song & Yell Leader, Frank Merchant.
Local Leaders, S. C. Perch, C. H. Latham.

Program Committee, Glenn Latham, Reuben Bearden, Henry Bolding.
Social Committee, Joe Latham, Andrew Lloyd Dennis, George Brown.

Each member signed projects and enrollment cards. Mr. Ivey gave each member a copy of the Alabama 4-Club News. The club was then dismissed by songs and yells.

—Glenn Latham, Reporter.

Mt. Pleasant Club
The Mt. Pleasant 4-H Club met with Mr. Ivey Wednesday, December 1st. The first part of the meeting was held jointly with the girls at which time a Christmas program was given. The last part of the program was a discussion of soil erosion and forest fires. Mr. Ivey gave a few tricks to work out and the meeting adjourned until next month.

—Louie K. Crowe, Reporter.

Union Grove 4-H Club News
The Union Grove 4-H Club met Tuesday morning, November 16. We elected officers for the next year. They were Harland Brasher, president; Osmond Clecker, vice president; William Varden, secretary & treasurer; Raymond Robinson, song and cheer leader; Oslee Vinzant, reporter.

After electing officers we signed project cards. Mr. Cluey explained how to fill them out for the benefit of the new members. Then he gave us some more cards to read. The meeting was then adjourned until next month.

—Oslee Vinzant, Reporter.

Baker 4-H Club News
The Baker Club meeting was jointly with the girls and was opened by singing some Christmas songs and poems about Christmas. Miss Grace then gave us the story of little Pedro.

The 4-H Club calendars were given to each of us. These are being sponsored by the Clanton Kiwanis Club this year, and we appreciate it very much.

After the meeting a group picture was made of the boys and girls club with our calendars. The meeting then adjourned until next month.

—William Pierce, Reporter.

What 4-H Club Work Does:
4-H Club boys and girls are demonstrators—they learn and teach better ways on the farm, in the home and in the community.

4-H Club boys and girls work, earn money, and acquire property.

4-H Club boys and girls do the needful, the wholesome, the helpful thing. They become leaders.

4-H Club boys and girls play the game fairly.

4-H Club boys and girls meet together, work together, play together, cooperate, achieve.

4-H Club boys and girls build up their bodies and their health through right living: they train their hands to be useful, their minds to think clearly; their hearts are kind.

4-H Club boys and girls have high ideals and standards. They serve.

4-H Club boys and girls are doers.

THE 4-H CLUB PLEDGE—

I Pledge:
My head to clearer thinking;
My heart to greater loyalty;
My hands to larger service; and My health to better living; for My Club, my Community, and my Country.

WHAT 4-H CLUB WORK IS:
4-H Club work is a part of the national agricultural extension system. Through it rural boys and girls 10 to 20 years of age are taught better agricultural and home making practices and the finer and more significant things of rural life. It builds men and women.

Expedition Fails to Find Seal Breeding Grounds

San Diego, Calif.—The age-old mystery of the location of the breeding grounds of the female elephant seal today still is as much of an enigma as the fabled "graveyard of the elephants."

A thorough search of the Guadalupe and Sedros Islands, off the coast of Mexico, by an expedition in charge of Capt. G. Allan Hancock, millionaire patron of the sciences, and a group of San Diego zoo officials, failed to reveal a trace of the long-sought breeding ground.

NIGHT and DAY

You're safe on CONCRETE

T night you appreciate concrete all the more because its light gray surface gives you see down the road. It is spread without glossy reflection. Pavement jobs are clearly defined.

Concrete meets the ideal for a pavement as defined by the International Illumination Congress of 1928. This is important to you because surveys show that the rate of death per accident is 43 per cent higher during darkness.

Concrete, smooth but non-skid, insures a quick, certain stop even in the rain. Blow-outs, spring breakage, steering gear failures, accidents of all kinds are less apt to happen on concrete.

Yet concrete is not only safe—it is more comfortable—it saves in driving costs—it costs less for upkeep—and cost of construction is less than that of any other pavement of equal load-carrying capacity.

Christian Endeavor News

The Christian Endeavor Society met December 12, 1937, in the Fellowship room of the Congregational Church. Miss Smith was the leader. The topic was "Why Is The Bible Worth Knowing?" A duet "Nearer My God To Thee" was sung by Mr. Charles and Mr. George Luther.

A Christmas worship service is being planned by joint committees of the Y.P.U. and Christian Endeavor for Sunday evening, December 19, at 7:30 in the Congregational Church. The program is entitled "Our Gifts To Thee—O Christmas." There will be a Christmas tree and a dedication of gifts to be distributed before Christmas to needy people of the community. Carols will be sung.

A Christian Endeavor social was held Sunday night, December 11, in the Fellowship Room of the Congregational Church. Gratitude is given to the local committee of which Oleita Nowell is chairman for its working in making it a successful one.

Thorsby Institute News

The honor rolls for the second term at Thorsby Institute are as follows:

FIRST: Mary Christ, Sarah Nell Collins, Frances Conway, Mae Annice Polk, Ouida Wright.

SECOND: Fred Blankenship, William Callen, Lois Ruth Clarke, Inez Duke, Martha Green, Kathleen Honeycutt, Frances Wood.

PERFECT ATTENDANCE: Mildred Adams, Leonard Bosworth, Elaine Burdette, William Callen, Mary Christ, Louise Clark, Frances Conway, Ruth Cox, Inez Duke, Earl Flournoy, Harold Foshee, Carl Foss, Mabel Edwina Halton, Maurice Higgins, Howard Minor, Hazel Pate, Kathleen Petty, Bessie June Roy, J.W. Sorrell, Eunice Walker, Thelma White, Lois Ruth Clarke.

A special program Friday night of Christmas was presented by Mr. Carl Turnquist, beginning at 7:15, followed by a Christmas Pageant, "The Message of the Manger." The pageant is directed by Miss Kathryn Foss. Everyone is cordially invited. Admission will be ten cents.

School will close on December 23 at one o'clock for the Christmas holidays and will reopen January 5 at 8:30.

Rev. E. W. Butler, Treasurer of Thorsby Institute since 1913, has resigned that office, his resignation to take effect on December 31.

Mr. and Mrs. Butler are expecting to leave Thorsby in January to become residents of Granger Homestead, Canadigua, N. Y., a home for aged ministers and their wives. They spent two weeks in October in the home and were delighted with it.

They will be missed in Thorsby. They have lived here more than 30 years. Mr. Butler came into Alabama in 1907 to take charge of the general work of the Congregational churches of this and adjacent states. He chose Thorsby as their place of residence chiefly because of the location here of Thorsby Institute, at that time the only high school on the line of the L. & N. railroad between Birmingham and Montgomery.

After a few years he resigned that work and since then has devoted himself chiefly to the work of the Institute. Both Mr. and Mrs. Butler have been active in the work of their church. He served for one year as its pastor and for some years past has been deacon and Sunday School Superintendent. In between he has held most of the other offices of the church. Mrs. Butler has not been quite so conspicuous in her relation to the church, but none the less useful, for her work through the years has been in the Primary Department of the Sunday School of which Department she is now Superintendent. She also has been active and has generally held some office in the Ladies Guild and in the Ladies Aid Society of her church.

Mr. Butler's activities have not been limited to church and school. He was Town Clerk and Treasurer for many years and served one or two terms in the town council. He was also president of the Bank of Thorsby for a few years.

Thorsby will miss them. But we wish for them much joy in the new home to which they are soon to go.

Thorsby Jr. High News

The school was fortunate in having Mrs. Ballard from Jemison to come down last Monday morning and give a lecture to the student body on bird life. Mrs. Ballard opened her discussion by outlining the habits and characteristics of several of our native birds, she presented in a most charming manner our responsibility in providing food for them during the bitter winter months and then our duty in affording them a nesting place to rear their young during the Spring months.

That's What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

Some of my readers who have been kind enough to call to my attention the fact that they do read this column every week have been curious enough to inquire why I, who have devoted this column as a rule, to general discussions of things calculated to rebound to the public welfare, should turn it into a political forum.

This question in itself is indicative of the attitude of the general public toward politics—toward the science of governing itself! For we have become so accustomed to the misuse of the machinery of electing our public officials that the very fact of seeking office is sufficient to make his friends believe the worst of him. And that I should bend my talents in support of a political ideal or a political candidate is an act subject to question by many of my readers who would not otherwise believe that this column has an axe to grind.

But, on the other hand, if we are to arrive at the point at which our public officials will be public servants; if we are to keep our government clear of unsavory influences; if we are to make the field of politics a clean, honorable profession, then there is no better place

From this point a brief discussion was given relative to the enemies of our birds, the two most notorious being the common housecat and the snake. The entire lecture was most pleasantly received by the student body and faculty, for Mrs. Ballard is an authority on bird lore, having taught nature study for several years in the Birmingham schools. She has also made an exhaustive study of plant and bird life by numerous field trips, which gives her a keen insight into the habits and nature of wild plant and animal life.

We regret losing one of our Jr. 2 classmates, Elizabeth Burkett. She is moving to Evergreen, Ala.

Our basketball team hung up two more victories last week, when they outpointed the Enterprise Juniors on Thursday night by the close count of 15 to 14, and then marched over to Collins Chapel on Friday afternoon and proceeded to give the Collins Chapel Juniors a lacing by the score of 20 to 14.

The Enterprise game may be classed as strictly a defensive game. Neither team showed much inclination offensively, but confined their playing to close guarding, which resulted in excessive fouling. This inevitably led to Enterprise's defeat, as their center committed a personal foul with only 28 seconds to play and the score knotted 14 to 14. Hayes on taking the shot netted the ball for the winning point just as the final whistle blew. Neely was the big gun for Enterprise, looping the ball for 8 points, while Deason and Hayes shared honors alike for Thorsby each checking in 5 markers.

The Collins Chapel game was a rather loosely played affair. Neither team could justify itself, due to the cold wind and playing on an outdoor court. The boys did not play in uniforms. Hayes was the high point man for Thorsby in this game. He stripped the net for 13 counters, while Mims was turning in six points to lead his chapel mates.

Coach Ed Glascock will bring Concord quintet up tonight for a game—December 16. This will be the first game between these two teams. The game will start at 7:00 o'clock. Another game will be played at 8:00 o'clock on the same floor between the Thorsby Independents and Maplesville High. These two games should prove highly interesting. Be there for your share of the fun. Admission will be ten cents for everybody.

A new member was added to our Jr. Three Class last week in the person of Doris Wylie, who comes to us from Mt. Pleasant Jr. High. A cordial welcome is extended to you, Doris.

The Christmas spirit is overcoming us fast. We hope our school work attraction will hold its own until December 23.

Many thanks to Mr. Herbert Williams for installing our wash basin in a convenient place.

Ed Nations, one of our Jr. Three students, is out of school at present ill with the flu. We wish him a swift recovery.

Our enrollment has now reached the all-time high for Thorsby Jr. High School. 269 registrations have been made thus far. Of this number 66 are in the Jr. High department. This enrollment is almost 100 above the 1936-1937 term.

The boys basketball team goes to Calera tomorrow afternoon for a game with Calera Jr. High.

The new water fountains have arrived but have not yet been installed.

Jan. Sherwood, Stanley and Joe Villadsen are absent from school due to having chicken pox.

The Jr. girls will present a little drama entitled "Solemn Pride" at chapel program next Monday morning. We hope to have a number of parents present. This play has a historical significance, the theme being centered around the early pioneer life during the early settlements.

Highlights Of E.J.H.S

More than one hundred of the 4.H Club students, and many of the parents from this school and community are expecting to attend the 4.H Club picture, "Under The 4.H Flag," Wednesday.

We are not only expecting to enjoy this show but we are expecting to learn some new things that will help to make our club work more useful to us.

Sports News

The Enterprise basketball boys went to Thorsby last Thursday night to play Thorsby, and lost to the close score of 14 to 15. It was a very interesting game. The scores were tied almost all the way through the game. This was the first game of the league.

We are very sorry to lose three of our very good players, on account of the new age rule.

The basketball boys and girls went to Union Grove last Friday to play the Union Grove boys and girls. The scores for the boys were: Enterprise, 18; Union Grove, 13. The scores for the girls were: Enterprise, 12; Union Grove, 0. That was the first game for the Enterprise girls.

The Enterprise boys will play Baker at Enterprise Sunday. The girls are also expecting to play. The first game will begin at 1:00 o'clock. Come out to see both games.

Poplar Springs

Sunday school at this place was well attended Sunday considering the cool weather.

The church building has been torn down and work has begun on the new building. While the building is being constructed all services will be held in the Thomas Jr. school house. We are very grateful to the trustees and superintendent for this arrangement.

Saturday, Sunday and Sunday night are our regular preaching services. Sunday school at 10:00 o'clock Sunday morning. B.Y.P.U. Sunday night at 6:15. All church members are urged to be present and visitors are welcome.

The Poplar Springs Home Demonstration Club held its regular meeting on December 3 at the home of Mrs. N.A. Jones. The house was decorated with Christmas decorations and a Christmas program was carried out. Hand made Christmas gifts were exchanged.

Mt. Pleasant

There will be preaching services at this place Sunday afternoon, December 19, at 2:30 by Rev. W.E. Robinson. All are urged to attend.

STORY OF "ROOM SERVICE" GIVES HILARIOUS, INSIDE VIEW OF BROADWAY'S ANTICS

Broadway from the inside, Broadway at its craziest, at its phoniest, supplies the atmosphere and the color and the very essence of "Room Service," which George Abbott will present at the city hall auditorium, Montgomery, Alabama, on Monday evening, December 27.

All the flashy and dishonest practices believed of Broadway are shown in "Room Service." But far from being a social problem play exposing a shabby, back alley racket, "Room Service" laughs at the economic acrobatics of the people and the business it depicts.

All these problems are approached mirthfully, all the characters are drawn in terms of hilarity. For, after all, this is only one side of show business, representing the ever dwindling and unimportant minority ludicrously hanging on the fringe of an art form that, when successful, makes fortunes legitimately for its backers.

So when Gordon Miller kids a solemn-eyed waiter into stealing a meal for him and his three roommates—all faking their way in a double room for which they have never paid the hotel bill—it is not shocking; it is excruciatingly funny. Then, too, Miller is a likeable chap; and certainly the hotel will not go bankrupt because of a stolen meal, so the sympathy of the audience is with him. In fact, the audience is so strongly on his side that they root anxiously for him in his unethetically resourceful ways of housing his 19 actors without paying their bills, in renting a theatre without paying rent, in raising funds with collateral and in dodging the sheriff every time he turns around.

The cast to be seen in Montgomery was assembled and rehearsed at the Cort Theatre, New York, by George Abbott personally, with the assistance of Edith Van Cleve, his associate director. The cast is composed of experienced, established Broadway actors and include Robert Williams, Joseph Greenwald, Matt Briggs, Fleming Ward, Clinton Sundberg, Mary Cheffey, Nat Cantor, Patricia Palmer, Marshall Bradford, John Clarke, Michael Dalmatorf, Herber Trietel, Edward Nannery, Russell Morrison, J. Ascher Smith and Alva King.

Prompt attention will be given to all mail orders when accompanied by money orders. Address all mail orders to Montgomery Enterprises, P.O. Box 195, Montgomery, Alabama. Admission prices are $2.80, $2.24, $1.68, $1.12, and 85. These prices include all taxes.

When Joseph Zeil of Milwaukee missed his first meal at home in 20 years his wife asked police to search for him.

Best Rations Given For Wintering Cattle

Auburn, Ala.—Prof. J.C. Grimes, head of the animal husbandry department of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, is at present advising Alabama farmers that any one of several rations is "good for wintering cows, heifers, and stocker steers." The seven rations follow:

No. 1. Velvet beans, grained in the field.
No. 2. Stacked Johnson grass hay with access to the hay field.
No. 3. 15 to 20 pounds grass hay and 1 to 2 pounds cottonseed meal per head, daily.
No. 4. 30 to 35 pounds silage and 1 to 2 pounds cottonseed meal per head, daily.
No. 5. 15 pounds grass hay and 5 pounds legume hay per head, daily.
No. 6. 15 to 20 pounds soybeans, cowpea, peanut, or other legume hay per head, daily.
No. 7. 15 to 20 pounds cottonseed hulls and 1 to 2 pounds cottonseed meal per head, daily.

Mr. Grimes also suggests that: 1. Peanut meal may be substituted for cottonseed meal at the rate of 1 pound of peanut meal for 1 pound of cottonseed meal. 2. Ground velvet beans may be substituted for cottonseed meal at the rate of 2 1/2 pounds velvet beans for 1 pound of cottonseed meal. 3. Five pounds of broken ear corn, or ground corn and cob meal, may be substituted for an equal amount of legume hay in ration No. 6.

FIGHTS DIG AT SOUTH IN NEW FARM PROGRAM

Montgomery, Ala.—The South should do everything possible to kill the so-called Boileau Amendment to the farm bill now before congress, advises R.J. Goode, commissioner of agriculture and industries.

"This amendment would prevent the use of any land diverted from cotton for the production of market of any food or feed crops, or for the expansion of a livestock or dairy industry in Alabama," he points out. "Such a provision would be disastrous to the farmers of the state and would constitute nothing more or less than economic strangulation," he concludes.

Boys 4-H Club News

Stanton

Our last club meeting met at Stanton Jr. High School November 4. We elected new officers for the coming year as follows:

President, Charles Golson; Vice President, William Ruddleick; Secretary, C.A. Cook; Song and Yell Leader, Mr. Woodfin Littlejohn; Local Committee, Chairman, C.E. Cagle; Herman Davis and Tipton Burnette; Social Committee, Chairman, Howard Harrison, Thomas Wright and Edwin Golson.

—Edwin Golson, Reporter, Enterprise Club

The Enterprise 4-H Club met last Friday with five new members added to the club. We enjoyed a lovely Christmas program given by the girls club.

Mr. Ivey showed us two mysterious games which no one has figured out yet. We are expecting to have one on him next month as he will tell us how to solve his mysteries. After the program in the girls club room we went back to our room and played several more games which were enjoyed by all.

We are glad to have our new members and we are going to make them get the 4-H spirit too.

After the program we adjourned until the new year, by wishing every club member and Mr. Ivey a "Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year."

—Reporter, Elbert Griffin, Verbena Club

The Verbena 4-H Club met November 8 and new officers were elected as follows:

President, Lawrence Howard; Secretary and Treasurer, Judson Strock; Reporter, James Messer; Song and Cheer Leader, Bill Barrett; Local Leaders, Mr. M.W. Mims and Mr. G.S. Gibson. The Program Committee and the Social Committee were elected by the President.

The members filled out project cards and are ready for the new year.

Gift Buyers Guide For Last Minute Shoppers

Suggestions To Aid Gift Shoppers Are Given By Popular Store; Prices Shown Among The Lowest

A few suggestions to help you make your choice:

If you're one of the many, many folks who hold off buying their Christmas gifts until the last minute, you'll appreciate a few ideas on what to give, and what it takes to foot the bill. With that in mind, we are devoting this column to offering some suggestions.

A man can always use a nice dress shirt, no matter how many he already has on hand. Manhattan Shirts, a symbol of quality in themselves, may be had at $2.00 and $2.50 apiece, with a fine choice of solid whites, collars and fancy patterns. For those preferring a lower price, Astoria Shirts offer a selection at $1.49 and $1.69. And then there are ties! For most men, Christmas ties are something to be looked at with horror, because most women have a habit of choosing outlandish patterns; but you're safe in satisfying him this year if you choose an Ambassador tie—there just aren't any outlandish Ambassadors; and they can be had for $1.00 and a few numbers at $1.50, two for $1.00. Ambassadors is also featuring some beautiful mufflers on the Christmas list—a nice selection of genuine Tyrolean silk in attractive patterns, at $4.95 each, and that's the Broadway Reeler, almost big enough to serve as a blanket!—and some more moderate in price, from $1.50 up. For the man who sleeps in pajamas—Manhattan is again the leader with a beautiful array at $2.00 and $2.50. Speaking of "Three Musketeers," a gift box of three hand-rolled handkerchiefs for dress wear, boxed up like a book—for only $1.00.

We might add, that in buying these nationally known and trademarked items you avoid any possibilities of prices being marked up for the holiday season—these prices are staple the year around.

If you know his size, he'll like a Leeston Hat, and they're available in a variety of shapes and colors, at the usual price of $3.85.

Hansen gloves, ranging from $1.49 to $2.95 should certainly find a spot on your list, and a warm place in some man's heart for you!

Now, gentlemen, for your list: No woman ever had quite enough hose, and you can be sure of the quality she likes by selecting from the Gordon Hosiery list. Gordon hose may be had from 89c to $1.35 a pair. Three pairs of these, at a slightly reduced quantity price, make an ideal gift.

If you're one who delights in giving Her what she most certainly wouldn't buy for herself, but what she most certainly would like to have, the new silk and satin house-coats and pajamas will tickle any woman's fancy, whether she's sixteen or sixty. Bellaire has a beautiful assortment at $3.95 and $4.95; Beauty Maid fills in from $3.95 to $7.95; and Prima Donna fills out the list at $5.95 and $7.95.

There are of course, a large variety of silk and satin pajamas to be had at $1.98 and $2.45 for those who have a wee bit less to spend; and it's socially proper to give close friends more intimate garments. In this field Gordon offers a nice variety of knitted slips and gowns; and you mustn't overlook "Winks," Gordon's newest contribution to the sleeping field.

It shouldn't be hard to select an appropriate gift for either HIM or HER from such a list—a gift that will be both beautiful and practical, in a price range your pocketbook can easily understand.

Nor should we forget to mention that all of these items are kept in stock

ISABELLA F. H. A.

The Isabella F.H.A. met December 8th in the Home Economics Department

The officers that were elected are as follows: President, Lila Devaughn. Vice president, Ernestine Johnson, Reporter, Velma Conway.

The following program committee was selected by the president:

Chairman, Lona Cummings; Evelyn Veazey, Velma Conway.

A social committee was also appointed:

Chairman, Clara Mae Lecroy, Adel Scott, Evelyn Veazey.

The program that was given was very short due to the fact that there was so much business.

Devotional, Midge Williams.

Christmas, Lavern Gram.

Christmas Carol, Velma Conway.

Origin of Christmas Gifts, Adel Scott.

The F.H.A. planned to have a party sometime soon but the date was not definitely decided.

This year the State Department of the F.H.A. adopted a club insignia, and the Isabella Club has just received theirs. The meaning of this was explained at this meeting. This insignia will be framed and hung in the Home Economics room.

HOW ARE YOU RATED?

The CHILTON-SHELBY COUNTIES CREDIT GUIDE is delivered. The information that has been so carefully compiled is now on the desks of a very large majority of the representative business and professional men of the above counties. They are well pleased and expect to be able to use the information to a very good purpose.

The Credit Guide is published by a National Organization that is authorized under State and Federal Laws. It operates under the strict supervision exercised over all corporations.

Many of the people of Chilton and Shelby County have no right to be proud of the rating they received.

The information that the guide contains will be available not only to those business and professional men of Chilton and Shelby Counties but to all Credit Agencies and loan organizations, both state and national private and governmental, that may require such information.

A new guide will be made right after the first of the year. Much new information will be in it. Many who have not paid this Fall will be listed and those who pay within the next few weeks will receive credit in the new guide and improve their rating from its present status.

NEW TREE PLANTING SEASON BEGINS ON SOIL CON. AREA

A new tree planting season has begun in the Soil Conservation area near Clanton, Alabama, where 200,000 trees will be planted on farms of cooperators during the winter and early spring, according to Mr. James H. Wood, superintendent.

Tree planting is a phase of the land use program for soil and water conservation on step and severely eroded land Mr. Wood explained. Retiring such land to trees leaves the more gently sloping land, where erosion progresses less rapidly, for cultivated crops.

Where seed trees of desirable species are present in sufficient number to insure adequate natural reproduction within three years, natural reforestation is dependent upon in the erosion control area. Obsolete artificial reforestation is used, Mr. Wood said. Proper management of existing woodland is also an essential part of an erosion control program, he continued. Protection of woods against damage by fire, and grazing, and proper methods of harvesting wood products are just as necessary for effective erosion control as for obtaining maximum returns and a sustained yield from woodland.

In the Clanton area both woodland management and reforestation are being demonstrated. These phases of the erosion control program can be seen to advantage at this season, Mr. Wood said. Farmers throughout this entire section are invited to observe these demonstrations of methods which they can use with benefit on their own farms, he added.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the many friends for their help and kindness during the sickness and death of our dear daddy, F.O. Bates. We thank Dr. Eiland, Dr. Hayes for their help in trying to save him, and we thank Mr. and Mrs. Burns Goodgame for the beautiful flowers and Mr. Mack Bates and others for the flowers. Our prayers are with you wherever you go.—Mrs. Odie Caton and Mother.

STOCKHOLDERS MEETING

To the Stockholders of the First National Bank:

The annual meeting of the Stockholders of The First National Bank of Clanton, Alabama, for the election of Directors, and the transaction of any other business that may come before the meeting, will be held at the office of said Bank on January 11, 1938, between the hours of 7 P.M. and 8 o'clock P.M.

(Signed) J.C. PAGE, Cashier.
John Swain of Vineland, N.J., was given a 30-day jail sentence for arson when he burned his wife's clothes to force her to stay at home.

IN MEMORY OF F.O. BATES

Many hearts were saddened when the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. F.O. Bates and carried away our beloved Daddy, Mr. F.O. Bates. He had been sick about seven months, when God saw fit to take him home where he wanted so bad to go. Weep not, dear ones for God is the Giver and Taker. His will must be done, not ours. All was done for Daddy that loving hands could do but God saw fit to take him home where there will be no more pain and sorrow.

There is a vacant place in his home and in the hearts of his children that can never be filled.
Daddy was loved by all who knew him, so he reconciled one and all, for our loss is heaven's gain.

Daddy lived to be sixty years and seven months old and leaves to mourn his going away his wife and three children—Mrs. Elsie Bates; two sons, W.F. Bates, Clanton; T.T. Bates, Cooper; one daughter, Mrs. Odie Caton, Clanton; four grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends.

His body was laid to rest in the Providence cemetery Sunday, December 5, at 2:00 o'clock with Rev. W.W. Robinson and J.L. Smith officiating, with Spigener in charge.

IN MEMORY OF JOHN THORNTON

On Thursday night, December 9th, the death angel came and took away our loving grandfather, Mr. John Thornton. He lived to be 72 years of age. He was ill for two weeks. All was done that loving hands could do.

The funeral was held from the Chestnut Creek Baptist Church, Cooper with Rev. McLeod of Thorsby and Rev. Hughes of Cooper conducting the services. Burial was in the church cemetery with Spigener in charge.

He leaves to mourn his death his wife, twelve children, Mrs. W.R. Nations of Thorsby, Mrs. Robert Patterson of Sand Springs, Oklahoma, Mrs. Willie Strength of Detroit, Michigan, Misses Elsie, Flora, and Lena Thornton, Miss Lottie Morris of Verbena, Mr. Lucian and Henry Thornton of Birmingham, Mr. Jessie Thornton of Clanton and Mr. Ed and Benjamin Thornton of Verbena. Seventeen grandchildren, three brothers and a host of other relatives and friends.

To Tighten Up On State Traffic Laws

Montgomery, Ala.—Governor Billy Graves has ordered a further tightening of state highway traffic regulations following the November report from the state highway patrol of 87 fatalities, an increase of 17 over the previous month. The report listed 432 injured in varying degrees and property damage of $26,937, making a sharp decline.

The report, from Patrol Chief Walter K. McAdory, said a marked decline had been shown in the number of arrests for driving while intoxicated. Arrest of persons illegally driving automobiles or trucks soared from 49 to 475 as the patrol campaigned to bring every driver under the state license laws.

The report revealed the highway patrol participating in general law enforcement activity in the state with the arrest of two murder and two robbery suspects, among other activities.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our many thanks to the many friends and neighbors who helped us during the illness and death of our loved one, Mr. John Thornton. Especially do we thank Spigener Funeral Home, Dr. John and Rob Eiland, Rev. McLeod and Rev. Hughes and the Devaughn Quartet. We also thank each one for the beautiful floral offerings.—The Family.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank each and every one in this community and other communities that have helped us while we have been down and not able to help myself. We also thank each one for the contributions which have been given to us. May God bless each and every one of you.—Mr. and Mrs. Tom Foshee.

"The man who had questioned Little Duck nodded. He grasped his mother by the arm and latched her about, cutting off her fling."

"Make your tongue silent!" he severely. "How comes blood the little trader's canoe? Where the little trader?"

"The old woman glared at him. The little trader!" she mumbled. "He came floating down the river in his canoe. I put him out on your lodge. On the grass near your lodge. With these dogs I put him out. You leave alone when there is whiskey."

"That was all they wanted from now. They turned away, with no to tell, not heeding her chat of explanation. Little Duck had said, saying Shaw was dead."

"It was a time of death. Flat was his son was dead and now their A, the trader, was dead."

"They spoke rapidly and loudly; they ran from group to group until reached the knot of hunters about Rickman, smoking his tobacco but contemptuous of a man who had been driven out of his lodge. The day of how Shaw had spent the waiting for the company trader to return had been about. All they had watched Rickman, dealing their contempt and wonder because he gave them tobacco. Shaw was dead and they kept wonder about that to themselves as well. This company trader did not meet their eyes. He shied quickly when he heard of Shaw's death but he did not look them."

"Then, after a time, he began to He was their friend, he said. The little trader was dead, he would not lack a fort for trade. He would welcome them to his house, they would find his hands full of his heart generous. . . . But he picked his lips as he said these things and looked continually at and down the lake as a hungry will look and soon afterward out in his canoe and started the company post."

"Conrad Rich had put in a day of erate suspense. His mind accommodated to figures and thoroughly portable only when concerned figures, had been whipped to frenzy by the multitude of fan-happenings since last night."

It did no good. Her heart's beating crowded her throat, her blood's roaring was loud in her ears. Walking did no good, and she ran again. So, just as he settled himself in the stern, to Basile's ears came a strangled hail, his name, the admonition to wait.

"We cannot wait!" he called. "Shaw has been shot down. We go!"

"Where? When?"

"She was in the water, to knees, grasping for the moving canoe."

"Yonder! If he lives, he has lain alone since noon. We go to—" "I go . . . with you!" she sobbed, all but collapsing into the canoe.

"Ours!" Basile growled, and the four blades caught the water in unison.

Good men at the paddles; the best the fort boasted, with Basile at the steering oar, goading them on.

Annette's hands were clenched in her lap, her face white, and, rousing after a time, she stared ahead, un-mindful of the occasional slap of spray which came scudding past the men to drench her face. On they went into the sunset, into the cool of evening.

Basile had called the stroke and barked for speed. Shoulders and backs and arms worked in swift cadence; the canoe leaped and lunged on its way. But it was not enough.

"Faster!" the girl called suddenly, half rising to her knees, throwing a look of appeal upward at the startled Basile. "Faster! He may be yet alive but dying for want of your speed!"

And the backs bent further, the arms swept harder; they boiled on their way. They grunted under the strain to which she forced and held them.

In the stream, though, they slowed their stroke, groping through darkness, cautious of snags and shallows. A deer splashed from the Committee is planned for early January and at that time we desire to have ready all applications so that all people of this county who desire help in purchasing farms will have the same opportunity to have their proposition considered. No applications will be accepted for consideration after January 10, 1938. Funds allotted for loans in Chilton County will finance purchases of between five and ten farms as authorized in this year's program. After the quota of loans are approved, no additional loans can be made until funds are made available by Congress for the next year's program which begins July 1, 1938.

"We have many applications on hand now and more are coming in every day," states Mr. Durbin. "Information and necessary application forms may be secured from the offices of the Rehabilitation Supervisor located in the Potts building, Clanton, Alabama." Rehabilitation offices will be open Wednesdays, and Saturdays from 8:00 A.M. until 5:00 P.M., to accept applications and explain the program. County Agents have been provided with necessary forms and will assist local applicants.

Mr. Durbin stated that at this season the most important work of his office is assisting Rehabilitation farmers to make our practical Farm and Home Management plans and in advising them in their farming and home operations in connection with standard rehabilitation loans.

Those loans are made to farm families—whether on their own land or as tenants on rented land—who are unable to secure proper credit from other sources to make a crop or to purchase needed livestock and equipment.

LISTER HILL

accepting appointment to dedicate eleven monuments erected by the government of the United States in homage to those soldiers who rest on the battlefields of France and Belgium.

In his remarks of criticism Mr. Hefflin said that Congressman Hill "went over to Paris" just to see the unveiling of "some monument over there" and to learn the "Big Apple." Legionnaires and members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars over the State have resented the slurs and insinuations made by Mr. Hefflin, and some have, in written declarations, denounced Mr. Hefflin for his utterances recalling that Mr. Hill accepted the distinguished honor to represent the Congress of the United States and the President at the dedication of the eleven monuments. Mr. Hill, it was recalled, was appointed along with the National Commander of the American Legion, the National Commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Ranking Official of the World War Commission, the Ranking Officials of the Disabled Veterans Association, the distinguished Southerner, Josephus Daniels, war-time Secretary of the Navy, and General John J. Pershing.

While Mr. Hill continued to run on his record of achievement, Mr. Hefflin was running from his record. While he spoke in vague terms of his friendship for the farmers of Alabama, Mr. Hefflin failed to deny that it was his vote that lost the resolution that would have limited the tariff bill—and that his vote opened the way for the "iniquitous Smoot-Hawley tariff law."

After Congressman Hill "read the record" on Mr. Hefflin and recalled his many delinquencies and how he fought measures of interest to the South and other major projects like Woman Suffrage, about which he said, "I think that every man who favors it (Woman Suffrage) ought to wear a dress," the ex-senator has stumped the State in an effort to stem the tide.

Congressman Hill and his supporters pointed to his record as "a record of achievement" based on performances, "not promises." With only three weeks left before election day, keen political observers are almost unanimous that Congressman Hill will win over the former senator by a margin of landslide proportions.

to take part in the 1938 tournament. Sponsored by the English Department of which Prof. J. R. Rutland is head, the tournament this year will include new contests in library procedure, machine shop work in the industrial art and manual training division, and violin competition in the music division.

A new feature of the dramatic contest will be the separation of competition between the larger high schools of the state and the smaller ones.

Students and faculty members who attend the tournament will be entertained in the cottages of the new State Camp on the South Campus. Accommodations will be available for more than 500 visitors.

An eight-page bulletin giving full information concerning the tournament is now in process of publication. Copies will be forwarded to all high schools before the Christmas holidays, said Dr. Gosser.

Less Monthly Discomfort
Many women, who formerly suffered from a weak, run-down condition as a result of poor assimilation of food, say they benefited by taking CARDUI, a special medicine for women. They found it helped to increase the appetite and improve digestion, thereby bringing them more strength from their food.

Naturally there is less discomfort at monthly periods when the system has been strengthened and the various functions restored and regulated.

Cardui, praised by thousands of women, is well worth trying. Of course, if not benefited, consult a physician.

McDonough Street, and Samuel S. Bowden, clerk at Hill Store. Turner, who was at the wheel, died instantly and Bowden, who was in the front seat with him, died a few minutes later.

The injured were Jesse W. King, meat cutter of 402 South Decatur Street, and George Farrow.

King was in Fitts Hill Hospital suffering with a badly lacerated left hand and ankle, and nose. Attending physicians said there was a possibility that his back had been injured also but that nothing definite could be determined pending further examination.

Farrow was reported to have been taken to a hospital at Clanton for treatment of severe bruises and lacerations. Both King and Farrow were seated in the rear of the car when the accident occurred.

A Spigener ambulance was summoned and brought the men to Clanton, where Farrow was placed in the hospital here. The body of Bowden was sent to Columbus, Ala., and Turner's body was sent to Montgomery, according to Spigener's Funeral Home, of Clanton.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

The Nursery, Beginners, Primary, and Junior children of Clanton Methodist Church will come together in the Primary Department for their Christmas program next Sunday morning, December 19th, at the Sunday School hour. There will be a special program for the children, and there will be two Christmas trees—one tree for these departments of our Sunday School, and one tree for the children of our orphanage. Let each member of these departments attend and bring a toy of some description to put on the tree for the children of our orphanage, who will be made happy by our remembering and who merit our every consideration.

If a reader of this announcement has coupons from Octagon soap wrappers, Ballard flour coupons, Lufkin Coffee coupons, and LuZanne tea coupons, remember we can and should give them to our orphanage. Each Octagon toilet soap and Octagon Cleanser coupon counts two.

The box to receive the White Christmas gifts for the orphanage will be in the vestibule of our church December 19.

Remember our children of our orphanage in every way you possibly can. Let's do all in our power to make their Christmas a merry one.

Summoned for speeding in Chicago, Robert Morrison drove to his home in Iowa and telegraphed: "Can't appear. Sudden illness. Guilty."

toys are built to represent modern modes in automobiles, trucks, games, etc., and it is amusing to watch the number of elderly people playing with the toys in the various stores here. It would appear that the youngsters whom Santa brings these toys to will have trouble with the grown-ups when time comes to play with the mechanical toys.

A chat with heads of some of the larger stores in Clanton brought out that their stocks of the nicer gifts are dwindling fast. That, they stated, is due to the attractive prices on such items this year.

Despite the fact that during the early part of the month it seemed Christmas shopping would be late this year, it is certainly well underway this week and the smart person will get that gift list to Clanton right now and get it completed.

L. C. REYNOLDS IS VICTIM OF ACCIDENT HERE

Son Of Former Probate Judge Laid To Rest In City Cemetery Sunday

Chilton County paused in sadness last Saturday when the news of the sudden death of Lewis Claude Reynolds, age 47, son of former probate judge L.H. Reynolds, became known. He was killed almost instantly Saturday morning when caught between timber work and a moving tractor which he was operating at the gravel pit used by the county, located east of Clanton.

The deceased was a native of this county and a member of one of the prominent families of Alabama. He was a member of the Clanton Methodist Church.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at two o'clock at the Clanton Methodist church. Services were conducted by the Rev. J.M. Truett, pastor of the church and Dr. S.J. Ezell, pastor of the Clanton Baptist Church. Interment followed in the Clanton cemetery with Martin & Sons directing. The large number attending the rites and the many beautiful floral offerings attested to the popularity of the deceased.

CHRISTMAS SINGING WILL BE HELD AT FRIENDSHIP CHURCH

The News has been requested to announce that a Christmas singing will be held at the Friendship church, east of town, on Friday night beginning at seven o'clock.

The public is cordially invited to come and join in the singing of religious songs and Christmas carols.

RAMSEY RETURNED FROM TAX STRUCTURE STUDY

Montgomery, Ala.—W.W. Ramsey, associate member of the state tax commission, returned from an extended tour of a two weeks study of tax structures. At Atlantic City Mr. Ramsey attended the national convention of tax commissioners. He reported Alabama's tax structure compares favorably with her sister states and that sentiment was strong among convention delegates for consolidating revenue systems to eliminate duplication and reduce costs. Alabama has more than two score sources of revenue.

Music Appreciation Club Presents Brilliant Musical Program Recently At The City Hall

On the afternoon of December 14th at the City Hall Auditorium the Music Appreciation Club of Clanton observed "Alabama Day" and "Federation Day" with a splendid program.

The guest artists were Mrs. Florence Golson-Bateman of Wetumpka, one of Alabama's well-known composers and Miss Louise Rogers of Spigner an accomplished pianist, a pupil of Dorsey Whittington, conductor of the Birmingham Civic Symphony Orchestra.

Mrs. A. G. Ruffin was Mrs. Bateman's accompanist.

The program began with a gracious welcome by Mrs. W. M. Polk, Sr., Club president.

Mrs. W. A. Willis gave an interesting and educational address on the history of our state. She stressed es-

December 31 Deadline For Payment Of Taxes

Tax Collector T.L. McKee issued a statement this week reminding property owners of the county that Friday, December 31st, is the last day to pay county and state taxes.

He urged those who have not paid their taxes to pay before that date and avoid extra costs as prescribed by law.

Highway Patrol Makes Two Weeks Reports

Sixteen arrests were made during the past week by Highway Patrolmen Earl Henley and Wallace Waites, who are stationed in this county.

They issued a warning this week regarding the law requiring lights on wagons traveling after dark, and that they were to enforce that law as other laws. They also warned truck drivers about their speed limit and the law requiring trucks to be equipped with flags and flares.

The arrests included 1 no lights on wagon; 3 for speeding; 3 without drivers license; 7 public drunkenness; 1 failing to stop at stop sign; 1 improper brakes; 1 violating flag and flare law; 1 no permit and 1 for driving while intoxicated.

16 DEMOCRATS APPOINTED TO REGION POSTS

Pitt Maner Announces New Appointments Among Young Democrats

Washington, D.C., Dec. 22.—The appointment of 16 regional directors of the Young Democratic Clubs of America and 26 members of the executive committee will be made by Pitt Tyson Maner of Montgomery, Ala., national president, shortly after January 1.

In grouping the states, for administrative purposes, Maner placed Florida and Georgia with Alabama in Region Five. Ed Rivers, Jr., of Atlanta, son of Governor Rivers of Georgia, will be the director for this region, Maner announced.

Maner also announced that Earle B. Mayfield, Jr., of Tyler, Texas, would serve as chairman of the national executive committee.

Every section of the country will be represented in the appointments. Maner announced, on all major committees of the national organization. A conference in Washington with General James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is to be held by Maner early in January on general plans of the organization for activity in 1938, particularly in support of the Democratic nominees for state and national offices.

TWO PRISONERS BIND JAILER, MAKE ESCAPE

Also Take Jailer's Car In Daring Break; Other Prisoners Stay

Two prisoners escaped from the county jail here after tying up the jailer, T.J. Thornton one night last week, while seven other prisoners worked a ruse on Thornton by telling him one was ill and needed a doctor. Thornton went to investigate and was nabbed by the two men, bound with strips of blankets and gagged. One of the prisoners had succeeded in opening a partially closed cell door by using a long stick to push the door open.

They also took the jail keys and Thornton's car keys. After gaining the outside of the jail they used Thornton's car to make their get-away. Later the car was found abandoned near Selma by Highway Patrolmen Julius Smith and Morris Jones. No trace had been found of the escapes as the News goes to press.

The escaped prisoners gave their names as James Wood, alias, Milton Hayes, charged with burglary and Ellis Veyll, a federal prisoner.

EDNA RUTH LOWE HONORED ON TWELFTH BIRTHDAY

Edna Ruth Lowe celebrated her twelfth birthday anniversary Wednesday with a party at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reubert Lowe.

A green and white scheme was noted in the decorations and refreshments. Games and contests were enjoyed and gifts were presented to the honoree. Guests included pupils of the sixth grade and others.

EIGHT ARE ARRESTED FOR PUBLIC DRUNKENNESS HERE

There were eight persons arrested in the county during the past week in charges of public drunkenness, according to records at the sheriff's office. Others committed to arrest were one insane, one violating prohibition law and two for assault. County officers and patrolmen made the arrests.

FORMER CLANTON EMPLOYEE ENDS LIFE BY OWN HANDS

The Montgomery Advertiser carried a story of the death of Sidney Harvey Sims, age 26, last Monday. The article stated that young Sims was found in the bedroom of his home in Montgomery with a bullet wound in his chest, believed to have been self-inflicted. Sims at one time was employed in a Clanton store and had many friends here.

O' Neal Re-elected President Of A F B

Auburn Ala.—Edward A. O'Neal, successful Alabama farmer, has been re-elected president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, Chicago, Ill. for the next two years. He has served as president of the national organization since May, 1931.

Mother Of John C. Page Passed Away Recently

Mrs. Francis J. Page, age 79 years, died at the home of her son, J.C. Page, in Clanton Thursday, December 16, at 10:45. The body was prepared here by Martin and shipped to Nashville, where interment was made in the Spring Hill cemetery.

Surviving are two sons, H.D. Page of Armory, Miss., and John C. Page of Clanton. There is one sister, Mrs. W.S. PuFahl, of Los Angeles, Cal.

Martin Adds Newest Coach To Equipment

J. Mell Martin, widely known funeral director of Clanton, returned Monday from Bellfontaine, Ohio, where he purchased one of the latest and most modern funeral coaches and combination invalid car.

Mr. Martin stated that he has always believed that the people of Chilton County were entitled to just as efficient and comfortable service in his line of business as can be found in the cities. This addition to the Martin Funeral Home brings the newest to Chilton County.

ONE OF OLDEST CITIZENS DIED LAST SATURDAY

The Rev. R. M. Honeycutt Is Laid To Rest; Was Well Known Over County

One of the oldest residents of Chilton County, the Rev. R. M. Honeycutt, passed away at the T.C.I. hospital, in Birmingham last Saturday night following a lingering illness.

He had reached the ripe age of 92 and considered one of the strongest church leaders of the county, having been preaching for over 65 years. He was at one time probate judge of the county and took an active part in political, religious and civic work as long as his health permitted. He was loved by those who knew him and his death brought sadness to many parts of the county.

The body was brought to Clanton by Martin & Sons, funeral directors. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at Pleasant Grove church, near Jewison, where the deceased preached his first sermon as a young man. The impressive services were conducted by the Rev. J.N. Green, the Rev. J.C. Thomas and the Rev. W.S. Cox. Two of Rev. Honeycutt's oldest friends, J.N. Scott and Rufus Holdrich, made short talks, also.

He is survived by one son, Henry, of Birmingham; 3 grandchildren, V.C. of California; H.E., of Birmingham and Mrs. Elsie Holley, of Birmingham and 4 great-grandchildren.

Dr. V. J. Gragg has been confined to his home for several days due to severe cold. His friends express a wish for his speedy recovery.

HILL VICTORY SEEN AS SURE THING IN STATE

Political Observers See An Overwhelming Vote For Candidate

Montgomery, Ala. Dec. 20 (Special) As the Senatorial Race entered its last stages this week keen political observers were almost unanimous that Congressman Lister Hill would win over the former Senator J. Thomas Heflin by a margin of landslide proportions. Last week's kind Congressman Lister Hill in Washington on the job and the Ex-Senator on the stump trying to stem the tide.

Mr. Hill's campaign, thus far has been based upon his record of accomplishments during his tenure of office as Congressman from the Second Alabama district; which office he has held for 14 years, having been elected seven times in succession without opposition. Congressman Hill and his supporters point to his record as a "record of achievement" based on performances, "Not promises."

While Mr. Hill was in Washington working in the interest of the farmers, Mr. Heflin was stumping the State speaking in vague terms of his friendship for the farmers. However, Mr. Heflin, in his speeches, did not deny that it was his vote that lost the resolution that would have limited the tariff bill and that this vote of his opinion.

COLORED SINGERS WILL BE IN CLANTON FRIDAY NIGHT

The County Training School announced Tuesday that group of their singers will visit Clanton on Friday night of this week to sing Christmas carols. These singers have done this in past years and their songs will be remembered well by residents of the city. They are usually well repaid for their singing by fruits, cakes, etc., and their carols will be looked forward to this Christmas.

A Lesson In Victory

Missouri's Kansas City is not unused to celebrating achievement in traffic control. Last year it climaxed its efforts in traffic control by winning the National Safety Council's safest city award for cities of 250,000 to 500,000 population.

Proud as they were of that distinction, Kansas City's citizens recently celebrated what to them was an even greater accomplishment: The close of a year in which no child of school age was killed in a traffic accident. That is a large order in a city of 68,000 homes—how large can be appreciated by harking back to 1926. In that traditionally "norm" year, Kansas City lost 18 children in traffic accidents. That meant the loss of a child life every twenty days. Kansas City saw in this toll a spectacular manifestation of a traffic situation that greatly needed improvement all along the line. The city rolled up its sleeves and went to work.

It was an up-hill struggle, a fight against the odds shaped by mounting automobile registration and mileage, and a growing city. But Kansas City's traffic program, hammering on a broad front, was too soundly executed to be denied. Enforcement, engineering, school safety education, and community adult education were forged into an effective weapon of control. Gradually, traffic conditions improved. Child fatalities went down to 6 a year, then lower. Finally, eight months after the year in which Kansas City won national distinction in traffic control and safety, it attained the goal which it had pursued through eleven years of steady progress: A year without a single child fatality.

Two lessons are to be gained from Kansas City's record. The first is that traffic safety is not a matter of luck, but rather the logical result of a long-term, intelligently planned, effectively administered program.

The second lesson is that any city that wants enough to do what Kansas City has done, can do it.

Working For Community Progress

One of the earliest criticisms of the chain store method of distribution was that the stores took no interest whatsoever in local and community affairs, and mulcted their towns of every possible dollar without giving anything in return.

There may still be some chains which are disinterested in community progress—but they are few in number and small in influence, and it is a safe bet that, unless they drastically change their policies, they are headed for oblivion. For progressive chain store managements—and it is managements of this type which head practically all of the successful chain systems of the country—know full well that to serve the public cheaply and efficiently, important as that is, isn't their sole responsibility. Consequently, they interest themselves in and contribute substantially to local betterment, charity and general welfare activities.

Further, they are major advertisers in local newspapers. They are first-class tenants for local property-owners, and, by paying good rents, help to build up values in a town's commercial district. Their local managers and employees live in the town, pay taxes in it, and are often home owners.

As Roger Babson has said of the chains, "They have brought far more benefits than injury." One of those benefits is their increasing interest in the communities in which they operate, and whose consumers they serve. Each year sees a commendable broadening of chain store activities in the local welfare field.

Billions For Security

During the first nine months of this year, the American people obtained financial security to the tune of almost $7,000,000,000.

This is the amount of new life insurance that was sold in that time, and it marked an increase of more than $400,000,000 over the same period in 1936. Of the 1937 total, $4,271,000,000 is represented by ordinary insurance; a little less than $2,000,000,000 by industrial insurance, and the balance, about $585,000,000 by group insurance.

Altogether, the total life insurance outstanding in this country is well in excess of $100,000,000,000. That colossal sum is a testimonial to the thrift, foresight and economic wisdom of the American people.

New Year's Day

January 1, marking the beginning of the year, has been observed as a public holiday for many centuries, certainly in Rome since the reformation of the calendar by Julius Caesar in the century before Christ.

Owing to the confusion in dates which has resulted from the imperfections of various calendars, which caused skipping of dates at various times, New Year's Day may be said to be merely an arbitrary designation. As late as 1752 the adoption of the Gregorian calendar by England and the American colonies caused a skip of 11 days.

However, regardless of the day designated as New Year's at various times and in various countries, it has been generally observed as a holiday.

The Romans celebrated it with processions, abandonment of litigation and strife, exchanging of visits and of gifts, feasting and merry-making. Early fathers of the Christian church did not approve of these festivities, but recommended that the day be devoted to meditation, scripture reading and works of charity.

But about the fourth century, when December 25 had been agreed upon for the observance of Christ's nativity, New Year's Day, falling one week later, began to assume a sacred character as the anniversary of the circumcision, and as such it still figures in the calendars of certain branches of the church.

Other religious faiths, such as the Mohammedan and Jewish, have their own calendars, with distinctive holidays and festivals, in which their New Year's Day has a corresponding significance to that of Christendom.

Among all it is considered an appropriate day for reviewing the events of the previous year, the making of new resolves and the adoption of plans for the future. It is also the occasion for the expression of good wishes.

A Grand Idea, Mishandled

There are in this country thousands of people who work for as little as $6—and for as much as 60 hours—a week.

To them news that the wage-hour bill has failed to pass is distressing. It also is distressing to millions who get a little more pay for a little shorter work-week. And it is just as disheartening to the employers of this latter group, whose products must compete with the products of the sweatshop operators employing the former group.

All progressive-minded persons have long recognized that if this nation is to survive as an economic unit a floor must be placed on wages and a ceiling fixed on hours, in the manufacture of all good sold competitively in interstate commerce.

That simple objective was what brought the Black-Connery wage-hour bill into being. To that objective there was no important dissent. But the authors of that bill were no content with a definite wage minimum or an hour maximum. They wrote into the bill every imaginable provision, grasping for every conceivable bureaucratic power. As a result, the bill has failed of passage. It now goes back to committee and will have to be rewritten.

A grand idea, a necessary objective, has been mishandled. There is now no chance that mistakes of the past can be overcome this session. Maybe the needful can be done next session. That largely depends on whether certain bureaucrats will forget their own ambitions and remember the needs of the thousands who work over-long hours for too little pay.—Birmingham Post.

We heard about a town recently that had a strong share the wealth club. Then oil was discovered, the people got a lot of wealth, and the "share the wealth" club was disbanded.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

Near sundown on Monday afternoon an influence came over me that I must ride down a road that went to the Southwest of the city in which I lived. In company with my wife we went out for this drive. When about five miles out we passed a little girl on the road and something said to me, "She needs help." On stopping the car and inviting her to ride she ran to us and climbed into the seat with us and began to cry as though her heart would break. Her story was that the school truck driver had left her at the school building and was trying to get home before dark. She had already walked about three miles and had five more miles ahead of her. It was growing dark when I stopped my car in front of her home and she jumped out and ran to her mother who was so anxious about her. Some folks may say that this was just a happen-so, but to me it is more. I have faith to believe that there is an All Wise Eye looking down over the interests of his people and to me God said, "You go down that road. One of my little girls is down that way in trouble." O that men would listen to the whispering counsels of God.

That is an interesting story that we have in the Bible where we read that one night Jacob was out under the starlit sky walking and meditating. All at once something leans out upon him and makes an effort to throw him to the ground. Jacob wrestles with that strong something and so keen is the matched strength that the muscles in his hips give way and the joint of his thigh slips out of socket, and from that hour Jacob "Holds upon his thigh." He is a crippled man. The rest of his life he is to go about maimed and halting. Why did this happen? Was it not because he had done his brother Esau an injury when he had lied to get his father's blessings. This sin had followed him ever since it was committed and now he has to reap its harvest. He was to meet Esau the next day and he was to be crippled before him. Any man who sins against himself and against his fellowman, may expect to be crippled and go halting, limping along toward the end of life's journey. We reap what we sow and when we sin that sin may be repented of, but it leaves a lasting impression on the body, in the mind and in the soul that will make us go limping, halting, for the rest of life.

Near where I lived there was a prominent citizen got into trouble with the courts and to save himself from going to the penitentiary he escaped to the West. A few years after this a body was found buried in the country where this man lived as the body of the one whose name appeared in the Court records and the body was identified as the one who had fled justice. He was buried and the case against him was dismissed. Thirty years after that a letter was received from the man who they thought had been buried for many years saying that he was still very much alive and that while was an old man, yet he wanted to come back and die with the friends of young manhood. He confessed that he purposely had deceived the court and the people of his community but still he wanted to come home and die. Men may sin away the right to liberty and life but there will come a time when the very worst will be willing to face anything that they may lay themselves down in the peace and happiness of childhood. No man can sin and get away with it. He may flee justice for years but sooner or later he is willing to risk his life that he may once more be at peace with God and the world.

For twenty-seven years some negroes lived in a community where they had a part in the killing of an old man in the most horrible manner. They knew of the guilt that was about them but they thought it forever sealed. One day the sheriff drove up to their humble home to arrest them and to charge them with the killing of the old man. For a moment they were dazed and could not understand but they saw that the truth was out on them and then they made a clean breast of the whole matter. One of the old men said, "Boss, you will never know what this old negro has suffered during these years of silence." Even though he was black and ignorant, yet he had a conscience that knawed at his heart strings all these years. If you do not want an eating viper at your hearth you had better refrain from doing something that can not face the light. How many people carry a dark spot in the soul and suffer a hell on earth because of the knowing of conscience.

I shall not mention his name, but one day a man came into my study and told me a story that was enough to convict him in the courts and enough to drive his beautiful consecrated wife from his life. In tears he inquired, "Tell me what I shall do about this?" I knew that he was humiliated and that he was sincere in his repentance. I believed that he would do good after this terrible blunder. I said to him, "You go to your wife and tell her all, 'You have told me, and give her your word of honor that you will never do such a thing again and then keep your word and I have faith to believe that your wife will forgive you and you can be happy again.'" He did this and the next Sunday he and his wife were at church and seemed as happy as bride and groom. When we do wrong it is best

TOOK over that Christmas shopping list of yours.... Now cross off those gifts that come by express and parcel post; those presents from exclusive shops; toys from far-away places; nuts from California; oranges from Florida.... Too bad, you say. Well, that's what you'd probably have to do if there were no railroads.

Without the railroads many Yuletide pleasures would not be yours today.... Folks coming home; sending gifts to friends; choosing delicacies for the holidays—all these are matters of course to you; they are an essential part of your Christmas pleasure. Satisfying your heart's desire with choice selections from far-distant places adds a special zest to your Christmas joy.... And that's what the railroads enable you to do.... they have made this possible for you.

As a citizen of the Central South, and as your neighbor, the L. & N. is glad to play its part in making your holidays more enjoyable. Like any other useful neighbor, it tries to play its part better from year to year—by providing better service, faster freight deliveries, safer and more dependable operation.

So Merry Christmas to you, Neighbor—and a fine New Year!

And, say, next time you have a shipment to make, or a trip to take, remember the L. & N., won't you?

After the news study a closed meeting was held on an important project that is to soon start in the county. Rules, regulations and plans were formulated everything ready by the first of the year. Watch your January County papers.

Cooper 4-H Club

On December 3 Cooper 4-H Club met with Miss Grace and enjoyed a Christmas program. The boys did not have a program, so they were asked to join the girls and enjoy their program. Announcement was made that a special picture for 4-H Club boys and girls would be held at Clanton's New Theater, December 15.

After this the girls went to an adjoining room where Miss Grace gave a very interesting demonstration on Christmas ideas, gifts, and wrappings. Each member learned new ideas for their Christmas giving.

ISABELLA HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB—MET DEC. 18TH

On December 18, 1937, the Isabella Home Demonstration Club met in the Home Economics Department of the High School. A short program on Christmas was given by Mrs. Cooper and Bernice Jones. Due to Miss Grace's absence the demonstration on decorating cookies was omitted. We all hope Miss Grace will be at our January meeting.

The program was planned for the next meeting and plans were suggested for a social to be given in the near future. At the close of the meeting Christmas gifts were exchanged after which cookies were served by Mrs. O. Cooper. The Club watchword was then repeated and the meeting adjourned.

Arson Charged In Selma Blaze

Selma, Ala., Dec. 13.—A man identified as Adrian Baggett, 25, is said to have confessed this afternoon to Tom Hall, state deputy fire marshal, that he set fire to the Dallas Company last night. The blaze destroyed 41 bales, causing an estimated loss of around $1,000.

Baggett is held in jail on an arson charge, it is said. His bond was set at $1,000.

According to the alleged confession, the man is said to have told Deputy Hall, C. E. Stapp, president of the company and Officers Jack Dunlap and William Ware, he was angry at a Mr. Ethridge, compress employee, and threw a lighted match on the cotton. He was enraged, he said, when Ethridge refused to buy a shirt and a pair of shoes he offered to sell.

"He was still sore at 1 a.m. this morning, he said, when he threw the match on the cotton."

Less than a month ago the company suffered a loss of 85 bales of cotton through fire.

Strength During MIDDLE LIFE

Strength is extra-important for women going through the change of life. Then the body needs the very best nourishment to fortify it against the changes that are taking place.

In such cases, Cardul has proved helpful to many women. It increases the appetite and aids digestion, favoring more complete transformation of food into living tissue, resulting in improved nutrition and building up and strengthening of the whole system.

Beautiful Marriage Ceremony Of Birmingham Girl Performed in Clanton Wednesday, Dec. 8th

Smilax, chrysanthemums, palms and cathedral candles in high candelabra decorated the First Baptist Church in Clanton for the marriage of Miss Mary Frank Smith, sister of Dr. and Mrs. Turner Dennis, to Mayfield Ezekiel Slaughter, formerly of Opelika, now of Birmingham, which took place at four P.M., Wednesday, December 8, with a large assemblage of guests witnessing the ceremony.

The Rev. S. J. Ezell read the ceremony which was preceded by a program of nuptial music by Mrs. Jatie Longshore, organist and Mr. Edward Glasscock and Miss Kathryn Foss, vocalists. Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus was played for the entrance of the bridal party and Mendelssohn's Wedding March for the recessional.

Mr. Leslie Wheeler, Birmingham, sang while Mr. Barney Lewis, Bessemer, and Mr. Edward Mullins lighted the tapers.

Mrs. J. Downs, Birmingham, served her sister as matron of honor, and Miss Mildred Ellis, Birmingham, was maid of honor. They were gowned in Dubonnet velvet, fashioned along princess lines, with large puffed sleeves and slight trains. They wore turbans of velvet to match and carried arm bouquets of orchid chrysanthemums tied with orchid satin ribbon.

The bride's train of bridesmaids included Misses Vivian Kendrick, Hazel Pennington, Helen Edmundson, Bessemer, and Miss Frances Moore, Clanton. Their gowns were of blue velvet fashioned with tight bodices, shirred square necklines, bouffant skirts and puffed sleeves. They wore Juliet pearl ears, gifts from the bride, and carried arm bouquets of golden yellow chrysanthemums tied with yellow satin ribbon.

Little Mary Fath Chancellor, Clanton, was flower girl. She was adorable in a blue taffeta colonial gown and carried a colonial bouquet of pink and orchid sweet peas and white rosebuds. Little Don Dennis, nephew of the bride, was ringbearer.

The bride entered with her brother-in-law, Dr. Turner Dennis, by whom she was given in marriage. She was met at the altar by the bridegroom and the best man, James Haley, of Birmingham. The bride was very petite and lovely in her gown of bridal white satin, fashioned with high cowl neck of plaited satin and close fitting sleeves. The skirt was made of tiny zones broadening into a flowing train. The veil of illusion was held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms and a halo of pearls. She carried a

Miss Hattie Porter who is attending

Clanton Methodist Church

Our White Christmas Pageant was well attended last Sunday evening and we appreciate the gifts and the offering, both of which go to our Orphanage at Selma. Each donor can realize that he has helped make the Christmas there a Merry one and the New Year there a happy one.

Next Sunday Christmas will be over, but not the Christmas season. May we all attend Sunday School and church services next Sunday for the worship of the Father of us all.

Clanton Methodist Church heartily wishes the Clanton County News and each of its readers a very merry Christmas.

May you have
The gladness of Christmas,
Which is Hope,
The spirit of Christmas
Which is peace;
And the heart of Christmas,
Which is Love.

Thorsby Institute News

School closed Wednesday at 1:00 o'clock for a two-weeks vacation to begin again at 8:30 Wednesday, January 15.

The Christmas Pageant given on Friday night in the auditorium under the direction of Miss Kathryn Foss was very beautiful and was enjoyed by an attentive audience.

The Annual Christmas tree for the pupils of the boarding department, the town working boys and girls, the faculty and a few others was held Tuesday night in the dining hall. Many presents sent by friends of the school were given after a short program of music.

Miss Onita Klingelhoefer and Miss Ruth Ford expect to drive to New Smyrna, Fla., for the holidays to visit Miss Ford's aunt. Her parents, and her sister and brother are there visiting.

Miss Lois Townsley expect to visit a cousin in Haleyville, Alabama.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Maddox will leave Thursday to spend a part of the vacation visiting her mother at Midland City.

Miss Charlotte Luther and her parents plan to remain in Thorsby during the holidays.

The plans of other members of the faculty are not definite as yet.

Several Thorsby Institute graduates who are attending college are at home for the Christmas holidays. Bernard Adams, who is attending the Bowling Green Business University at Bowling Green, Ky., spoke in chapel Tuesday.

The Thorsby Institute library will be open one day during the Christmas holidays on December 27, from nine to twelve in the morning and from two to five in the afternoon.

Christian Endeavor News

The Missionary Committee of the Christian Endeavor presented an interesting program on "Christmas in Foreign Lands" Sunday night, December 19.

A joint meeting was held afterwards by the Christian Endeavor and B. Y. P. U. for the purpose of bringing gifts which were to be given during the week to the needy and unfortunate in the community. Ruth Primm presided over the very beautiful and impressive service while members of both churches came to lay their gifts at the foot of the lovely tree which stood at the altar. Special music was provided and carols were sung by the congregation.

A dime on which he inscribed his name 43 years ago in Toledo, O., has returned to Silas Pittman at Shelbyville Ind.

CHILTON COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL F.H.A. HOLDS MEETING SAT.

The F. H. A. of Chilton County High School had its regular meeting in the Home Economics building Saturday, December 11. The meeting was called to order by the vice-president, Margaret Allen.

Several business matters were settled then club colors were selected which were green and white.

A program was given on Parliamentary Rules. Articles of dos and don'ts for Parliamentary Procedure were read then a skit was given on incorrect and correct Parliamentary Procedure. The meeting was then adjourned.

4-H Club Work To Be Pushed During 1938

Auburn, Ala.—Plans have been completed for the Alabama Extension Service to place special emphasis upon 4-H club work in Alabama during 1938, announces P. O. Davis, director.

Preparatory to this work, five educational and recreational institutes were held at Oneonta, Auburn, Foley, Enterprise and Tuscaloosa late in November and December. Assistant county agents attended the institutes which were conducted by T. A. Sims, State 4-H Club leader, Auburn, and W. P. Jackson, representative of the National Recreation association of New York.

MRS. FRED BUSBY HONORED WITH SHOWER RECENTLY

Mrs. Fred Busby (Roberta Hicks) recent bride was entertained at an informal tea shower at the home of Mrs. Russell White of Birmingham with Mrs. Willie Weed and Mrs. Russell Milstead as co-hostesses.

The house was beautifully decorated with poinsettias and other holiday suggestions. The color scheme of green and white was used in the refreshments.

Contests were enjoyed by all, with Mrs. Sam Cargo and Mrs. J. W. Shores as winners.

The bride's books were kept by Miss Norma Mann. Fifty guests called during the afternoon.—B'ham Post.

Verbena High School

This week is test week again, and all of the students are hoping they will pass. It's a shame they couldn't be as concerned about their grades every week as they are during test week.

Christmas holidays begin December 23, and school will be resumed January 3. Several class rooms are planning to have Christmas trees, and from what we hear, some "strange" gifts will be exchanged to say the least.

The Junior and Senior English Clubs have come together and drawn names for a Christmas party to be held December 22. This promises to be much fun with plenty of eats, which, as someone remarked, is the main thing.

Each classroom has been selling Christmas seals for the tubercular fund. This is a worthy cause and it is hoped that each student contributed at least a nickel.

It seems that Mr. DuBose has intercepted a private mail route. Not intentionally, of course, but can he help it if he just happens to "come across" a love letter? This is what Mr. DuBose has done and he can tell the world that they are very amusing. So amusing, in fact, that had he known there was to be a radio program in chapel, he'd have had the letter read over the air.

Do any of you happen to like 'possum? If so you might see Bill Barrett, Mary Lou Gaines, Margaret Jenkins, Cecile Lanna and several other of the student body. I understand they went 'possum hunting, but the most they got was one 'possum, several scratched legs and (for Bill) a torn pants leg. Oh, well, what are a few scratches when you're having fun.

Verbena High School is well supplied with artists, judging from the pictures that are making the round these days and strange as it seems, they all seem to be drawn by the same two or three girls with such identifying marks as pocket-books, George Washington buckles, and curls. If anyone can identify these artists, excuse me, cartoonists, I expect the pupils and teachers will be very glad.

All the school, including Tommie Leah Robinson, are glad that Dewell Jones is back in school after a week's illness.

We are sorry that Margaret Eiland is confined to the hospital following an appendicitis operation. We wish for her a speedy recovery.

Goode Is Checking Food For Poisons

R. J. Goode, state commissioner of agriculture and industries, has written all "manufacturers and dealers of food, drinks and drugs for human consumption" asking them to cooperate with state and federal agencies to determine if the solvents being used in foods, drinks and drugs contain poisons and dangerous ingredients.

"It has been found that there are a large number of solvents containing anywhere from 10 per cent to 100 per cent diethylene glycol,—the deadly poison responsible for the so-called sulfamide deaths—being sold under various trade names which do not indicate in any way the poisonous and dangerous nature of the solvents," says Mr. Goode.

"These solvents are being used in the manufacture of various food products, such as flavoring extracts, candies, ice cream, bottled drinks, pickles, cakes, wafers and other foods used for human consumption," he continues. "It is not known to what extent these solvents are being used, nor whether or not they are causing a great deal of damage, but it is certain that the continued use of any considerable quantity of such a poison as contained in these various solvents will seriously and probably permanently injure various human organs."

"We wish to warn manufacturers using such materials of the possible danger in placing any solvents containing appreciable percentages of diethylene glycol, carbital or other poisonous substance in human foods, drinks or drugs without knowing the proper proportions which may be used without detriment to human health."

Employment In State Continues To Grow

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 21.—The business recession in Alabama continued to be reflected in total placements by the Alabama State Employment Service during the week ending December 11 according to statistics made public today by J. G. Duncan, Jr., Director. Total placements showed a decrease of 44 from the preceding week. Placements in private jobs decreased 103 while placements in public works and security wage jobs increased 59.

In the week ending December 11, 288 persons were placed in private employment compared with 391 the preceding week. Public works jobs were found for 253 persons the past week compared with 219 the preceding week, while 26 were placed in security wage jobs last week compared with only one the preceding week.

At the close of the past week 73,475 persons had active applications in the file of the employment service. At the close of the preceding week the total number of active applications was 71,458, showing an increase of 2,017 for the past week. The number of new applications the past week showed a decrease of 498, the total for the week being 1,680 compared with 2,178 the preceding week.

Jefferson maintained its lead for total placements the past week. In that county jobs were found for 83 persons with 57 given private jobs. Mobile was second with 63, of which 44 went to private jobs. Montgomery was third with 59, all but 10 being in private jobs. Etowah and Cullman tied for fifth place with 41 each. Twenty-five placements in Etowah were in private jobs. An unusual fact is that every placement in Cullman county was in a public works job.

Other counties among the ten highest for the past week were: Tuscaloosa, 36, with 25 in private jobs; Dallas, 33, with 26 in private jobs; Madison, 27, all being public jobs; Jackson, 21, all being public, and Talladega, 18, only four being private jobs.

SINGING AT MT. NEBO

There will be a singing at Mt. Nebo Church next Sunday afternoon, December 26. Singing will begin at 2:00. Everyone is cordially invited and be sure to bring your newest song books.

Let's Help HEFLIN Kill the Wage-Hour Bill

THE greatest single issue in the campaign for the U. S. Senate is the Wage-Hour Bill.

This bill was written by selfish Northern interests to benefit themselves and harm the South.

Hefflin is against this bill.

So is almost every other Southern Senator and Congressman except Lister Hill. Hill is for it. He was one of only two Alabama Congressmen, who only a few days ago, signed a petition to bring this bill to a vote.

Hefflin says this bill will seriously hurt every man and woman in our state—especially farmers, workers, merchants and small businesses. And here is why:

- It will compel every farmer to pay more for what he buys—fertilizer, farm machinery, tools, clothes, food, in fact everything he uses.
- It will cause farm help to leave the country and go to the big cities.
- It will injure every little industry in small towns—cotton mills, gins, compresses, planting plants, creameries, saw mills and all kinds of plants.
- It will make a machine out of every free born citizen.

LET'S HELP HEFLIN KILL THIS BILL

the canoe struck the sand and it was Annette's foot that first trod the plank.

"Rodney?" Her voice, that, pitched and shrill, like the cry of the hurt bird. It made the men start. "Rodney?" Oh, Rodney! Her call caught in a sob as she went forward, and then she stopped. "Here! Basile!"

She was on her knees beside him, they pressed about her, her palms his cheeks.

"Rodney! Rodney! We have come! you not hear? . . . Oh, he's dead!"

She sat there, feverishly chafing his wrists as the remains of fire found, as lucky breaths blew into the ash-covered coals. Shaw turned his head and moaned wily.

"We cannot all return with him," she mumbled.

"Return? With him?" Annette, busy with Shaw's shirt, questioned in contempt. "When the look in him is duller than the look was in the fire? You'd carry the coals back to the fort to blow the No. . . Here! I know. From the aunt, I have learned much."

She taught them much, those aged and bungling men. They fought blows and built a bed. They carried robes from the Indian cave to cover it.

They pegged a blanket to the ground and secured its other edge. A pole held lashed to two saplings shelter him; on the opposite side the fire they raised and the blanket to throw the heat against his back. This much they knew how to do.

Shaw's legs were rolled into the fire to warm at Annette's order, his legs and moccasins stripped off. Her hard hands set to chafing his feet as cold as the flesh of the dead. But he was not dead; not from time to time he moaned wily.

Carefully, tenderly, Annette wiped the bloodied shirt from his face and bared the gaping wound on his back and his companion close where neck and chest joined.

She straightened, still on her knees. A hand went within her bosom, in against her bosom. Her fingers twined and she tugged, ripped out tatters of soft cloth, soft and warm from washing, clean and dry from the clean, warm body.

She pressed them against the wounds, holding them close, calling to him that she would stay the long life, that she had arrived in time for an hour she sat so, Shaw's head in her lap, pressing the cloth that had been her garments against the bleeding wounds. Then, satisfied, she bound them close and hid him to his back.

Heated stones were wrapped in cloth and placed at his feet and his sides; the fire was kept going with meticulous steadiness. At first he was restless, mumbling, trying to turn, to shove himself erect, Annette called out to him, held close, telling him that to move would start the bleeding afresh. He had no evidence of hearing, of understanding, but sank back and at a time slept heavily.

When she remembered much from the heedless days when life was so and there was no death; when old aunt went about, caring and loving, and muttering betimes because a girl's thoughts could only be right, inconsequential affairs. Annette that must have been; another she so heedless. It was she, Annette, her true self, who had remembered what, tonight, stood her men dead!

Two men put out for the fort to get a tent and blankets and utensils and the dozen other items which were demanded.

He delivered orders, whispered lengthily to Basile. When they were gone Basile, turning to her, said, "Ma'm'selle must rest. I will watch."

"Rest?" — startled. "Oh . . ."

— contemptuously as though she were the least important item in the stars.

She did not rest. She moved away from the shadows. She was gone long and Basile, bending to peer beneath the shelter, saw her on her knees under the birches, face up, lips moving as she begged and . . .

CHAPTER X

— now, of desperate watching the that pallet about which hovered the shadow of death.

Shaw was up, sheltering Rodney, his wide to the fire. Another was pitched for the men and stores but Annette, when she slept on robes beside the . . .

"But wait!" . . . Here, mademoi-

From the moment she stumbled on Rodney there in the darkness, she had assumed command.

She arranged the camp, she announced the routine. Never before had those engaged taken orders from a woman; but never, also, had they encountered a woman such as this.

She did not direct them to do this or that without reason. She demonstrated that for such a task she was far better equipped than they, and they obeyed without dissenting look or word.

Old Basile, when not thinking about his unconscious master, pondered deeply in his simple way at this girl. She had come to them from the company fort. From no other place could she have come.

She had run along the lake shore and insisted on being brought here to serve Shaw when, the last time he had seen her, she was lavishing her arms and lips on Burke Rickman! It was too much for the old fellow to fathom and he did not have in him the impulse to ask of her the questions which would relieve his perplexity. So long as she was of aid to Shaw, he was satisfied.

She sent men into the forest searching for the herbs her midwife aunt had used. Leaves and stalks to be cooked to pulp and bandaged over the gaping wounds in Shaw's flesh.

Quietly, he lay there. Now and again, at first, he moaned. Occasionally his eyes would open and his brows gather as though he struggled with some complicated problem. He licked water, dropped from a cup to his lips, with growing greediness, and that was his first word.

"Water!" — faintly, but with desperate need.

"Ever!" Annette moaned, looking hard at Basile and helpless appeal was in her eyes.

"Ever follows wounds," the man said and shrugged slowly, in something of a shudder. "It's upon Rickman one would wish fever!"

"Rickman!" The name, repeated in that strained echo of Shaw's voice, was startling.

His eyes were open, he frowned upward blankly and his fingers worked, worked . . .

"Rickman!" he said in a high pitched monotone. "They're my hunters, it's my trade. You can't have any of them, any of it, Rickman! You're a braggart, Rickman, but you've parts. You're no fool, you've eyes and ears and wit! But . . ."

But . . . — trying to rise as Annette on her knees, arms about him, strove to prevent the struggle which set him panting. "But it was that vixen behind you!" he screamed. "I told my secrets to her and she told . . . I tell you . . . Let go . . . Let me go, Rickman, or I'll send your heart, smoked and cured, back to Asior himself!"

"Water, for the spring!" Annette said to Basile.

She stroked Rodney's brow soothingly and he smiled, closing his eyes.

"Crooks gave . . . me . . ." His voice was only a murmur. "Crooks . . . black feather . . . Crooks said . . . said . . . Crooks gave it to me, Rickman . . . As a jest . . . But, Rickman, I've held it!" — pawing weakly at the blankets. "I've held the black feather against your damned company! . . . They can't . . . take it from me . . . He didn't know . . . his jest stood for . . . surrender . . . Where'd it . . . go? Where'd I . . . put . . ."

He struggled to sit up, searching his bed, and Annette, slipping a hand into her bosom, brought out, folded in thin cloth, what remained of the black feather she had picked from the sand at Mackinac after Shaw's arrest.

"Here, Rodney!" — breathlessly. "You have the black feather. Burke Rickman hasn't taken it! We'll keep it safe . . . safe for you, Rodney! See? It is here!"

Something in the nature of a smile twitched at his cracking lips as she thrust the feather into his hands. Fingers closed on it; he relaxed the strain.

Within the hour, then . . . She gave Basile minute directions for the preparation of other foods, naming the days when Rodney might taste the flesh of fowl and have fish. She told him what to expect by way of good sign and bad in his condition.

"I will be near for a few days," she said, "if he should not grow steadily strong . . ." She did not finish that. Her lips trembled and she turned away.

She embarked, with Jacques and another in the canoe but as they prepared to shove off Basile ran back and whispered a delaying word.

"But wait!" . . . Here, mademoiself. "I found this 'in his blankets. It was yours. I saw you give it to him to quiet his fever. . . . Strange creatures, women. She'd taken the remnant of a black ostrich plume from her bosom and pressed it into Rodney's hand. It must be something of value, to be carried so. It had served its purpose. It should be returned . . ."

Annette took it with an odd smile and turned her face away. The canoe slid out into the current . . . Shaw roused and drank a more generous portion of broth and smiled at Basile.

"What happened?" he asked. "Just what . . ."

The other told, piecing the tale together as well as he could from the time the fabricated story of Rickman's flight to Black Beaver was spread until they found him there.

"The mademoiselle took command," Basile said gravely. "She gave the orders; she . . ."

He stopped as Shaw turned his face away. "Has she gone?" he asked. "Yes. While you slept. She went . . ."

"Then she is wholly gone. We will not even speak again of her."

And so at Fort Shaw a woman slept in the trader's bed, slept long and heavily and awoke still weary. Her boatmen were summoned from their island and brought within the enclosure. Jacques took command and tended her solicitously. Had she not saved the life of his idol? His trader who had humbled even his mighty back on the portage?

Basile came on the second day, staying but briefly to secure needed articles.

Yes, he reported, Shaw was stronger. He had a great hunger, now. His smile flashed through a set perplexity. He was uneasy, anticipating the time when Rodney would demand that they bring him here. He did not want him to find the woman here, but said no word of leaving.

A great lethargy settled upon Annette. She had no hope; she was hurt and bruised beyond hoping. Neither did she have resentment because, she reasoned, nothing that she ever could do would offset the injury she had brought to Rodney.

So Basile stayed. Not because he loved lived in her heart, she told herself, but because she was inexpressibly weary and the thought of embarking for the long homeward journey—with nothing for her when she reached her destination—was too much to face.

Each daily canoe linked the trading post with the camp where Rodney Shaw recuperated. He had been sitting up, came the word; he had stood on his feet, later. He had walked a few steps. He was eating as a man should eat . . . Basile came, an uneasy light in his eyes.

"The trader may return any day," he said, watching her face.

"What delays him, Basile?" she asked pointedly.

"My firmness. I plead and argue. I invent delays. For a week he has been going about from lodge to lodge, gaining strength rapidly but, as well, gaining impatience to return here. I must prevent that return until . . . until the place is as he left it . . . But, mademoiselle!" — quickly, when she saw a shadow from a blow. "He has forbidden a man of you. Such a man! One does not know . . . One knows he is in your debt . . . One feels he should not think such thoughts . . . But what does one do?"

Yes, what did one do? Too long in the forest, this Basile, to determine the strategy which would have brought him and these others peace. He was in distress. He knew the hotness of young blood should not frustrate the longings of young hearts. But how to arrange such matters, how to temper prejudice and arrange better understandings, he did not know.

A word to her would have sufficed: the repetition of Shaw's declaration that he had seen her cloak in Burke Rickman's quarters, and way to the goal would have been achieved. But he had not the fineness of perception, the insight into the complexities of youth to realize that. He was accustomed to obey Shaw's orders. Shaw had banned talk of the girl. He could not reason behind that command. On such disabilities, at times, do destinies hinge . . .

Slowly, as one in physical pain, Annette made her final preparations for departure. She prolonged each small operation as one will when loath to leave a place behind and it was near dusk when she finished and closed the small chest and with a deep sigh tossed her head.

She turned, then, to Rodney's table and, taking ink and quill and paper, sat for long, writing slowly, painstakingly, weighing each word she inscribed. Finished, she folded the paper and left it there and, (Continued in Next Issue)

Reporter Pays $13.95 To Talk With Senator Dixie Graves Of Ala.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—A New York reporter who talked $13.95 worth over long-distance to Senator Dixie Graves of Alabama reported to his readers the next day that "it was worth it."

The columnist, Cal Tinsley of the New York Post, made a 1,500 word article out of his $13.95 talk. It was printed also in The Philadelphia Record and other eastern newspapers as a feature entitled "She's Easy on the Eyes."

"And she is just as charming to talk to as she is to look at," Tinsley said when his long-distance call brought him the interview that he had failed to obtain one day as he sat in the Senate press gallery and watched the Alabama senator in action.

Her speech against the lynching bill was a remarkable contribution to Senatorial debate and distinguished her as an able participant in national matters, the columnist added.

Senator Graves likewise has come into the attention of the two famous Washington columnists, Robert S. Allen and Drew Pearson, authors of "Washington Merry Go Round." To them she is not "another woman senator" but a first-rate addition to that body and capable of a vigorous and effective role.

The appointment of Senator Graves on the Senate's education and labor committee gave to her an additional senatorial recognition at this term since it is the committee handling the wages and hours bill, chief subject of the special session.

SPEAKS ON PEACE

Peace societies are preparing to ask Congress for speedy action on the resolution of Senator Dixie Bibb Graves of Alabama to take the profits out of war.

Her measure—the first she introduced after taking her seat in the Senate—does not overlook American preparedness.

"Our national preparedness will tend to deter others from jeopardizing peace by being aggressive toward us," Senator Graves' resolution reads. But it adds:

"The United States and its people devoutly wish to maintain peace with all other nations and peoples. That devout wish is such that we will never jeopardize peace by being aggressive toward others. The elimination of every profit element from war will remove temptations thereto both from within and without."

To accomplish the non-profit objective, the proposal by the Alabama Junior Senator offers the resolution that Congress enact legislation "that will provide for the immediate draft by the Government, when war exists or is imminent, of any or all men, women, money, material, and any or all other resources during the time of the Nation's need."

The resolution was referred for action to the Committee on Military Affairs of which Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas, is chairman.

CAPITOL TO CLOSE

Montgomery, Ala.—The State officially begins observance of the Yule holiday season at noon Thursday, December 23, the capitol not to open until Monday. For New Year's the capitol will close on December 30 and reopen January 3, thus permitting employees who are financially able to make the Rose Bowl trip with the Crimson Tide.

It is but natural that as we approach the Christmas Season our thoughts should turn to our customers whom we like to regard as our friends.

For it is they who have made possible our more thorough enjoyment of this wonderful season. It is they who through their continued support and loyal cooperation, many of them over a period of our entire existence in Clanton have contributed to our success.

To you, therefore, as a loyal customer and as a friend as well, we say "Thank You."

We wish for you and yours a Merry Christmas and a New Year full of health, happiness and prosperity.

BAKER 4-H CLUB NEWS

Miss Grace and Mr. Ivey met with the Baker 4-H Club girls December 1, in a joint meeting. A Christmas program was given. Greetings were read from the 4-H Club leaders. Fressia Lee Culpepper read the greetings for the girls and A.J. Chasteen read the greetings for the boys.

Mr. Ivey presented calendars and circulars to club members and explained the picture show which will be in Clanton December 15, at the New Waldsonian Theater. Mr. Ivey entertained the club members with a few number tricks. Miss Grace gave an interesting reading. After the program the groups separated and club business and work was attended to. Our president moved away and our vice president took her place. The girls re-elected a vice president, Ethel Culp.

Miss Grace gave 4-H club girls recipes to cook by before next meeting. At the close of the meeting the club members had their pictures taken. We adjourned to meet again January 5th.

Wedding Of Miss Newell To Mr. McKinstry Is Among Outstanding Social Events Of Season

The marriage of Miss Helen Patricia Newell, daughter of Mrs. John Ottis Newell and the late Mr. Newell, to Mr. John O. McKinstry of Birmingham was impressively solemnized at 5 P.M. Friday, December 17, at the home of Judge L. H. Reynolds in the presence of an assemblage of relatives and friends.

The living room, library and dining room were garlanded with southern smilax, and lighted by myriad cathedral candles. Urns of brides roses and altar lilies adorned each room. An improvised altar was made before the large fireplace in the living room and was banked with woodwardia fern and smilax, silhouetting three tall seven-branch candelabra burning cathedral candles. Wrought iron standards on each side of the altar held ascension lilies.

The altar candles were lighted by Honorable Grady Reynolds and Omar Reynolds, uncles of the bride, after which a program of nuptial music was rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Percy McGraw Pitts, the latter singing "With You In My Arms," by Mildred White Wallace, and "All For You." The traditional wedding march was used for processional and "Just A Song At Twilight" was rendered softly during the ceremony.

Attending her sister as maid of honor, Miss Mary Cornelia Newell was gowned in an advance spring model of dusty blue crepe, and carried an arm bouquet of Joan Hill roses tied with apricot taffeta ribbon.

Judge L. H. Reynolds, grandfather of the bride, who gave her in marriage, escorted her to the altar, where she was awaited by the groom and Joseph McKinstry, who served his brother as best man. The bride was lovely in a grey wool costume suit trimmed with caracul, with which she wore dubonnet accessories. She carried a bouquet of purple orchids showered with lilies of the valley, and tied with white satin ribbon. The double ring service of the Methodist Episcopal Church was read by Dr. A. M. Freeman, uncle of the bride. The bride and groom knelt on a white satin preix dieu for the occasion.

Judge and Mrs. L. H. Reynolds entertained at a reception following the ceremony, supper being served. Mrs. L. H. Reynolds, grandmother of the bride wore a black crepe dinner dress with blue sequins trimming the sleeves, and a corsage of pink rose and valley lilies. Mrs. Newell wore a jacket of dusty pink lace with corsage of Joanna Hill roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. J. A. McKinstry, mother of the groom, was in wine velvet with corsage of rubrum lilies. Mrs. J. A. Duncan, sister of the groom, wore a bottle green velvet dress with gardenia corsage. Assisting the hostess, were Mrs. Grady Reynolds in blue taffeta with bolera of gold sequins, Mrs. Julius Caldwell Burnett in black velvet, accented with gardenias, and Mrs. Omar Reynolds, wearing green moire, gold trimmed.

The bride's table was centered with a tiered wedding cake, crystal candelabra held white tapers and low crystal bowls were filled with brides roses and lilies of the valley. A silver bowl of brides roses and lilies of the valley adorned the buffet.

Later in the evening Mr. McKinstry and his bride, left for a wedding trip after which they will be at home in the Martha Stuart Apartments, South Perry Street, Montgomery, where Mr. McKinstry has a business connection with the Alabama Power Company. The bride attended Huntingdon College and possesses much beauty and charm. Naturally, she is descended from the Thompson and Reynolds families, who are prominent in political and social circles of Central Alabama. Paternally she is descended from the Rowe and Wise families, pioneers of Tallapoosa County.

John is a graduate of Phillips High School, he later attended Auburn where he studied engineering.

Out of town guests included Dr. and Mrs. A. M. Freeman, Miss Miriam Freeman, Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Newell, Misses Patricia and Anne Newell, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McKinstry, Mrs. Joseph McKinstry of Birmingham, Mrs. J. A. Duncan, Master Pete Duncan of Gunterville, Dr. and Mrs. Omar Burns, Miss Patricia Garrett of Montevallo, Mrs. Ada Pitts of Jacksonville.

ened the way for the iniquitous Smoot-Hawley tariff law.

Reiterating his stand by the National Administration Congressman Lister Hill said this week, "I was a democrat running on that platform last November. I am a Democrat now, and I stand on the Democratic platform. I come to you with no pledges, no commitments, no alliances with any political group or political faction in the State of Alabama."

The Christmas holidays will interrupt the campaign this week. After Christmas the candidate will have seven days of active campaigning before the election on Tuesday, January 4th.

Reynolds Extends Christmas Message

Editor Chilton County News

Clanton, Alabama.

Dear Sir:

Another Christmas will soon be here. The business people and the city official have put on a fine electrical display which speaks well for Clanton and shows that our people are progressive, but I was just thinking that there are many people around Clanton and in our county that will not have a merry Christmas unless they get help from those who have been more fortunate. In fact, I am afraid there are a good many who will not have the comforts of life, much less the gifts that go to make them happy. I hope we can get up a plan and a committee from our Churches in Clanton that will see that no person goes hungry for the necessities of life. I understand that there are some widowed women around here that will suffer unless they get assistance. In fact, I have heard that there are some people around town that are without wood or fuel to make a fire. I have a truck that I will send out and haul wood free to those who are not able to get it if the people who have the wood to spare will let me know. I know times are hard and a great many people are disappointed in business this fall but it will all work in harmony and those who are able will furnish all the employment they can to people without work, we can help the situation.

I wish everybody a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year and I hope all people will leave liquor alone for one Christmas and if they do, I predict, notwithstanding, the hard times and the scarcity of work, that we will have one of the best Christmases we have ever had.

Respectfully,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

December 17, 1937.

MRS. MARY ELLA PATE

Mrs. Mary Ella Pate, 73, died at her residence in Jemison, Monday night, after a lingering illness. Funeral services were held at the residence at 1 P.M. Tuesday. Interment was in Morris Hill cemetery with Rev. N. Green officiating, Spigener directing. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Lillie Breswell, of Brook Haven, Miss. and four sons: Lum Pate of Brook Haven, Miss.; Dewey Pate of Greenville, Ala.; Houston Pate, Jemison; Allen Pate, Jemison.

IN MEMORY OF MR. J. W. THORNTON

Dear Daddy, you've gone,
But not to stay;
No more on earth you'll roam,
We'll meet you some day.
With a bright and happy smile,
Daddy, you're gone for just a while.
I can see your bright face,
And that sad old empty space.
It's vacant for you yet
It is a place that we'll never forget.
That dear sweet song you sang,
Throughout my memories will ring.
The place is so sad,
But we all will be glad
When we meet you in heaven,
To gather around that throne,
Where we'll part never no more.

Dr. C. S. Strock of Verbena, was a recent visitor to Clanton.

Things We Think

Things Others Think and What We Think of Things Others Think

—BILLY SMITH

Editor's Product

When the football squad of the University of Alabama learned of the plan to Rose Bowl for the game of season, Chilton Countians were proud. Jesse Frank Foshee of Clanton, has been making an outstanding reputation as a player with the university and his home town friends hoping he will shine in the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena, Calif. We would like to have made that trip with him from Clanton, but the reason we don't would keep anyone from going. Any rate, we will be content with seeing the game over the radio—it's all for.

Editor's Stunt

In our desk is a copy of "Alabama," News Magazine Of The Deep South. This issue of "Alabama" is printed on kraft paper. However, we intend to contact the publishers of "Alabama" to determine if this type of paper is cheaper. This weeks issue of the news magazine was devoted to the city of Tuscaloosa.

Employment, Unemployment

Tuesday we ran into a representative of the State Employment Service, and on Friday last week we chatted a while with a representative of the Alabama Employment Compensation Commission. And after several hours of asking questions and being told many things, we are somewhat more lost in the fog than ever. Those fellows truly have a job—it's no position, and saw it away they had started a movement to aid the jobless that will tax the nerves of the best. However, we think they will handle the job to the satisfaction of all, provided that the people, and especially those making applications, will give them sufficient cooperation.

Doing Their Part

Clanton has the reputation over the state and in other states as being a most progressive city. Our citizens do all within their power to keep Clanton abreast of the times, or better yet. The recent remodeling of the local office of the Alabama Power Company is another step toward making Clanton a better and better. We congratulate the company, their local manager, T. L. Williams, and his associates on this new and modern office. The next step to be made by a private company to keep up Clanton's record would be the improving of the local Southern telephone exchange. We can't say very far sometimes, but we believe Clanton can look forward to that improvement in the very near future.

Our Subscription

The time is here when subscription payments are due. Rather, that is, of them are due. The News has been carrying one of the largest circulations of any weekly newspaper in the state and would like to keep it. However, the postal rules and regulations require that subscriptions paid in advance and we don't want to have trouble by allowing delinquents to remain on our list.

Next Tuesday

Next Tuesday, January 4th, brings a close one of the most active political campaigns for a single office we have seen in sometime. Congressman Lister Hill and Hon. J. Thomas Hefflin of Charles Williams will be awaiting the final count of votes on their candidacies for United States Senator. From the best sources comes information that Congressman Hill will be the coming out with the largest number of votes. It seems that he will carry the county by a safe margin. All the candidates are running on the Democratic ticket and despite this, we think that a great number of former Republican voters will vote for Hill on Tuesday. Hefflin, in his usual way, is making a great showman, and we like to see him show many of the people of the state fooled a bit in their opinion of the outcome of the election. However, during the past month, we have noted a decided change of opinion and Lister Hill again is soaring in popularity over the state.

LOCAL PARTIES LEAVE TO ATTEND FRAT CONVENTION

The national convention of the Kappa Fraternity which is being held in Birmingham this week, will be attended by Clanton residents. Mr. and Mrs. Saul M. Goldstein left Friday and Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Levine left Saturday. Myron, left Tuesday. They will remain in Birmingham through Friday night during the convention.

Voters To Name Senator Tuesday

Employment Service Is Set Up

OFFICE WILL BE OPEN ONE DAY DURING WEEK

Cooperation Of Public And Applicants Is Urgently Asked

Office for the representative of the Alabama State Employment Service has been set up in Clanton in the courthouse, according to an announcement made this week.

The representative will be in the office on Tuesday of each week from nine o'clock A.M. until one o'clock P.M. for the purpose of taking applications for employment and also applications from those eligible for unemployment compensation under the laws recently enacted.

It is understood that a person, to be eligible for the unemployment compensation payments, must have paid in, from their wages, an amount equal to sixteen times their weekly pay in any quarter of the past three quarters of 1937.

To be eligible as an applicant for work, a person must show that he has no work to do and in order to conserve time, should be in a position to intelligently give information that is required.

The cooperation of the public and especially the applicants, is urgently asked by the Employment Service. The office will probably be located upstairs in the grand jury room of the courthouse.

J.B. ADAMS LAID TO REST AT VERBENA LAST TUESDAY

Funeral services for J.B. Adams, age 36, of Pratt City, formerly of this county, were held Tuesday afternoon at the Verbena Baptist Church with a large crowd attending from Pratt City and this county.

Services were conducted by the Rev. J.D. Hughes, of Verbena, and the Rev. Adgers, of Pratt City. Interment followed with Spigener Funeral Home conducting.

Pallbearers were Alston Lewis, Oliver Glenn, E.B. Patterson, Fred Noland, C.M. Horton and Loid C. Pinson. The deceased is survived by his widow; four sisters, Mrs. C.J. Patterson, Detroit, Mrs. J.C. Glenn, Mrs. E.B. Patterson and Mrs. E.D. Lewis, of Cooper. Three brothers, B.T. and Macie Adams, of Birmingham and Richard Adams, of Cooper.

HEALTH REPORT SHOWS DROP IN DISEASE CASES

Local County Health Unit Reports Decline Shown Over Entire County

Records of the County Health Department for the year 1937 showed a downward trend in the occurrence of some of the major communicable diseases since the establishment of the Health Unit, it was pointed out today by Dr. S.D. Sturkie, local County Health Officer.

"During the current year," he stated, "the following number of cases were reported: Diphtheria, 15; typhoid, 2; malaria, 4; scarlet fever, 8; tuberculosis, 8; meningitis, 3; pneumonia, 37; syphilis, 26; infantile paralysis, 1, and whooping cough, 6. The most striking decline has occurred in the number of cases of typhoid. In the year 1935 there were 16 cases of the latter and in 1936. The incidence of diphtheria also has decreased, there being 22 cases reported in 1935 and 25 in 1936. The number of cases of tuberculosis has steadily dropped. In 1935 there were 27 cases of the latter reported and in 1936."

Six deaths from tuberculosis, one from whooping cough and eighteen from pneumonia were recorded during 1937.

Dr. V.J. Gragg, who has been confined to his home here due to illness, is able to be out some now. His many friends wish him a very speedy recovery.

Board Of Registrars Meet In January

The Board of Registrars of Chilton County announced this week that they will meet for ten days beginning on January 24th, 1938, for the purpose of registering all persons qualified under the laws of the State of Alabama to become legal voters. The Board is composed of T.L. Lecroy, chairman, W.W. Wingard and C.A. Retherford.

Sometime within the next few days, the qualified voters list of the county will be purged of names of deceased voters and others who have failed to pay poll taxes, etc.

KIWANIANS TO INSTALL NEW OFFICERS HERE

New Committees Will Also Be Named Tonight At Regular Meeting

Tonight marks the beginning of another year for the Clanton Kiwanis Club and the program to be held at the Thomson Hotel will include the installation of new officers for the new year, and naming of various committees. The new officers to be installed are Patterson Hicks, president; John W. Fant, immediate past-president; John C. Page, vice-president and J. Mel Martin, secretary-treasurer.

Directors will be John D. Armstrong, O.T. Dickey, Saul M. Goldstein, Dr. V.J. Gragg, John Hollis, Dr. C.O. Lawrence and Luther E. Little.

A most active year has been recorded by the Kiwanis Club during 1937, according to J. Mel Martin, who also served as secretary-treasurer during the past year. Some of the most instructive and entertaining programs ever held by the club were presented during the year.

The Club is looking forward to a good year of worthwhile activities during 1938 Mr. Martin stated.

Miss Dorothy Sessions, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B.J. Sessions, has been seriously ill with pneumonia at her home here.

BANKS COUNTY OFFICES WILL TAKE HOLIDAY

City Hall Will Also Observe January First As A Holiday

Saturday, January 1st, 1938, will be another holiday for several places in Clanton. The banks of the county will observe New Year's day as a holiday and will be closed.

Judge Smith announced Tuesday that all offices in the courthouse will be closed on Saturday. Mayor C. Fenn Jones advised that the city hall will also observe the New Year's day. So far, no other business establishments have announced they would be closed.

White Girl Accuses Negroes Of Attack

Two negro men were lodged in the county jail here on a charge of attempting to attack a young white girl in Thorsby last Saturday night.

The girl, whose name was not disclosed, stated that the two negroes attempted to attack her near a Thorsby church. Her screams frightened them away, she said. Officers Hicks and Gillespie rounded up two suspects and brought them to Clanton to be held pending further investigation. The young lady is said to have identified one of the men, while both negroes deny the charges.

Evangelist Will Be At Methodist Church

Evangelist L.J. Cooper will preach at the Clanton Methodist Church on Thursday night, December 30th, at seven-fifteen o'clock.

The Rev. Cooper conducted a most successful revival in Clanton sometime ago and brought out large crowds each night by his straightforward and impressive sermons.

The general public is cordially invited to hear Evangelist Cooper next Thursday night.

EDITORIAL

"NOTHING IS IMPOSSIBLE TO THE MAN WHO CAN WILL AND THEN DO"

On Saturday of this week, a new year is born—twelve months to be known as the year 1938. The year 1937 coming to a close this week has brought many problems to most of us; many joys, heartaches, setbacks and progress came to many during the past twelve months. And, we wonder what the New Year will bring.

Business says we are experiencing a recession in trading activity, and business controls the lives of many of us—if we allow it. Yet, somehow, we all seem to get along.

As the New Year rapidly approaches and everyone is anxious for the Old Year to become history, let us look forward, plan and strive to make 1938 a better year than 1937, not allowing unpleasant memories to mar nor place obstacles in our paths leading to better things. We have recovered too many times and surmounted too many obstacles to allow a temporary business recession to obscure our objectives.

Let us not dwell in retrospect but, rather, look forward to the New Year with its abundance of opportunities. There is such a matter as "making" opportunities and then taking advantage of them. Which reminds us of an old saying we picked up somewhere—"The best way around a difficulty is through it."

The News pledges itself to continue its efforts toward those things that are to the best interest of the people of our county; to keep up its efforts in building and boosting our county and carrying out our motto, "Community Interest In Its Editorial Policy Is The Cornerstone of This Newspaper." We have grown bigger and stronger each year. Our size and strength shall be properly used to further the things in behalf of our people during 1938.

Right-Of-Way For Wide Road Secured

Judge J. Lee Smith announced this week that the commissioners court had been successful in securing rights-of-way along the Birmingham highway, preparatory to widening the pavement through this county.

He stated that they had secured practically all the right-of-way needed on the road from Jemison, north to the Shelby county line.

$55,632 SPENT IN COUNTY BY PUBLIC WORKS

Selma Highway Will Add Investment Of More Than $120,000

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 29—Constructive use of work program labor by city and county officials in Chilton County provided $55,632 worth of needed public improvements in projects completed by the Works Progress Administration to November 1. A.P. Morgan, Jr., State Administrator, announced here today.

The completed projects do not include the three-way paving between Clanton and Maplesville, which is one of the largest WPA three-way projects in Alabama. This project, upon completion, will involve an investment of more than $120,000.

The completed projects are the Clanton airport and hangar, involving an expenditure of approximately $21,500, and the county road and bridge project, which involved an investment of approximately $33,900.

A total of 40 new culverts were installed and 35 miles of road were widened, drained and otherwise improved. The WPA investment in the completed projects totaled $19,738.00, while the sponsors reported $35,893.

DR. GOLDNER WILL FILL HIS APPOINTMENTS ON TUESDAY

Dr. M. Goldner, well known ophthalmologist, will fill his appointment in Clanton on next Tuesday, January 4, and every other Tuesday thereafter, as usual.

Dr. Goldner makes his headquarters at the office of Dr. J.P. Hayes, when in Clanton for examination of eyes and fitting of glasses.

Friday Last Day To Pay Taxes Without Penalty

Friday of this week, December 31, is the last day to pay state and county taxes and avoid an extra penalty as provided by law, according to T.L. McKee, tax collector, who urges the taxpayers to avoid this additional cost if possible.

Montgomery, Ala., December 28—Next Tuesday, the voters of Alabama will march to the polls to elect a Senator to fill the vacancy created by the appointment of Senator Hugo Black to the bench of the United States Supreme Court. Seeking the place is Congressman Lister Hill of Montgomery who is running on his record of service made in the past 14 years while he has served the Second Alabama District as its Congressman. Former Senator J. Thomas Hefflin, who is also seeking the place, has based his campaign on promises. While Mr. Hill has been running on his record of service, the ex-senator has been running from his record which has been described as a "zero without a rim around it."

As the campaign entered the final lap this week the candidates were in the field making speeches in behalf of their respective candidacies. Congressman Hill restated his pledge of loyalty to the principles of the Democratic Party and the Democratic Platform and asserted that "in coming to you I come with no pledges, no commitments, no alliances with any political group or faction in the State of Alabama." In speeches Mr. Hill asked Alabamians "to promote me to the Senate of the United States on the basis of my record of service in the House of Representatives." He pledged that "I will serve you with the (Continued to Back Page)"

Census report shows that there were 19,922 bales of cotton ginned in Chilton County from the crop of 1937 prior to December 13, as compared with 16,086 bales ginned to December 13, crop of 1936.

OFFICERS SAY COUNTY HAD A QUIET YULETIDE

Small Number Of Arrests Show Drop In Amount Of Whiskey Sold

Chilton County spent a very peaceful Christmas season this year so far as arrests were concerned, according to county officers.

Only five persons were arrested on charges of public drunkenness during the past week, records at the sheriff's office show. Other arrests made were one for violating prohibition law; 1 attempted assault with deadly weapon; 1 reckless driving; 1 assault; 1 assault and battery; 1 carrying pistol without permit; two attempt to rape. County officers and highway patrolmen made these arrests.

VERMONT LADIES TO MEET AT HOME OF MRS. SANSON

On Monday, January 3, 1938, Miss L. Callan will meet with the Vermont ladies at the home of Mrs. George Sanson. The lesson is to be on "Baking Bread for the Home." It is hoped that a large number will be present at the meeting which will begin at 3 P.M.

On Wednesday evening, January 5, 1938, at 7 P.M., the women will meet as usual at the Vermont Evening School with the men with Mr. G. Holmes as teacher of the men and Miss Callan as teacher of the women. Bring your children with you and we shall all have a good time together.

Taxes And Homestead Exemptions

The following article appeared recently in The Alabama (Montgomery) Journal, in the column of "Under The Capitol Dome" and is one of the best explanations of how the state sales tax and homestead exemptions work in this state:

Extreme care in the selection both of a tenant and a farm will be the watchword this year in the farm tenant program in Alabama, Georgia, Florida and South Carolina, says 50-year-old, farm born, E. S. Morgan, who will direct activities under the Bankhead-Jones act in the four states of this region, where tenancy is more prevalent than any other part of the nation.

Morgan, born in Georgia but an Escambia County, Ala., farmer and lumberman for 25 years, is holding a conference in Montgomery this week with aides from this and other states as time rapidly approaches for the actual purchase of farms and selection of tenants.

With only a comparatively small amount ($10,000,000) available for this year's purchases, leaders in the program realize they must "put their best foot forward" in order to place no stumbling block in the path of increased congressional appropriations in future, which must come if any noticeable progress is to be made in solving the tenant problem.

Morgan's district is already so far ahead of other regions in their preliminary work that Washington officials already have let it be known the first farm under the new act would be purchased in this region, and probably in Alabama.

"Profit" Shown

The small Alabama farmer with an assessed valuation of $2,000 on his property has had his taxes reduced $13 annually by the homestead exemption act but pays only $3.42 each year in sales tax, says State Senator Forney G. Stephens of Oneonta, in an editorial in his newspaper, The Southern Democrat, in which the two inseparable measures enacted by the 1937 legislature are defended.

"A man owns a small farm in a county where the tax rate is $2.10 on the one hundred dollars assessed valuation," says Stephens. "The assessed value of this farm is $2,000. He lives on this farm and operates it with his own labor. His taxes will amount to $42 a year. This is divided as follows:

County Only

"The state's share for general purposes is $5; for old soldiers and their widows, $2; for education, $6; or a total of $13 for the state. The county gets $10 for its general fund, $3 for roads, $2 for bridges, and $14 is collected for education, which makes a total of $29 the county gets for all purposes.

"The state, under its homestead exemption law, has relieved this farmer of all of his state taxes on his farm. So he has $20 to pay to his county, and $14 goes to educate his children and his neighbor's children. Six dollars of the $14 that would have been collected for the state but for the homestead exemption act would have gone to the state educational fund. So the state replaces this $6 from the sales tax, and this, under the minimum program law, comes back to educate his children.

Cotton Farmer

"We will assume that this is a good farmer. He produces his own corn, hay, peas, syrup, potatoes, fruits, and vegetables. He raises his own meat and lard; has his cow that produces all his requirements for milk and butter. He has his chickens that produce his eggs and gives him a fried chicken and a baked hen occasionally. His feed is all produced on the farm.

"He raises about six bales of cotton. The price is low and he gets only about $240 for the six bales. Forty dollars of this is required for fertilizer. His taxes on his farm will take $29. That leaves him only $171 to spend for clothing for himself and family and the things that he could not or did not produce on the farm, and for other purposes.

Tax Small

"He has to buy his sugar, coffee, flour, salt, pepper and a few other things. Oh, yes, there is the sales tax that he must pay on some of the things that he must buy. The sugar, coffee and flour are exempt, and he didn't have to pay any tax on his fertilizer.

"But if he spent all of this $171 for things that were taxable under the sales tax law it would amount to only $3.42 and the homestead law has saved him $13 on his farm.

"By this it will be seen that the small farmer benefits by the enactment of the sales tax law and the homestead exemption law. Do the farmers want these laws repealed? If the sales tax law is repealed the homestead law must go with it."—Alabama Journal.

Lumbermen, And Housing

Those Alabama lumbermen who have been apprehensive at the threat to them that inhered in the original wage-hour bill sponsored by the administration, have reason to rejoice in the certainty that the new Federal low-cost housing bill will become a law immediately after the holiday recess. Their satisfaction should be enhanced by the knowledge that wage-hour legislation has been indefinitely postponed, and is possibly dead. The housing act will be a boon to the lumber industry throughout the nation.

Congressman Hill, candidate for the Senate, in a speech at Anniston, called attention to the significance of the housing plan, particularly from the standpoint of the lumber industry. Congress has resolutely set itself the task of working out a housing bill that will work. It believes that at last it has found the formula. This formula is in the bill that has passed both houses and is now in conference for the adjustment of details. The President will sign it.

Many economists believe that the present housing bill is full of promise, although all recognize that even a perfect housing plan would meet with difficulties. It is certain that a great need exists, it appears that a plan has been evolved that meets the need. If a last Congress has found the right formula the effect of its application should be immediate and in the end far-reaching.—Montgomery Advertiser.

The Passing Veterans

So rapidly are the veterans of the Civil War passing from the earthly scene that the number of survivors on any given date is difficult to determine with accuracy.

This is illustrated by the last quarterly report of the state auditor of Alabama concerning Confederate pensioners, of whom only 126 remained in the entire state. Three months earlier the number had been 141, the deaths in the meantime being 15.

Next April it will be 76 years since the struggle of the Sixties began, and 71 years since its end, therefore few veterans of either side are under 90 years of age. While the Union armies consisted of more than 2,000,000 men, the Confederates numbered not more than 900,000, according to the best estimates.

It is believed that all honorably discharged survivors of both armies are now on pension rolls, the pensions for Confederate veterans being paid by the several states of the South.

L. E. Foster, general manager of the Chamber of Commerce of Birmingham, made the statement recently that 36,000 tourists had come to the city during the past twelve months and that they had spent approximately $50,000. He predicted that tourist travel through the State during the next twelve months would reach 600,000. It is suggested that freeing of toll bridges and the increased paving of highways is largely responsible for this increase in tourist travel through the State.

Alabama farms are producing more lint cotton per acre than the farms in South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Texas and Oklahoma. The highest yield is in California where the estimated yield is placed at 530 pounds per acre. Last year it was 574 pounds. Arizona shows the next highest with 463 pounds. Oklahoma is the lowest with 160 pounds per acre and Florida is second from the bottom with 173 pounds. Texas gets only 191 pounds per acre. Alabama's yield this year is fixed at 284 pounds per acre. Last year it was 236. Last year's cotton crop, figured at 12 cents per pound, would have brought Alabama farmers $28.32 per acre. This year, at nine cents, they are getting $25.56 per acre, exclusive of the seed in both instances.

MORAL ECHOES

D. W. Haskew

My mother was very ill and as she approached the river's edge she called her oldest daughter to her bedside and said to her, "Mary, I cannot stay on this side much longer. I see Jesus on the other side and He is smiling and calling for me to come. I hate to leave the children but I must go." She quietly slipped away at noon on December the nineteenth, 1937. The waters of the river must not have been chilly and she must not have been afraid, for she passed over without a quiver of a muscle. By some means she had knowledge that she was going and she was so happy as the end approached. Many, many a time have I been in the sick room of God's saints and heard them speak of death as being certain and near. God has a way of telling His children that He is going to call them home. While talking to one good man he said to me: "Pastor, I am going to die this afternoon just at sundown." He must have known that he was going then for just as the sun was disappearing behind the distant hill, his soul winged its way to its everlasting home. While earth is receding and heaven is opening we can see the Saviour's smile and we can hear Him calling for us to come home.

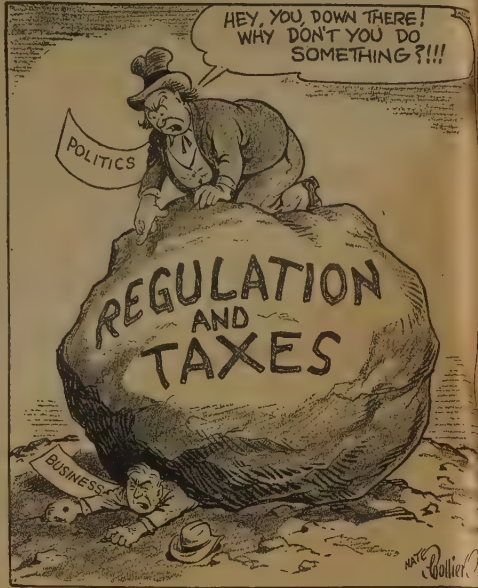

I stood beside the casket of the sweetest little mother that ever blessed a human life. To me she was just sleeping. The body was quiet and a calm had settled down over and about her expression. Brothers and sisters were weeping, but there were no feelings of tears in my heart. To be sure I loved my mother and I shall miss her, but to me her going was not a time of grief. A calm filled my soul as I looked into the face of the one who had done all for me. I knew what she had suffered and I knew how she was at rest. She had been one of God's faithful workmen in his vineyard, and had toiled and sacrificed, and now she had crowned her life, and every task her labors were over. Four score years had been well done. It was no time to weep. It was the day of victory. It was her crowning day. No mother, I shall not weep for you, but I shall try hard to carry on. Blessings be sent for people to weep over a well spent life. No time to weep when the victory is won.

The minister conducting the funeral service of my mother made use of an expression that we appreciated very much. It was this: "It is needless for me to eulogize this good woman. The fine elements of her character are expressed in the lives of her sons and daughters." Our mother did not train us up in the ways of the world, but she trained us in the way we should go. So many of us doubt the statement that if parents train their children in the way they should go that when they are old they will not depart from it, but that is as true as the Bible. When a child is trained not in the way that he wants to go, not in the way sometimes that the parents want him to go, but in the way that he SHOULD go, then when he is old he will not depart therefrom. The best training influence in any home is that of a Godly example. Children know how to rise up and call their parents blessed when they are the recipients of a noble character, and when they express this noble character in living. Children, are you eulogizing your parents today by the way you are living?

As we drove by the cemetery on our way home I looked over the fence to see the resting place of the one who had been left there a short time before. A wonderful change had taken place. Now I could see nothing but flowers. The deep gash in the earth had been filled in and the red clay was now covered over. Mother was sleeping under a blanket of flowers and that picture of beauty will linger with me forever. It is so cruel for us to hold in our minds the horrors of death and the grave. Not only should we hold our loved ones in our memories as resting under a blanket of flowers, but we should ever cherish their memory as a being of beauty and love. How sweet and sacred are the memories of our sainted dead. In our minds they should ever rest under a blanket of flowers.

The whippoorwill was calling over the hill and darkness was gathering where mother and I stood. With trembling voice I said to her: "Mother, I hesitate to tell you, but God has called me into the ministry and I must prepare myself for my life work." When mother understood what I had said she started to crying as if her heart would break. I was only a lad and I did not understand. After a bit mother dried her tears and said: "Son, for fourteen years I have been listening for you to say that. When you were a babe of three months old I had watched you suffer all that a mother's heart could stand, and I placed you on the bed and prayed and said, 'Lord, I can give this baby up if you will take him out of his suffering' and just then I heard a voice saying to me, 'He must not die. He shall be my minister and shall preach my gospel and many souls will be saved through him' and now I have been waiting these years to hear you say that you were going into the ministry." Then I understood why my mother wept. She did not shed tears of sorrow but tears of joy. There are times when our mothers stand before us in the glory of the Divine. Any child is doubly blessed who has a Christian mother.

Burns Advocates More H Pigs For Market

Clanton, Ala.—“On the basis of present and prospective prices of hogs and corn, the returns from feeding hogs this winter will be considerably greater than from selling for cash,” writes F.W. Burns, livestock specialist of the Alabama

Extension Service, to all 4-H club agents in the state. In urging that more boys enter the market hog project, Mr. Burns suggests:

- (1) Secure well-bred, thrifty, pigs weighing from 75 to 100 pounds so that these pigs can be marketed in March or April.
- (2) Six bushels of corn and 50 pounds of supplement (composed of equal parts of cottonseed meal and tankage) will be required for 100 pounds of gain.
- (3) If possible, these pigs should be on a field of oats, rye or crimson clover as this increases the rate and reduces the cost of gain. If this is not possible, feed the pigs some green feed or keep bright, green legume hay before them in racks.
- (4) Keep a mineral mixture of equal parts by weight of charcoal, slacked lime and salt before the pigs at all times. Also be sure and provide shelter and plenty of fresh water.
- (5) A self-feeder containing shelled corn in one compartment and supplement in the other is the easiest method of feeding. If this is not possible, feed all the ear corn the pigs will clean up twice daily and from one fourth to one half pound of supplement per pig daily.
- (6) Keep feed records.

“COTTON SOUTH FACED WITH ECONOMIC DISASTER”

“I agree with State Commissioner of Agriculture Robert J. Goode that the Cotton South is faced with economic disaster,”

Says J. THOS. HEFLIN

“Savage and Outrageous Discrimination”

In a release to the press of an editorial to appear in Alabama Farmers Exchange Bulletin for Dec. 31, Commissioner Goode sounds the most important warning to Alabama farmers sounded in a generation. The farm bills which passed the Senate and House and are now in conference prohibit Alabama farms from turning lands, taken out or forced out of cotton, into production of food, feed and forage crops.

“I pledge my vote and my life,” says J. Thos. Heflin, “that the farms of Alabama shall not be burdened with any such savage and outrageous discrimination.

“As much as I would regret to differ with the Administration I would fight to the death any such measure. I know I would have with me the same vast majority of the Senators and Congressmen from Alabama and the Cotton South who opposed Mr. Lister Hill’s vote to enslave Southern labor and industry with the iniquitous Wage-Hour Bill. I will accept no measure the principle of which I know is wrong and unjust.

“I oppose now and I will forever oppose federal legislation that will make some agent or bureau master of the lives of the working people of Alabama. I oppose now and I will forever oppose any measure that would prevent Alabama farms from supplying the consumers of Alabama with a shortage of 34% in our own meat consumption, 46% of our milk, 54% of our corn, 90% of our oats, 57% of our eggs and 67% of our hay. I oppose the principle of such legislation. When Alabama returns me to the Senate I guarantee the battle of the Century before any such Conqueror’s terms are imposed upon the Cotton South.

“I pledge you not only a vote but a fight to the death. No man in Alabama can doubt my ability to make opposition effective on the floor of the Senate or doubt my knowledge of cotton conditions. NOW, when the crisis is upon you. I am ready for the service. I enlist for the war.”

JESSE FRANK FOSHEE

With the Alabama Crimson Tide on its fifth conquest of the Golden West at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., is Jesse Frank Foshee, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Foshee, of Clanton.

Jesse is a guard, and an understudy of Captain Leroy Monsky, All-American. He is expected to fill Monsky’s shoes next year.

He has had a good season, and will most likely see service in the big game Saturday at Rose Bowl.

Jesse Frank is a graduate of the Chilton County High School where he was taught the fundamentals of football by Mr. Horton Walker, who was at that time coaching the high school team.

New Cases Of Syphilis Show Up Over County

Thirty-five new cases of syphilis had occurred in Chilton County during the year 1937 to date, it was revealed today from the records of the County Health Department. Of these there were 19 among the white population and 16 among the colored population. “More widespread interest in syphilis as a health problem is being shown at the present,” stated Dr. S. D. Sturkie, County Health Officer. “Indeed, we all may be thankful that this dread enemy has been brought out into the open where it can be dealt with effectively. Patients who suffer from syphilis today need no longer conceal themselves because of the false stigma of disgrace which in the past has been attached to this disease.”

“Once regarded incurable, the syphilitic patient today if treatment is begun early and properly maintained can in 85 per cent of cases attain a permanent cure. Diagnosis can be made in the early stages of the disease by the darkfield method. Later, a blood test known as the Wasserman test, will reveal the disease. Many experts believe that everyone should have such a test once a year. Certainly all people contemplating marriage should receive this examination.”

“The ultimate control of the disease depends on the treatment of every known case and the finding of hid-

Sawmill Operators Get Behind Lister Hill

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 28.—An outstanding development of the senatorial campaign in Alabama this week was the definite swing of sawmill operators, their employees and friends, to the support of the candidacy of Lister Hill. The defection of the sawmill operators from the Anti-Roosevelt ranks was notable since much of the previous opposition to the National Democratic Administration and Lister Hill in Alabama had come from this source.

Reason for the change, according to authoritative sources and observers was the new Housing Bill sponsored by the Democratic Administration in Washington, which is represented and supported by the candidacy of Lister Hill in Alabama, which will probably result in the construction of 750,000 new homes each year over a period of three years in the United States. Such a construction program will give new life to the lumber and other building materials industries and result in a large increase in employment and profits. Advice reaching Montgomery are that it is now generally conceded that Hill will get the support of a majority of sawmill operators because they are in accord with the great objectives of the National Democratic Administration relative to the construction program under the Housing Act.

The senatorial campaign continued to be enlivened by the rallying to Hill of thousands of veterans and their families because of Lister Hill’s unwavering support of the Democratic Party and its Platform and particularly because of former Senator Heflin’s slur at America’s war dead in several of Mr. Heflin’s speeches.

A GOOD LAXATIVE

That’s What I Think

Saul M. Goldstein

As the New Year approaches, it is the custom for newspapers and newspaper contributors to review the passing year and sum up the events and accomplishments thereof. Your dailies and your weeklies are and will be full of it; your magazines, especially those which sum up the news events, will echo it in each passing paragraph; and your radio will blast it out with each succeeding program. Need I therefore repeat it?

On the other hand, it is not customary to pass up the anniversary of a new year without some comment; and that is one custom I intend to observe.

1938 lies ahead of us. None of us can predict what strange things shall befall us, what natural and man-made phenomena come to pass, or what we shall do to each other. But while we cannot predict the future, we can so guide our actions in it that we can to some small extent control our own destinies in it.

We can look upon civil war over political philosophy in Spain, and we can say to ourselves: “Let us limit our political disagreement to the written and spoken word; to the fair and open-minded debate; let us not so stir ourselves in anger that we dare to lay hands on our fellow man.” We can look upon dictatorships in Russia, Germany and Italy, and we can say to ourselves: “Let us so influence those who guide our national destinies that we may be free from war and its horrors.”

We can look upon increasing unemployment due to the recent recession of business and say to ourselves: “Our unemployment compensation insurance will take care in part of this, but we must bend our efforts to turning the wheels of industry again, that our fellowmen may work, and receive an honest day’s pay for an honest day’s work.”

We can look upon decreasing prices for agricultural products, and we can say to ourselves: “Let us so agree to control the produce of our land that while no one shall go hungry and no one shall go naked, the market shall not be glutted with so much goods that the farmer receive not a price for his crop in accordance with what he must spend for a living.”

We can look upon the poor and the needy who are close at hand, and we can say to ourselves: “Let us give to our brother who is in need, for in this land of plenty no man should go hungry for food and naked for clothing.”

Let us not wait until December 31, 1938, to add up what we have done during 1938 and comment upon it. Our view is ahead, not behind; Let us make our pathway now and know today what we will do in 1938—and then do it!

At least, that’s what I think.

The farm price of eggs lacked about one to five cents per dozen going as high as they did a year ago. As a result it is expected that the decrease in farm price of eggs from now until spring will be less than it was last year when the prices went down nearly fifteen cents a dozen from November to May.

He's An Industrial Worker!

YOU would naturally think of the man operating the tractor as a farmer. And he is a farmer, but he's also an increasingly important figure in the industrial world, not only as a consumer but as a producer. He's engaged in hoeing up a field of soy beans which later, after passing through various factory processes, you'll be using in the form of paint and varnish, soap, linoleum and scores of other products. Consumers Information points out that 91 million pounds of soy bean oil, a comparatively new crop for American farmers, was produced in one recent year. Of this amount, 2½ million pounds went into the soap kettles, 5 million into linoleum and 13 million into paint and varnish.

This brand new market for American farmers, who are now growing a large number of industrial as well as food products, has been developed, like many others, through the vast research programs undertaken by American industry, whose laboratories have added untold millions to the national wealth and also thousands of jobs for American workers.

LETTER FROM A HEFLIN SUPPORTER

Clanton, Ala., December 28, 1937. To the Voters of Chilton County and to every American Citizen in the State of Alabama:

We are approaching the most important election we have had in the past 40 years, which is to be held on next Tuesday, January 4th, when we will elect a Senator from Alabama to go directly to Washington by appointment from the Governor.

It behooves every voter, regardless of past party affiliations, to lay down his or her work on Tuesday and go to the polls and vote.

There is one bill now pending before the national law-makers, known as the Wages-Hours Bill, which if passed and placed on the statute books will prove ruinous to the South. Our farmers will be faced with high priced labor; fertilizer will cost them four or five dollars per ton more; all farming implements will be much higher in price.

Also, let us see what Mr. Hefflin says about the bill. He brands it as the most ruinous piece of legislation ever introduced in Washington, and says that he will do everything in his power to keep this bill from becoming law. And we can depend on Mr. Hefflin doing what he tells us he will do. He has been tried before; he has had the experience of a Senator; and best of all—he is the farmer's friend. He is alert to their needs at all times, and if elected again as their senator, will look after their interests at all times. Mr. Hefflin knows the problems of the farmer of the South and he knows what to do in the United States Senate for their interests. We can depend on Tom Hefflin.

Therefore, let me appeal to you to let nothing keep you from going to the polls next Tuesday and voting for the man whom you know to be your friend and who will again fight your battles in the Senate of the United States—J. Thomas Hefflin.

Yours for a square deal for the farmers and common people of Alabama.—A Hefflin Supporter.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thompson and son, James, spent the Christmas holidays in Dadeville with relatives.

Mr. W. M. Parrish is spending this week in South Alabama fishing.

Mrs. Clara Self of Birmingham visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Peterson during Christmas.

Mrs. Cecil Ellison spent Saturday with Miss Mable Johnson.

Mr. M. J. Soberg spent the holidays in Birmingham with his son, Arnold. Friends of Mrs. N. Johnson will be glad to know that she is improving after a serious illness of several days.

WAYS TO INCREASE MILK PRODUCTION ARE OUTLINED

Auburn, Ala.—Alabama farmers and dairymen can double the average production of their cows and increase two or three times their returns above feed cost, believes F. W. Burns, livestock specialist of the Alabama Extension Service.

This can be done by feeding dairy cows "A liberal roughage ration consisting of luxuriant grazing, high quality silage, good quality hay and a concentrate ration, and by culling from the herds all unworthy cows," he says.

He also believes that further increases in production and greater profits would result by the use of production bred bulls being used instead of grade and scrub purebred bulls, by the growing out of all good heifer calves, and by the herd being comfortably housed during the winter.

"Try supplementing your feed with 100 pounds of steamed bone meal, 50 pounds of finely ground limestone, and 50 pounds of salt," he advises all dairymen in the State. "Two pounds of this mixture should be added to every 100 pounds of concentrate."

"A large proportion of cows and heifers should be bred during December and January for fall freshening," he says. "There is always a greater demand for fluid milk during the winter months and it is expensive to try and supply this demand by heavy grain feeding of cows that are practically dry. If interested in increasing milk next winter, plan now to have cows freshen in September and October. If interested in having a higher producing herd four years from now, you had better breed your cows to a production bred bull."

Miss Mary Courtney Jones is home for the holidays from Webster College at St. Louis, where she is a sophomore.

Miss Mary Louise Hyde and Miss Marion Ware, classmates of Miss Mary Courtney Jones at Webster College St. Louis, are the attractive guests of the latter during the holidays.

Both Miss Hyde and Miss Ware are making enviable records for themselves at Webster. The former is president of the sophomore class and the latter is an outstanding member of the student council.

MRS. MARY LITTLETON
Mrs. Mary Littleton, age 73, lifelong resident of Chilton County, died at her home Friday at 3 P.M., after a long illness. Funeral services were held Saturday at 3 P.M., at Union Grove Church near Jemison. Interment was in the adjoining cemetery with Spigener directing.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Tyus had as their guests Thursday of last week, their two daughters, Mrs. I. D. Kimbrough and son of Chattanooga, Mrs. L. V. Tanner and son, Ben Tyus, and daughter of Birmingham.

MRS. JOSEPHINE TRAYWICK

This community was greatly saddened on last Saturday morning by the death of Mrs. J. W. Traywick. She had been sick in bed about two weeks and will be greatly missed by all her friends and relatives that will miss her loss, although we realize that loss is Heaven's gain. Mrs. Traywick gave her heart to Jesus at a very early age and was loyal to her church the remainder of her life. She was a member of the Missionary Baptist Church. At the time of her death she was 91 years old.

Surviving her are her husband, ten children. Of her children, the oldest, Lee Moore and Mrs. Hulet Lee, are at home are Dewey, Delene and Willodene, two boys, and Theodore and Preston, two girls, of Clanton and Odell of Smoky Mountain, North Carolina. Of her brothers, sisters that survive her are Alex Hester and Mrs. Tom Deramus, of the community, Mrs. Tom Hines of Lumpka and Mrs. Will Coggins of Spigener. Mrs. Will Coggins is preaching a very impressive sermon of condolence to the loved ones that left behind. She was laid to rest in Pleasant Hill Cemetery.

WELL KNOWN CITIZEN DIED

WEDNESDAY OF LAST WEEK
One of the county's well known citizens, Byrd G. Jones, age 67, died early last Thursday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Clarence Sharp, Birmingham. The body was taken to Clanton and prepared for burial by Martin & Sons.

Funeral services were held at Clanton Methodist Church, with Rev. J. M. Truett, conducting the service. The body was taken to the cemetery, east of Clanton, with Martin & Sons directing.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Clarence Shaw of Birmingham and Mrs. Sara J. Hadder, of Montgomery. One daughter-in-law, Mrs. Thomas Jones, Montgomery. Pallbearers were C. B. Co. O. Mullins, J. E. Gowan, O. T. Shaw, John Pearson and H. S. Shaw.

Ralph Johnston, popular clerk at Upchurch Drug Co., is confined at home here due to illness.

Mrs. Hugh Jones and Miss Mary Courtney Jones Entertain

Mrs. Hugh Jones and Miss Mary Courtney Jones entertained at a lovely party on Monday evening when they opened their home to their guests, Miss Mary Louise and Miss Marion Ware of St. Louis, Mo.

Reception rooms were made unusually beautiful with decorations of holiday adornment.

A buffet table in the dining room was covered with a rare lace. In the center was a silver bowl massed with holly yule berries in artistic arrangement. Silver candle holders held tapers and lighting the table and room were many burning candles.

Among the table's appointments was a silver tea service at which Miss Anna Hollis, Miss Celia Gerald and Miss Dixie Johnson presided. Miss Helen Moore, Miss Ruth Gowen and Mrs. Earl Gray received at door.

There were assembled all the college contingent of Clanton.

Christmas Day was an enjoyable day for relatives, neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. H.S. Sewell. A Christmas tree, hunting, fire works and a good dinner were some of the attractions. A very beautiful cake, a gift from relatives in Laurel, Miss., was the center of attraction at the dinner table. Relatives were: Mr. and Mrs. Odie Sewell and baby of Clanton; Mr. and Mrs. David Sewell and baby of Clanton, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Sewell and children of Bessemer; Mr. and Mrs. Silas Oden and children and Mrs. S.C. Sewell.

Others were: Mr. Raymond Oden of Isabella; Misses Stella and Marie Smith of Enterprise; Mr. and Mrs. Luther Patterson and sons, Roy and Melvin; Mr. and Mrs. Buck Shaw and children of Clanton and others who came after supper to enjoy radio programs and other amusements until a late hour.

The Christmas tree and program held at the church Friday night was real good, and we appreciate the good behavior more than words can express. Mr. Tom Fisher is improving although he is still confined to his bed. Mr. and Mrs. Chester Cofer and son of near Birmingham spent the past week end with relatives here. Friends of Miss Eula Sanders are glad to know she is very much improved and hopes to be home in the near future.

Mrs. Sims and Mrs. Oden spent last Thursday at Isabella school. Mr. and Mrs. H.W. Sewell and children of New Orleans, Louisiana, spent a week with relatives here recently.

The W.M.U. meeting at the home of Mrs. Watley was very good even if not many were present. We hope more will attend the meeting Saturday afternoon at the church. Mrs. Nix will be with us at this meeting so try to be there at 2:00 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Sanders and family spent Sunday with relatives at Billingsley. Miss Oleta Watley was the birthday dinner guest of Miss Gladys Oden last Sunday.

F.F.A. - F.H.A. Give Xmas Party Dec. 17

On December 17, the Jemison Chapters of F.F.A. and F.H.A. honored their parents with an unusual Christmas party.

After the impressive opening ceremony by the officers of the two clubs, the guests were welcomed by Clarence Smith. The club members then presented a Christmas program featuring Christmas carols and stories.

At the request of C.W. Wells, president of Jemison F.F.A., guests were recognized by Mr. Denson, director of Agriculture at Jemison. Guests included the mothers and fathers of club members, Jemison school faculty, Mr. and Mrs. J. Sorrell, Supt. Luther E. Little, Mr. George Sargent, Assistant Supervisor of Agriculture for Alabama and Mr. H.F. Gibson, Subject Matter Specialist for Auburn.

In an interesting sequence of talks the invaluable work of vocational training was discussed. Katherine Green with the topic "What Vocational Home Economics Means To Me," and Arnold White with "What Vocational Agriculture Means To Me," impressed everyone with the tremendous value of vocational education in development of character, personality, home-making ability and efficient management. Mr. Peterson, Jemison High School principal, was asked to tell something of the importance of vocational education to the school; Supt. Little, the importance of vocational education to the county.

For the conclusion of the program students and parents joined in a series of laugh-provoking games. Plates were served by the girls of the F.H.A.

THORSBY JR. HIGH SCHOOL DEFEATS CALERA BY 38-18

On Tuesday night, December 21, the Thorsby Jr. High Quint mowed down the Calera Juniors by the count of 38-18. The game opened up with both teams breaking swiftly, but the Thorsby boys cut loose with a barrage of uncanny shooting and led the visitors at the end of the first quarter by the score of 19-0. The game developed into a rather drab affair from here on. The half closed with Thorsby leading 27-3.

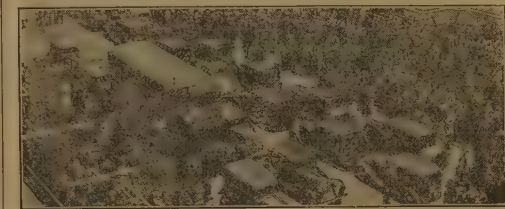

The second half opened with many substitutes being inserted into the Thorsby line-up. From this point in the game the Calera boys began to crack through the defense and managed to net 10 points while the locals were looping 7. The count ending at the third quarter, 34-13. The last 5 minutes of the final quarter the Thorsby youngsters confined their play to passing, only netting 3 additional points while their opponents registered 5. Hays for Thorsby found the hoop for 20 points. Kincaid and Deason gave a fine display of defensive play. Collins, Littleton confined their best playing to a fine exhibition of passwork. Blankenship starred for Calera, getting 10 points. Comer starred as guard.

World's Busiest Street?

JUST LOOK at that traffic roaring by! Yes, sir, that's New York's famous Fifth Avenue, looking toward 42nd Street. And the lady in the stylish white shirtwaist and the snappy little straw skimmer had better be careful when she gets to the corner because you know how those horseless carriage drivers swing around the turns. With the national automobile show approaching, Consumers Information dug out this picture, taken in 1907, to show what a difference 30 years can make. The picture below shows Fifth Avenue as it is today. Advertising which created the demand, and research which perfected the product, are credited with changing the picture from that of 1907, when only a few thousand cars were on the country's roads, to that of today, with almost 30,000,000. The few small manufacturers of 30 years ago advertised to sell their primitive cars, which cost around $3,000 for a "medium-priced" model. They created a bigger demand than they could fill, and so bigger factories, increased employment, and constantly better automobiles resulted. And today we can buy an infinitely superior car for about one-fifth of the price, while half a million men are directly employed in the industry, compared to a few thousand at the time this picture was taken.

ELECTION

same zeal and same devotion that I have sought to serve the people of my Congressional District."

While Mr. Hill reviewed his own record of service he also reviewed Mr. Hefflin's record. Mr. Hill told how Mr. Hefflin opposed the McNary-Haugen Farm Relief Bill in 1926 and took his side with the grain manipulators and cotton gamblers."

Mr. Hill told how Mr. Hefflin had voted against progressive legislation of benefit to American agriculture and how the former senator's vote lost the resolution that would have limited the iniquitous Smoot-Hawley tariff law to the benefit of American Agriculture. "When he passed that bill by his vote, when he fastened that iniquitous Smoot-Hawley tariff law upon you and the people of Alabama, he put a tax of over one billion dollars a year upon the backs of the taxpayers of America."

While Mr. Hefflin avoided his record and made promises Mr. Hill said: "Who shall your Senator be? That is a question you must answer. Not only for yourself, but for Alabama and your children and your children's children. Who, by his past record, seems most likely to be able to go to Washington and to command the influence and do the work, to fight and win your battles for you?"

With election day next Tuesday, more and more interest was being shown in the race. Keen political observers were almost unanimous in their predictions that Congressman Hill would win over Ex-Senator Hefflin by a vote of landslide proportions.

Hughes-Turner Wedding Solemnized 25th

A marriage of much interest to their many friends everywhere was that of Miss Delphine Turner of Troy to Ralph Hughes of Clanton and Nashville, Tennessee, which was solemnized on Christmas Day at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Turner in Troy, with the Rev. J. O. Colley of that city performing the ceremony in the presence of a few friends and relatives.

Miss Turner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Turner of Troy and is one of that city's most popular young ladies.

Mr. Hughes is the son of Mrs. C. D. Hughes of Clanton and the late C. D. Hughes, former postmaster at Verbena. He is at present attending the Gup-ton-Jones School of Embalming in Nashville, Tennessee, where he will complete his course in this work in early March. He has many friends in Clanton and elsewhere.

The many friends of this popular young couple join the News in extending congratulations.

UNEMPLOYMENT IS STILL LOSING OVER ALABAMA

Places Still Being Found To Cut Down Number Of Unemployed

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 22.—An urgent appeal to all unemployed workers who intend to apply for unemployment benefits after January 1, 1934, to immediately register for work with Alabama State Employment Service was issued today by J. G. Duncan, Jr., director.

Mr. Duncan pointed out that a registration by an unemployed worker before the beginning of the new year will mean much less delay in the handling of claims in the Employment Office after January 1, because the information about the worker which must be obtained in every case will already be in possession of the Employment Service.

At the time the appeal to unemployed workers was issued by Director Duncan, an order went to all managers and interviewers in charge of Employment offices to lengthen the office hours so that many persons as possible may be served each day. Beginning December 20, Employment offices in Alabama, under Mr. Duncan's order, will open at 8 A. M. and will remain open until 5 P. M. Unemployed persons will be registered from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M., and all persons who are in the offices at 5 P. M. will be interviewed before the day's business will be ended. Claims deputies of the Unemployment Compensation Commission who will be assigned to all offices of the Employment Service will observe the office hours fixed by the director.

Mr. Duncan pointed out that his appeal for immediate registration for work is directed only to those wage-earners who are now totally unemployed or who will be totally unemployed before the new year begins. "It is to the advantage of the unemployed worker to have registered with the Alabama State Employment Service before January 1, 1934, if he intends to make application for unemployment benefits," said Director Duncan. "Reports received by the Employment Service and the Unemployment Compensation Commission indicate that a large number will make application for benefits after January 1. Each claimant must register for work with the Employment Service before his request for benefits can be considered by the Unemployment Compensation Commission and before his waiting period, required in every case, can begin."

"If those who are now unemployed and who intend to apply for benefits will register for work with the Employment Service before January 1, there need be no great delay in the Employment offices when they appear to re-register and file applications for benefits. If a registration for work is on file it will take only a few minutes to re-register an applicant and prepare his request for benefits. If all persons now unemployed who will make application for benefits wait until the beginning of the new year it will be out of the question to handle all applications the first day. However, if they have already registered for work, the time for making out the applications for benefits and re-registration for work will be cut approximately in half."

"Every employer in Alabama who is subject to the Unemployment Compensation Act is requested to notify all employees and leaving his service between now and January 1, to register for work with the Alabama State Employment Service immediately. If their registrations for work are on file it will be an easy matter to handle claims for benefits and it will be further assurance that eligible persons will begin the collection of benefits as soon as the required waiting period has expired."

Newspapers Hit By Hike In Prices On Paper; Drastic Increases In Prices Force Rates Up

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Increase in price of newspaper paper on January 1, 1934, of 17.5 per cent to publishers generally and 20 per cent to publishers in Texas, is the largest single advance in the history of daily newspaper publishing, and many Southern daily newspapers are being forced to take steps to bring about economies, and increase both advertising and subscription rates, according to information gathered by the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association maintaining headquarters office here.

The New York base price of newspaper is going up from $42.50 per ton to $50 per ton ($45.30 to $54.30 in Texas), and publishers in the South are paying more because of transportation charges being included in the delivered price on shipments from Canada and Northern United States.

In 24 months there has been an increase of 25 per cent because the base New York price went up from $40 per ton to $41 per ton on Jan. 1, 1936, with another increase of $1.50 per ton on Jan. 1, 1937.

"The price has been raised without consideration of the law of supply and demand and it seems to me that publishers are going to have to reduce consumption to bring about reasonable prices," said Cranston Williams, secretary-manager of the association.

Increases in wages in various departments, higher transportation costs for circulation distribution and higher taxes, said Mr. Williams, also are complicating the publishing business.

EMPLOYEES ADVISED TO SAFEGUARD THEIR SOCIAL SECURITY ACCOUNTS

In an effort to insure wage-earners, in this section, against the loss of any benefits which might accrue to their credit, Martin C. Folmar, manager of the Birmingham Field Office of the Social Security Board, has issued the following suggestions for the guidance of employees:

(1) Keep the name and address of each employer for whom you work, as well as the record of your own wage-earnings, in every job you hold.

(2) Make your account number known to each and every employer for whom you have worked since the last day of December, 1936. The law requires each employer to report your wages so that you may get the full amount of benefits due you. If your employer does not know your number he cannot make a report that will assure a correct record of your wages. Protect yourself.

(3) Your Social Security Account number is your safeguard that your wages will be credited to you and not to someone else with a name like yours. This will mean dollars and cents to you and your family. The amount of your wages will determine the amount of benefits to be paid you. Whatever wages or salary you may earn in any job that comes under the old-age insurance law, after the last day of 1936 and before you reach the age of 65, (or die) should be credited to your Social Security Account. You are paying taxes, as is your employer. The Social Security Act offers you old-age protection. Make sure you get it. Have your Social Security Account number. Write down your number in the family Bible or write it on a slip of paper and file it away with other valuable papers.

(4) You should have only one Social Security Account number. If you lose your account card, ask your Social Security Board field office for a duplicate. Do not get a new number! If you have more than one number, keep the first one issued you, but send the others to the manager of your Social Security Board Field Office to be cancelled. Tell him you are returning the extra numbers, which were issued you by mistake. Also tell him the number which was first issued to you.

(5) If you have any questions, visit, telephone, or write Martin C. Folmar, manager of the Birmingham Field Office, Social Security Board, 621 Chamber of Commerce Building, Birmingham, Alabama.

Clanton Methodist Church

New Year's, 1934, and Just Thinking: How nice it was to be able to attend Sunday School and church services last Sunday morning and night.

How nice it is that we have Sunday Schools and church services for training, discussion and worship.

How nice it is to have a hard-working, God-fearing, and devout Sunday school superintendent and pastor.

How nice it is that they will offer us opportunities to work with them in the Master's Vineyard.

How nice it is to give them every cooperation of which we are capable.

How nice it will be for each of us to begin 1934 with a deeper and more sincere devotion to our Lord and Master and let our faith grow and work increase each step of the way through 1934, and

How nice it will be when all is said and done in 1934 that we can feel that we have done what we could.

VISIT IN JEMISON

Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Boss Martin of Phenix City and Miss Lucile Kelly of Tusculum, Ala., spent Christmas with Mr. Ocie Smith and family of Jemison. A pleasant holiday was enjoyed by all.

Mr. H. C. Martin is a former resident of Chilton County where he has many friends. He served as an officer of Clanton several years ago.

BETHSALEM

We had a fine crowd out at Sunday School Sunday, which we were proud of. The W. M. U. of the church is going to try and give the Y. W. A. a banquet New Year's night at the home of Mr. Len Green. Everybody is invited to attend. The plates will be sold for fifteen cents each or two for twenty-five cents. Children's plates will go to the Y. W. A. and church.

We have our church house almost completed now except our Sunday school rooms, which we hope to finish soon, so everybody come to our banquet and you are welcome to all of our services at all times. Let's try to do more for our Lord this new year than we have ever done, so pray for us at Bethsalem.

CHESTNUT GROVE

We are glad to state that the members of the community is very good at present.

Misses Clarice, Wilma Lucas and Gladys Woods spent Christmas with their parents Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Lucas.

Those being present were: Mrs. J. M. Jones and family of Phenix City, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Haywood, family of Ensley, Mr. and Mrs. Nabors of Baven, Mr. and Mrs. Nabors of North Birmingham, Mr. and Mrs. Max Nabors and family of Baven.

Misses Erva and Ester Lucas spent Sunday with T. L. Lucas' girls, Mr. T. W. Ratenbury, and family of Montevallo spent Christmas day with Mr. J. R. Hall and family.

Miss Frances Lucas spent Christmas day with Margaret Nabors.

Mr. Aaron Nabors was the guest of Miss Frances Lucas Christmas day.

Gustave Rehnel, farmer of Vicksburg, Wis., was fined $10 for cruelty because he did not milk his cows.
